Pari-mutual decision criticized

City Council's reluctance to support local option on pari-mutuel horse racing may jeopardize the activity coming to Virginia Beach.

This point was raised when

Councilmen declined to endorse a resolution supporting pari-mutuel wagering as providing "...great benefit to the City's economy and increase tourism...."

requesting the General Assembly "...to support pari-mutuel wagering on a local option basis at the 1973 session of the General Assembly."

Councilman Donald H. Rhodes introduced the resolution following a recent suggestion by State Senator A. Joseph A. Canada that such an endorsement by Council would greatly enhance changes for passing of legislation creating pari-mutuel wagering in Virginia, as well as Virginia Beach receiving greater consideration as a site for such activity.

Is discussing the resolution various Councilmen indicated their reluctance to endorse the proposal on grounds of possible adverse affects it might have on Virginia Beach. Rhodes reminded Council that the resolution "...would simply authorize local option if the site was awarded to Virginia Beach. It doesn't commit Council." He reiterated that the final decision on any pari-mutuel facility locating in Virginia Beach rest with residents in a public referendum on the question.

Councilman John A. Baum indicated he had discussed the matter with a number of citizens, said, "People are concerned over the possibility of crime generating from the track's operation."

Vice-Mayor F. Reid Ervin suggested a review of two studies on the merits of pari-mutuel wagering and its possible adverse affects within the State "...before committing ourselves." Ervin was referring to the "report of the Pari-mutuel Betting Study Commission", and the "Virginia State Crime Commission Report of the Organized Crime Detection Taskforce."

At this point Rhodes said, "You might as well kiss the track goodbye and plan on going to Williamsburg to watch the races—it could delay action on the resolution."

Councilman Charles W. Gardner renewed the question of public concern over adverse affects from the track's operation. He said, "People want to feel certain adequate controls will be in any legislation passed—to permit pari-mutuel wagering. Rhodes answered Gardner with, "I can't believe the General Assembly is going to pass this legislation without adequate controls. I think you're killing it by waiting on the resolution."

Pointing again to the benefits Virginia Beach would derive from the activity Rhodes said it would create "...a 100 day racing season, 50 days in the Spring and 50 days in the Fall, and double the tourist season in Virginia Beach. This is a 100 day season that we didn't derive money from the track's operation, but only from tourist-oriented activities."

Council voted to defer any action on the resolution until its next regularly scheduled meeting of January 8.

Major expansion for Hilltop North

The City Planning Commission will be requested during next Tuesday's meeting to approve the proposed construction of 29 additional business firms at Hilltop North Shopping Center.

The plan outlines proposed location of a Montgomery Ward store, two smaller department stores, and 25 small shops, with a connecting pedestrian mall.

The plan also indicates the complete shopping center would be enclosed within a surrounding roadway loop.

This would be accomplished by an extension of Laurel Lane at the back, construction of an access roadway along the Eastern Boundary, and use of the Laskin Road feeder lane along the front boundary. The plan locates the Eastern boundary of the shopping center about 250 feet from Winwood Drive, bordering the Linlier residential development.

The development plan shows all of the businesses being proposed. There has been no definite indication as to when they might be constructed.

Optimism enters water negotiations

City Manager Roger M. Scott has voiced optimism towards approaching a settlement on a new water contract between Virginia Beach and Norfolk. Scott gave this indication during this week's informal City Council session.

Scott said he met with Norfolk City Manager Robert House on Thursday, December 21, to discuss the merits of Virginia Beach's last proposal to settle water contract disputes. He said five or six changes to the proposal were recommended, and that these are now being reviewed. Scott added, "I don't see any problem with these. I get the feeling our approach is sound and acceptable. I believe we could hear something by January 15th."

When questioned on any specific point of concern in his discussion with House, Scott replied, "Norfolk talked about favoring a flat (water) rate as opposed to a cost-plus factor, but this was not a commitment."

The statement prompted Councilman Donald H. Rhodes to say, "Before we sign a rate figure contract I request a closed Council session on additional information I have received on Norfolk's water production cost."

Churchshows Graham film

The latest Billy Graham film, "Lost Generation," will be shown at Thalia Lynn Baptist Church, 4392 Virginia Beach Blvd. on Sunday, January 7, at 7:30 p.m.

The film features special appearances by Art Linkletter and Dagny Lee Webb.

Linkletter, whose daughter died as the result of drug use, discusses drug usage in America and points to what is being done voluntarily by many teenagers to combat the problem.

Webb states his views on the role of the police officer and his relationship to the laws of our society.

"Lost Generation" is a color documentary which takes a close look at the attitudes and morals of the nation.

Location filming was done in Alaska, the Southern states, on farms and small towns of mid-America and in the Haight-Ashbury district of San Francisco.

The public is invited to view the film. There is no admission charge.

Special anniversary salute

The new City of Virginia Beach came into being January 1, 1963, with the voter-approved merger of Princess Anne

County and Virginia Beach. The Sun's special 10th anniversary salute appears in today's issue, starting on page 13.

Taxicab increase possible

Beach and Coastal Cab Companies have received a first reading approval from City Council on requested minimum rate increases.

Should the request receive final approval these companies could increase the minimum flat taxi rate from 50 cents to 60 cents, and compute additional charges on a distance of one-fifth mile as opposed to the present one-fourth mile.

In discussing the request during this week's informal Council session the move was viewed as bringing "...Virginia Beach fares into parity with rates presently in effect in Norfolk."

While the rate increase was not opposed by the City, it was suggested further amendments to the taxicab code be considered. These would "require submittal of appropriate financial data, such as copy of audit, etc. so that the City's administrative staff will be better able to evaluate future requests for rate increases."

To support this requirement of "appropriate financial data" City Manager Roger M. Scott pointed out that cab companies currently submit on a small amount of information, including minor details on the financial status of their operations when requesting rate increases.

Destroyer plays Santa

USS DUPONT, a Norfolk based U.S. Navy destroyer, played Santa Claus for numerous American diplomatic service personnel living in Tunisia.

Transporting approximately one and one-half tons of hard to get items, DUPONT arrived December 13 at Tunis, the first port of call on her present Mediterranean deployment.

This Christmas package included everything from four Volkswagen tires and a trunk tied to a harbell set. There were many toys to provide good cheer under the Christmas tree.

Crackdown at Hilltop

Motorists complaining about traffic tickets

Motorists in the city are beginning to feel the effects of the traffic division's new selective-enforcement program, started Dec. 1 by the city police.

Both the police department and the Sun have received numerous complaints from motorists who have been issued tickets, especially in the Hilltop North Shopping Center area of Laskin Road.

According to Sgt. K. A. Belangia of the traffic division, the police are currently concentrating on high accident areas of the city. Each month, a different area of the city will be chosen for stronger traffic law enforcement.

Many drivers have confessed about the fact covering feeder traffic on both the north and south feeder roads of Laskin Road near Hilltop and First Colonial Road.

Sgt. Belangia said that some motorists are ignoring "no left turn" signs on the north feeder road to turn onto Laskin Road at Hilltop. Other motorists have been issued tickets for failing to observe signal lights covering feeder traffic on the feeder roads.

One motorist who called the Sun said that he and six other drivers were ticketed for the same offense at one time. Failing to observe the signal light at an intersection of Laskin Road and a feeder road.

The motorist said that he and the other drivers had proceeded on the assumption that the signal light for traffic on Laskin Road was the same light he should observe. The motorist also said that a city policeman told him that the law governing the feeder road is a state law.

An editorial

The next decade

Ten years. A short time. But time enough to mold the life of a child. And time enough to set patterns in a new and suddenly growing city, patterns that will mold the life of a city. For generations, perhaps centuries, to come.

This is where Virginia Beach now stands as it hits its first decade mark as a city that grew out of the merger of Old Princess Anne County and the "young" and vivacious resort of Virginia Beach.

The blending of the old and traditional and very much rural with the relatively new (the resort only became a first class city 21 years ago) and the commercial and seasonal (not in produce crops but in tourist population) has been challenging.

In each there was charm. And beauty. The vast green and cultivated acreages of the County. The peace and contentment, the hard-working, slow-paced way of life. The white frame and shingled motels and cottages that favored the company of those who sought refuge from the larger, more pressured cities.

The challenge in the blending of the two ways of life was to find the most compatible compromise and pursue it. The new city, the enlarged city the voters chose over annexation by Norfolk, was not to stand still. To stand still was to die, to wither from lack of political and financial nourishment.

Virginia Beach, ten years ago, had two assets. Its acreage, which Norfolk coveted for its own needed growth, and its bay and ocean beaches. The military installations, five in all - including the State-owned National Guard summer encampment at Camp Pendleton - were economic stabilizers, as they are today. But the future could not be built only on income from the military. Industry had to be developed for proper growth and financial security.

The leaders of the time were quite representative of the merged communities. They knew well the people they represented. And when they gathered into one large council - five from the resort, six from the county - they brought with them the diversified interests of these people. They sought political and community unity, for only in this way could the new city grow. Political and community unity was already an accepted way of life. Consolidation seemed relatively uninvolved.

But it wasn't. A giant was born. With no water system of its own, and very little provisions for sewage - two vital services previously taken for granted - the young city now realized that agriculture and tourism, at least on the accustomed scale, could not fully develop the city. Industry would be needed.

That industry was construction. Large developers arrived and they promised the golden opportunity. They would build entire communities to attract new people. They would employ local labor, purchase great supplies and pour much into a needed economy. This they did. And continue to do.

But with this growing population came demands for services. And the starry-eyed young city was not prepared to meet these demands. Single family homes increased, never lacking buyers. Apartments grew to accommodate more people on less acreage. Shopping centers mushroomed to take care of the commercial needs of the people, strangling out the small businessmen who had voted for merger in the belief they would reap the profits of growth.

Virginia Beach became a city of satellite communities. There was no unity. The water and sewage needs grew. Roads were expanded, and constructed, in a frantic attempt to accommodate the traffic. The green acreage in the County became more profitable for housing than agriculture. The quaint frame motels made way for the sleek modern buildings to attract a more sophisticated clientele.

What Virginia Beach has become in its first decade is not necessarily successful - nor progressive. It has experienced growth, not balance. The charm is gone; the beauty and tranquility more and more difficult to find; the pre-Revolutionary War buildings almost obliterated.

But all is not lost. What has happened thus far has simply been the results of "too much, too soon", a staggering responsibility placed on the shoulders of leaders not prepared to understand or cope with it. They did the best they could with what the background they had. The next decade will demand more...more planning, more coordination, more unity, more political differences consolidated for the betterment of the city's future.

Many mistakes have been made. But that is how a child learns. Without mistakes from which to learn and profit, he cannot develop. This is 1973. It is a new decade. In this new era, hopefully Virginia Beach will have learned and profited from past mistakes. And recognize that there has been right as well as wrong. There has been devotion and well intentions along with the self-seeking.

Hopefully, Virginia Beach now enters a decade of strong, cooperative leadership, a leadership that will put personal conflicts aside to see that this city finally grows into the beautiful, well-planned city it should be, as it is destined to be.

YESTERDAY AND TODAY—The old farmhouse, with its barn and its silo, facing a site cleared for construction, symbolizes the first decade in the life of the new City of Virginia Beach. The sign instructs workers to stop at the roadway. For how long?

Virginia Beach businesses: a decade of growth

Rose Hall Ocean Highway Association Hobby Industries

The home which is called Rose Hall is six miles west of Virginia Beach and ten miles east of Norfolk on Virginia Beach Blvd. (Highway 58). It sits on sixty-three acres which is all that remains of over two thousand acres.

The house itself is a transition from early American to early Georgian. We feel fortunate in finding much of the original charm intact. Some of the original heart of the brick work is in good condition. Of course in over more than two and one-half centuries there have been many changes. The gun-slots that were put in for defense have been filled. At one time the roof was raised one and one-half feet which changed the upstairs from a loft to rooms with ceilings seven to eight and one-half feet high. We feel that there had been a period of forty to fifty years between building the house and finishing it off.

Originally the front door opened into a large room. To the left of this room there was a room 17 and 1/4 x 18, evidently used as a parlor.

Back of the parlor was the stairwell and a small room. There were no windows in either end of the house. Under layers of plaster and beaver board we found the original heart of pine ceilings. Loose behind a partition was found a pre-Revolution five pound cannon ball.

In Civil War days the basement was used as a Union prison. During the Revolution this section was the center of strong Tory factions. The owner at that time was certainly not a Tory for he was John N. Walker, a son-in-law of Francis M. Land. Walker was a cousin of Col. Jacob Ellegood. It is remarkable that many old records can be found but it is most difficult to determine location and boundaries. The branches of the Lynnhaven River have completely changed in two hundred years when they were navigable to the largest ships of that day. It is more than likely that the property was on one of the land bounded on the west by "so-in-so's" Land and on the east by "John Doe's" land, so it is difficult to define boundaries.

This section was particularly hard hurt by the urge to move westward. It was found that in 1751 the county would pay twenty dollars nail allowance to anyone not burning their home, when they moved westward in order to take the homemade nails with them.

The whole idea of restoration has been to show a manor house of the Queen Anne period in Virginia, as the working farmers had of that day. These farmers eked their life from the soil although they had their slaves. Each plantation was a self-supporting village. They can be distinguished from the great plantation owners on the James who were truly wealthy men even by today's standards, and able to live like nobility.

It is hoped someday to be able to add the dependencies, out-buildings, and lovely gardens that our home had originally. Fortunately we have the remains of the original grape arbor and the original vines are still there. The arbor was restored for 1956 Garden Week.

The Ocean Highway Association was envisioned primarily by the combined efforts of two men. These two men, Captain L.H. Garrison of New Castle, Delaware and Charles F. Russell of Accomac, Virginia, first began working on the idea in the early spring of 1934.

The Association came about because of a newspaper ad run in a Miami paper by Mr. Russell. In that ad he described "Whispering Pines" and suggested that northbound motorists plan to drive back by way of Norfolk, across the ferry and up the Delmarva Peninsula, for a stop at Whispering Pines. The ad was so successful that over one hundred people showed up as guests.

The Ocean Highway Association was founded in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina on August 20, 1935. The original office was located in Wilmington, Delaware until 1964. When the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel opened, the Association decided to move to the world's largest resort city, Virginia Beach, where it is still located. From that story evolves the basic idea of the Ocean Highway Association. It is to develop, advertise and sell motorists using a north-south route and spread the word about advantages and attractions on the route. This means advertising to reach motorists before their travel plans are made.

Today the Association promotes travel along the entire east coast. At the present time two publications are printed annually. They are: the Motorists Guide and the Strip Map. Both of these publications are free to anyone requesting them. In these we try to give the traveler information on cities, towns, attractions, and accommodations along a route that stretches for one thousand miles.

The Ocean Highway is a 1000 mile route that begins in the region surrounding New York City and ends in Jacksonville, Florida. Branching south from U.S. 1 in the industrial area of New Jersey, the traveler has two Ocean Highway routes available. He may travel the New Jersey Turnpike across the Delaware Memorial Bridge into Delaware down U.S. 13 south, or he may follow the sea-wad route down the Garden State Parkway across the Cape May-Lewes Ferry to U.S. 13 and points south. At Virginia Beach after a trip across the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel, acclaimed as one of the modern wonders of the world, the route then changes from U.S. 13 to U.S. 17 to continue south, all the way to Florida through some of the most beautiful country one will ever see.

In many places the highway follows the same routes made by early colonists on this part of the Atlantic Coast. As the route winds south along the coast, it crosses swamps, tidal estuaries, inlets and bays. Due to the close proximity of the Gulf Stream, the highway is free of ice when roads further inland are impassable.

The countryside surrounding most of the Ocean Highway, in spite of modern agricultural, industrial, and tourist developments, lives much in the past. Many sections still cherish the speech and habits of their ancestors, and speak of long-ago happenings as though they occurred last year.

R.C. Hudson, a member of the Committee of 100 of Virginia Beach, was pleased to announce a very unique new industry is constructing a plant in Virginia Beach, known as Hobby Industries, Inc. This facility located at the corner of Southern Boulevard and Southgate Ave., will be the home office, and is the first plant of their long range program. The President of the new firm is Gary Stephenson.

An imaginative, new industry, equipped for the do-it-yourself buff is scheduled to open its doors early in 1973. Hobby Industries, Inc. will feature a five bay garage, fully equipped for the auto mechanic, a ceramics workshop for the ladies interested in making all those nice nacs for the home, a woodworking shop for the cabinet and furniture maker, plus a completely stocked sales room with the latest in craft supplies.

Experts will be on hand to give instruction, advice and impart their secrets and techniques to the novice. Shops will be furnished with tools and equipment necessary for the smallest to the largest of projects. The creative and constructive talents of the home repairman, crafts enthusiast, and do-it-yourselfer will have free reign in an environment designed to provide all that is needed to turn out a finished, professional quality project at a fraction of retail price, while providing the pride and satisfaction that accompanies self accomplishment.

President Gary Stephenson predicts a brisk trade in the shops and sales room of the new facility. Manufacturing services provided by Hobby Industries include beautifully finished bas relief, raised plaques, coffee cups, and other mementos for organizations and clubs. These manufacturing services will be continued and expanded.

Underwood Construction Willis Wayside

The Underwood Construction Company specialized in the nursing home field.

Jack Underwood, a Roanoke native, heads the company which has grown with the development of nursing homes.

Up until recent years, nursing homes, extended care facilities, and convalescent homes primarily existed in the form of old run-down dwellings, dingy, dirty, uncomfortable and unsafe. In recent years, due somewhat to the affluency of senior citizens and the help of the federal government, it has become possible for these older people to afford much more than could be provided in the past. Thus, the current nursing home boom got its start.

The company was formerly known as Underwood and Temple Construction Company. In conjunction with Harold S. Schofield, an Ohio-based architect licensed in 14 other states and advise from other knowledgeable sources such as the Health Department, Underwood set out to redesign a facility which compromised nothing in comfort for the resident and afforded a functional operational setup for the owners. At that time it was felt the facility was near perfect in detail.

Since this early start in 1963 the company has become aware of the ever-changing thinking of various authorities and is continually updating their basic facility until presently it is hardly recognizable with the early plan. (Continued on Page 8)

Ames and Webb

Ames and Webb, Inc. was incorporated under the Laws of the State of North Carolina in 1963, with headquarters in Raleigh, and is celebrating 40 years in business this year. The firm was founded by Mr. L.R. Ames, former Chief Engineer of the North Carolina Highway Department and Mr. S.C. Webb, an official of the Southern Paving Company.

The initial operation was in Raleigh, a division that was operated until 1970, with 4 ready mix plants in the Raleigh area, when it became a part of Gifford-Hill, Inc., a conglomerate headquartered in Dallas, Texas.

Originally the paving operations of the company included only concrete paving, but soon branched into asphalt paving as well doing jobs in Eastern North Carolina and branching into Virginia in 1937. During 1937 the headquarters of the paving operation moved to Norfolk and have been here until the present time.

The firm has done many highway and airport projects from the Washington, D.C. area to Atlanta, Georgia. Some of the earlier projects included airfield paving at Norfolk Naval Air Station, as well as Oceana-Creeds and Fentress. Earlier highway projects included widening and rebuilding the Virginia Beach Boulevard from Park Avenue in Norfolk to Pacific Avenue in Virginia Beach, several sections of Shore Drive, approach roads and paving in the 1st Elizabeth River Tunnel, approach roads and paving of Hampton Roads Tunnel.

Recent projects include removing and rebuilding a 10,000 runway and taxiway at the Atlanta, Georgia airport, a 20 mile section of Interstate 1-6 in Georgia, a 20 mile section of Interstate 1-6 in New Kent and James City Counties, Virginia.

Present company officials are John M. Bratten, president, Harold N. Webb, vice president, Robert L. Webb, vice president, Robert L. Bryant, Jr., secretary-treasurer and Garland M. Barlow, general superintendent.

The two Webb Vice Presidents are sons of one of the founders of the company. The company is headquartered at 3145 Virginia Beach Boulevard in Norfolk and employs an average of 250 people, contributing an annual payroll of $1,500,000 to the economy of Tidewater Virginia.

'JOHN WILLIS JR. FURNITURE AND CARPET' was the way the sign read. It was Norfolk, Virginia and 1929, when the Willis name became embedded in the community.

As a leading retailer of fine home furnishings, John Willis, Jr. strived to build his name, business by always believing that "Nothing must ever compromise quality, nothing must ever compromise right."

Fireside News

The Fireside News and Book Shop, in its new location at 3113 Pacific Avenue, has just completed twelve years of service to the readers of Virginia Beach.

Growing from a news stand on 31st Street, purchased by Warren and the late Lee Hamill, in 1960, the shop moved to its present larger location two years ago.

After many years in retail management with the Kresge Company Stores in several states, followed by active military service, Colonel Hamill, retired from the army in 1958. Intrigued with the area while vacationing, he decided that this was his 'new home'. He is known as 'The Colonel' to many.

Throughout the years particular attention has been given to expanding the book department, with the addition of hardback books, maintaining a complete assortment of the best sellers in both hardback and paperback titles. In addition, catalogues listing all books in print are available to assist you in ordering those not in stock. The children's book assortment is vast and varied. Fireside has increased its selection of magazines and newspapers, offering the widest selection of periodicals and daily newspapers in Virginia Beach. Newspapers of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond and Raleigh are available along with the Norfolk morning and evening paper and the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN.

You will also find a fine selection of greeting cards for every holiday and occasion and several name brand Christmas sample catalogues.

At Fireside, you'll find Virginia Beach's most complete selection of reading material. Browsers are welcome. People new to the Beach will find those working at Fireside Book Store are helpful in any capacity and will offer friendship and good books to interest even the people that don't like to read.

Virginia Pilot Association

Prior to 1866, the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay was dotted with small sailing vessels, owned and operated by pilots, awaiting the appearance of the mast of an incoming vessel on the horizon.

When a vessel was sighted, there was a merry scramble between the opposing pilots to see who would be first to reach the craft and secure the job of showing her the way to port. These pilots were noted for playing tricks on each other in attempting to outmaneuver their competition.

To further complicate matters, pilots from New England and other states began to assemble and pursue their calling in the Virginia Capes just after the Civil War. For self-protection, Hampton Roads pilots were instrumental in having a law passed to the effect that all pilots must operate under a license granted by The Board of Pilot Commissioners. Thus, it was to remedy existing conditions that the Virginia Pilot Association was born.

Since its formal beginnings in 1866, some changes have been made - the era of schooners has been replaced by diesel driven boats and Morse Code has given way to marine radio - however, the need for qualified pilots to bring vessels in and out of Hampton Roads has not changed.

That the pilotage system is a necessity for commerce of the port has been proven beyond a doubt. The Pilot, in bringing in a vessel, practically keeps her from running aground and knocking other commerce. The Pilots also prove a great help to the health of the Ports of Hampton Roads by cooperating with the quarantine authorities and to the Customs Officials, by seeing that the vessels remain strictly within the confines of the Customs Laws while under their jurisdiction.

They also help in keeping the buoyage of the channels in good condition, as they report to the United States Coast Guard any huys or other aids to navigation which they find missing or out of place during their trips into and out of port.

A complement of Pilots is kept on the outside or station boat, currently the "Hampton Roads", sufficient for the needs of the incoming vessels. As a rule, this complement is served by Pilots taken off outgoing vessels, or when necessary, taken by automobile to Cape Henry where they are met by a small surf boat from the station boat.

Robert Pace

The internationally famous Robert Pace piano course was offered for the first time in Virginia in December.

Based on a system of small and large group instruction, this course was developed by Dr. Robert Pace of Columbia University, New York, and has aroused such comment from musicians and educators both in the United States and abroad. The course has been the subject of many magazine articles - among them PARADE magazine for October 22, 1972. The course is so highly structured and sophisticated that persons wishing to teach it must first study at Columbia University with Dr. Pace, and then be certified by the National Piano Foundation, sponsors of the course.

Owen P. Adams, director of music at Odet Shalom Temple, Norfolk, and Princess Anne Plaza United Methodist Church, is the only qualified Pace technician in Virginia, and one of the very few on the East Coast.

The course is being offered in Virginia Beach at Plaza Methodist Church, and in Norfolk at Pace headquarters, 6135 E. Sewells Point Road. New groups will be added every four weeks until the schedule is full.

Parents of children from age 6; through 21, or adults of any age wishing to enroll in the course are invited to call Pace headquarters, 857-7393, for more information.

Chippy of Virginia Pre-Engineered Structures

One of the most versatile snack foods to find it's way to the American food market in recent years is the exciting new food product, CHIPPY - the chip with the built in dip! Originally conceived by a Genesee more than seventy-five years ago, the product was further developed into five delightful flavors by Beatrice Foods Company.

R. Robert West, vice president and general manager, announced the opening of a new and interesting business in Virginia Beach, with a temporary address of 530 Talden Avenue. The name of the firm is Chippy of Virginia. He also announced that Richard C. Hudson is president, and Mrs. H.B. Miles is secretary of the new firm.

Although CHIPPY has been on the market, industrially and commercially, just a little over a year, the response in sales to all types of educational facilities, hospitals, and the Armed Forces has been overwhelming. CHIPPY'S unique formula is prepared from concentrated potato substances, enriched with other ingredients and seasonings, and packaged in five different colored and flavored dehydrated chips. In the dehydrated form, CHIPPY can be stored indefinitely without refrigeration. When cooked in hot oil, a single chip will puff to five times its original size in a few seconds. Each colored chip has its own particular flavor - cheese, bacon, onion, shrimp, or pizza - which is retained throughout the cooking, serving, or storing process. The combination of CHIPPY'S unmatched flavor and visual appeal enhances any salad, fruit, soup, or drink. In fact, the only limitation to CHIPPY is one's imagination!

Design for easy handling and convenient use, plus low cost, great flavor, and versatility undoubtedly led preliminary marketing surveys to indicate a fantastic acceptance for CHIPPY, the most inventive product since the potato chip.

Richard C. Hudson, President of Pre-Engineered Structures, Inc., with home offices in Virginia Beach, announced the firm will build a new office and warehouse this spring in the Lynnhaven Industrial Park. Pre-Engineered Structures, Inc. are registered contractors in Virginia, North Carolina, and Maryland, and have been instrumental in the industrial growth throughout the Tidewater area.

Most recently they were instrumental in bringing in a new industry, Hobby Industries, Inc., which will have a home base in Virginia Beach. Their new facilities will be completed in the spring of 1973.

Their services include the design and build concept, with maximum utilization of pre-engineered components.

Pre-Engineered Structures, Inc. are synonymous with the tenth anniversary of the City of Virginia Beach.

Cox and Great Bridge emerged the biggest winners in the First Annual Falcon Invitational Wrestling Tournament held at Cox High School last Thursday and Friday, December 28th and 29th. Cox, last year's State championship team and a member of the Eastern District, had five men winning their championship bouts in the tourney. Great Bridge, a member of the Southeastern District, won four championship matches.

Princess Anne wound up third in the tournament. Churchland fourth, Hampton fifth, and Norfolk Academy sixth in the six school field. No team championships were declared in the tournament. Only individual championships were decided. The one through sixth team finishes were based on a point system by the SUN.

Six wrestlers, one from each school, competed in each weight class. The SUN awarded four points to each wrestler who won his division, three points for the runner-up slot, two points for a third place finish, and one point for finishing fourth.

Based on the SUN point system, Cox and Great Bridge each accumulated 32 points. Cox finished the tourney with five firsts, one second, four thirds, and one fourth. Great Bridge had four firsts, four seconds, one third, and two fourths. Princess Anne's two firsts, three seconds, two thirds, and one fourth gave them third place with 22 points. Churchland had the only other matman to win a championship match, and that win plus two seconds, a third, and four fourths gave them fourth place in the meet with 16 points. Hampton had a second, two thirds, and three fourths for 10 points and fifth place. Norfolk Academy's wrestlers won one second, two thirds, and a fourth for 8 points and sixth place.

Churchland's Steve Satterthwaite was named the Most Outstanding Wrestler in the tournament. Wrestling at 145 pounds, he got a bye in the opening round, pinned Cox's Pete Drew in the semi-finals, and then won a 26-5 major decision over Great Bridge's Joe Sigmund in the championship match. The Drew match was his toughest, and he was only able to pin Drew after six minutes and fifty-nine seconds had elapsed in their match.

Cox had five men to win individual championships. Glenn Felthousen took the 112 pound division with an 18-1 major decision over Great Bridge's Bo Moritz. Mike Battalio decided Brian Newman of Great Bridge 9-1 to win the 126 pound title.

Wrestling is a rough-and-tumble sport. Tournaments are even more active, with both wrestlers giving their all to win a weight title. Matmen from six schools competed in the Falcon Invitational Wrestling Tournament at Cox High School last Thursday and Friday.

Chris Conkright won the 119 pound match with a 12-2 decision over Norfolk Academy's Bryan Hunter. Mike Newbern's 6-1 decision over Princess Anne's Bill Farmer gave Cox the 138 pound division. Terry Gaudreau decided Richard Early of Princess Anne 4-0 to win the 185 pound title.

Princess Anne had two men to win titles. Ken Nowlin decided Great Bridge's Mike Betterton for the 98 pound championship. Ed Smith took the 167 pound title by decisioning Churchland's David Eckstine 5-0.

Results follow showing the top four finishers in each of the twelve weight divisions. Abbreviations denote the wrestler's school after each name. Abbreviations used are: Princess Anne (PA), Great Bridge (GB), Cox (C), Norfolk Academy (NA), Churchland (Ch), and Hampton (H).

Indian River wins cage tourney

Indian River walloped both First Colonial and Kellam to win the First Annual First Colonial Invitational Basketball Tournament last weekend. The Braves knocked off Kellam 96-64 in Friday night's opening game and then trounced First Colonial 98-57 in the championship tilt Saturday night.

Great Bridge defeated Kellam 76-68 in the Saturday night consolation clash. First Colonial edged the Great Bridge Colonial 69-66 the night before.

Indian River's Leon Williams was named the tournament's Most Outstanding Player. Williams scored 17 points in both the championship game and in the first game of the tournament. The honor earned him the captainship of the All-Tournament Team.

Joining Williams on the All-Tournament Team were two teammates, Chandler Harper, a guard, and Sheppard, a forward. Great Bridge's Tony Creekmore was named to the other forward slot. First Colonial rounded out the honor team by placing two players on the squad, Speedy Gainer, a guard, and Burt Lewis, a center.

Sonny Blackmon paced the Knights opening night with 22 points. LKellam also placed Tony Davis and Steve Strausbaugh in the double-figure column, Davis with 12 points, and Strausbaugh with 11. Four Braves hit double figures. Harper had 24 points, Williams 17, Sheppard 14, and Barefoot 12.

First Colonial 69, Great Bridge 66

First Colonial jumped to a 20-14 first quarter lead, reinforced it by outscoring the Wildcats 19-10 in the third quarter, and held on for the win in their opener.

Speedy Gainer was the game's high scorer with 21 tallies. Other double-figure scorers for First Colonial were Burt Lewis, with 17 points, and Cleveland Spellman with 14. Tony Creekmore paced the Wildcats with 16 tallies. Other top Great Bridge scorers were Stanley Lancaster, with 15 points, and Mike Creekmore, with 10.

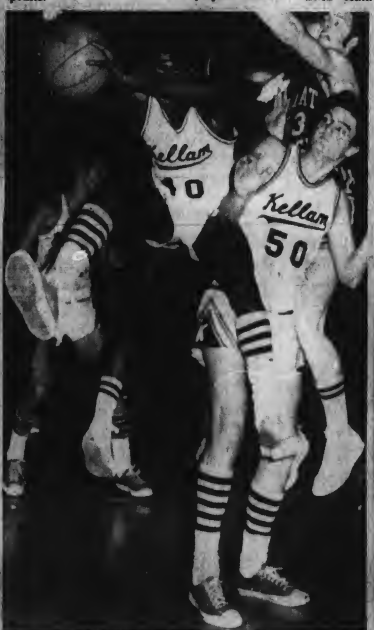

Great Bridge 76, Kellam 68
Kellam's Steve Strausbaugh was the top scorer in the consolation match of the tournament, but his 16 points were not enough to pull his team to victory.

Sonny Blackmon scored 16 points, Tony Davis hit 12, and Ken Bazemore had 10 tallies to round out the double-figure scorers for Kellam. Stanley Lancaster was top point man for Great Bridge with 17 points. Also hitting double figures for the Wildcats were Tony Creekmore, with 16, Mike Creekmore, with 10, Old, with 10 and Toney, with 13.

Indian River 98, First Colonial 57

Although First Colonial's Burt Lewis tied Indian River's Leon Williams for game scoring honors with 17 points each, the final score of the championship match was far from a tie. The visiting Braves took the court with guns blazing, and the Patriots were never able to catch up. Lewis was the only First Colonial eager to hit double figures. Joining Williams in double figures for the Braves were Smallwood and

Sheppard, with 14 tallies each. Total scoring figures for both Kellam and First Colonial players follow. Each team Kellam's Sam Baker (40) leaps for the rebound in front of teammate Kenny Bazemore (50). The action was in the Kellam-Great Bridge consolation game in the First Colonial Invitational Basketball Tournament last Saturday night.

Princess Anne and Stuart share Classic championship

Determination to get the ball is seen in the face of each of these players who is after the basketball at a crucial point in the game. Kempville's Mike Torrech (14 foreground), Britt Glisson (34 right) of Kempville, and a J.E.B. Stuart player all have one hand firmly wrapped around the ball.

Princess Anne had to share their tournament championship with visiting J.E.B. Stuart. Both Princess Anne and Stuart finished with identical, undefeated 3-0 records in the three day Cavalier Christmas Classic Basketball Tournament last Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

In the round-robin style tourney, each of the eight teams played three games each. Princess Anne and Stuart did not meet, thus causing the first Cavalier Classic to end with co-champions.

Tournament officials selected an All-Tournament Team on the final night. Named to the honor squad were Mike Ange of Princess Anne, David Puryear of J.E.B. Stuart, Lew Welge of Hayfield, Frank Cantrell of Gonzaga, Elton Gross of Bayside, and Randy Robinson of Cox.

The SUN Sports Department would like to add one more name to the All-Tournament Team. Jimmy Roberts was the tourney's leading scorer with 70 points, five points better than the second-place finisher. Since the team was selected between the first and second games on the final night of play, Jimmy Roberts' best game had not yet been played.

Kempville entered the final game of the tournament Saturday night a decided underdog against Gonzaga of Washington. Gonzaga built a 20-0 first quarter lead, and Kempville fans were happy that their Chiefs had stayed so close. Then Kempville, led by Roberts, went to work. Roberts scored 12 points in the second quarter, 10 in the third, and 9 in the fourth to lead the Chiefs in their 77-63 upset victory. Along the way he pulled down 17 rebounds. It was his two field goals that tied the game and his foul shot that put them ahead for keeps.

A brief game-by-game summary follows of the twelve-game tournament. Following the summaries is the list of top ten scorers and the scoring totals of each Beach player.

Hayfield 76, Kempville 52

Hayfield outscored Kempville in every quarter, but they pulled away in the second period when they outscored the Chiefs 20-8. Kempville looked a little jittery in the tourney's first game, and their many turnovers - caused by a tough Hayfield pressure defense - put them too far in the hole to get back in the game. Leading scorers for the Chiefs were Jimmy Roberts with 14 points, Britt Glisson with 13, and Doug Boone with 10.

Bayside 77, Groveton 71

The first quarter ended in a 20-20 stalemate, but then margin in the third quarter by outscoring Bayside 22-14. Jim Goffigan hit 8 of his 10 points in the closing quarter in an attempt to pull Bayside from behind, but the rally fell short when he got little help from his teammates. Elton Gross hit 9 tallies in the first quarter and 10 points in the second to carry the Marlin scoring lead in the first half. Bayside's chances of winning were hurt considerably when Don Harold got booted out of the game in the first quarter. Elton Gross led all scorers with 29 points. Jim Goffigan was the only other Marlin to finish in dual figures. He had 10 points

Princess Anne 66, Hayfield 55

Both teams entered this next to the last game of the tournament unbeaten, knowing that the winner would share the tourney co-championship with Stuart. George Purdin dropped in six first quarter points to get the Cavaliers off to an early lead. John Paden and Mike Ange added six tallies each in the second quarter, and the Cavaliers raced to a 36-22 halftime lead. Hayfield outscored Princess Anne 33-30 in the second half, but pesky defense by Cavalier guard Tom Callan prevented Hayfield from seriously threatening Callan had a few steals and broke up a number of Hayfield fast-breaks in keying the Cavalier defense in the closing minutes of play. George Purdin led the Cavaliers in scoring with 22 points. Mike Ange had 20, and John Paden

"Keep away! It's mine!" a Gonzaga player seems to be saying to Cox's Brooks Williams (54) and Dave Swingle (20).

J.E.B. Stuart 73, Cox 69

Stuart outscored Cox 26-20 in the first quarter, and that early margin proved to be the difference. Cox made a comeback in the final period, outscoring Stuart 21-16, but it was too little, too late. Cox had four players to hit double figures. Randy Robinson had 20 points, Perry Hill had 17, Dave Swingle had 12, and Brooks Williams had 10.

Princess Anne 64, Gonzaga 56

Princess Anne raced to an early 17-8 first quarter lead, padded it with a strong second quarter effort by outscoring Gonzaga 21-12, enabling the Cavaliers to enjoy a 38-20 halftime lead. Gonzaga attempted a comeback, outscoring Princess Anne 36-26 in the second half, but the early Cavalier lead was too great. The Cavaliers were led in scoring by Mike Ange's 28 points, Robert Hughes' 12, and John Paden's 11.

Gonzaga 68, Cox 52

The Falcons had a slim 30-29 edge at the end of the first half. A strong Gonzaga second half sunk Cox. Employing a very pesky defense, Gonzaga stymied Cox scoring efforts in the final two quarters. Meanwhile, Gonzaga had a hot hand, outscoring Cox 39-22 in the second half. Cox was led by Randy Robinson, who had 13 points, and Dave Swingle, who had 11.

J.E.B. Stuart 77, Kempville 64

Stuart got most of their winning margin in the first quarter when they outscored the Chiefs 22-12. Kempville played Stuart pretty evenly during the middle two quarters

Hayfield 61, Bayside 57

Hayfield's very aggressive defensive play stymied Bayside in the first half. Bayside trailed 31-21 after two quarters of play. Bayside started the second half with an aggressive defense of their own and managed to pull within four points by the end of the third period. With five minutes to go in the game, Bayside trailed by just one point. They could never get ahead, with clutch foul shooting in the closing two minutes clinching the game for Hayfield. Jim Goffigan led Marlin scorers with 15 points, and Don Harold and Elton Gross chipped in 10 each.

Cox 86, Groveton 70

Randy Robinson had a hot hand in the first quarter and dumped in half of Cox's 16 first period points to give his team a 16-12 lead as the quarter ended. Cox padded the lead in the middle two quarters and held their own in the final period to preserve the victory. Three Falcons hit double figures. Randy Robinson had 27 points, Perry Hill had 22, and Brooks Williams had 20.

J.E.B. Stuart 79, Bayside 70

Stuart got their winning

Kempville 77, Gonzaga 63

Kempville got off to a quick 6-0 lead, but lost it when Gonzaga scored 13 of the next 15 points. A stubborn defensive effort pulled the Chiefs within three points, 17-14, at the end of the first quarter. Kempville went ahead a minute into the second period on two free throws by Jimmy Roberts and a fast-break lay-up by Ricky Bliese. Kempville stretched their lead to 10 points with a minute left in the half, but a couple of Kempville turnovers became Gonzaga scores and cut the Chiefs' lead to 34-27 at the half. Gonzaga began the second half with their most aggressive play of the night and caused numerous Kempville turnovers. Gonzaga went ahead with half a minute left in the third period, but two clutch baskets and a free throw by Jimmy Roberts gave the Chiefs a 48-47 lead at the end of the period. Roberts and Britt Glisson combined for 19 points in the final quarter to ice the game for the Chiefs. Three Chiefs hit double figures for Kempville, led by Jimmy Roberts' 34 points. Britt Glisson had 17 points, and Mike Torrech had 13.

Frank R. Ford

In August of 1909, E.R. Gale and Frank R. Ford organized and opened a jewelry store at 110 Granby Street, in Norfolk. Although they never relocated their store over the years the number was changed by the city from 110 to 229. It retains the same number today. The store operated continually since its inception in the same location. Although many years have passed since the business was started, the initial concept of a quality jewelry store has continued to this day.

Mr. Gale withdrew from the firm in 1913 to enter the automobile business. The store's location was threatened during the first World War. At that time, the terrible fire at the Monticello Hotel took place. It was believed that the flames would engulf Ford's, which is diagonal to the hotel. The Navy sent sailors to Frank R. Ford to help move the merchandise.

A contingent of military men safely took all the merchandise to the nearest bank, where it was secured for its protection. Fortunately, Frank R. Ford was not affected by the fire. M. C. Lynwood Ford became vice president of the jewelry company in 1914, and added a great deal to the growth of the business. He continued in this position until his death in 1966.

Many changes have taken place in the community since 1909, when Frank R. Ford was founded. The Young Women's College on Granby Street became the Hotel Algonquin. Granby Street, which had cobblestones instead of pavement, had two tracks that carry electric cars, very frequently with trailers, to Ocean View. Residents occupied most of the area north of College Place.

Rapid changes have taken place in jewelry merchandise since the early 20's. At that time, Navy men would not wear wrist watches, because it looked "sissy". But the utility and convenience of the wrist watch soon dispelled these objections.

Over the years, the styles of men and women's jewelry have changed, but oddly enough, many of the styles and designs of the pre World War I period are now coming back in strong demand.

It was decided in 1966 to open a second Frank R. Ford store at 3301 Atlantic Avenue in Virginia Beach to better serve the clientele in that area. The new store has thrived through the patronage of old and new friends. Mr. Fred L. Curdts is the manager.

Equitable Life

"There is nobody else like you!"

This is the theme of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States. Its simple slogan to emphasize the highly individual service available at the Equitable today. This service is provided by ten highly trained experts representing the Equitable in Norfolk and Virginia Beach. These agents operate out of the District Headquarters in the Virginia National Bank Building in Norfolk, although most of them live in Virginia Beach.

The District Manager, Robert B. Bergner, reports that the Equitable has been active in the Tidewater Area for more than 70 years. The company was founded in 1859 and is now the third largest life insurance company in the world with assets of more than 16 billion dollars.

In addition to serving the life insurance needs of thousands of Virginia Beach residents, the Equitable has invested many millions of dollars to provide financing for homes, apartment houses, office buildings, hotels, and shopping centers. The Equitable has a large stake in the continued prosperity and growth of Virginia Beach and in the well-being of its citizens.

Mr. R. Bradshaw Pulley, a superior Equitable agent for more than twenty years maintains an office at 2606 Pacific Avenue. He is a distinguished citizen of the Beach community and has served it well in many capacities. Mr. Pulley is a life and qualifying member of the Million Dollar Round Table, the very prestigious organization of the life insurance industry.

Other members of the Berger District who have been repeatedly qualified for the Million Dollar Round Table are William R. Burnette, C.I.U., David R. Kern, and Richard T. Short. This year, Bill Burnette also qualified for the Equitable's Order of the Excalibur, an award based on exceptional and extraordinary achievement during a three year period. He is the first agent in this area ever to qualify for this high honor.

These agents typify the quality of those who represent the Equitable. From Hall of Fame member, James R. Peake, Jr. a 39-year veteran, to the newest member of the organization, Joel Smith, all are knowledgeable, skillful, and dedicated to providing the utmost in professional service to their clients.

The Equitable is in its 114th year and still growing because of its innovative approach to meeting the needs of the people it serves. This year, it introduced the Executive-Economic Policy, which provides a guaranteed increasing death benefit year after year, and Equiplan, a deferred variable annuity, which previously had been available only to individuals covered by pension plans. And now, a new concept in group insurance for small companies.

"There is nobody else like you!" seems to fit the Equitable, too.

Coast Guard warns of some mine hazard areas

It isn't exactly ideal fishing weather. The Coast Guard knows this but they aren't taking any chances. This week they issued a warning about unexploded weapons which might be found anywhere on the continental shelf of the U.S.

The types most likely to be found are underwater weapons such as torpedoes, mines, depth charges and aerial bombs. But there are others lurking there in the water depths. In fact, any metallic object having fins, vanes, propellers, horns or, possibly, inspection plates screwed or bolted to an external surface "should be regarded as dangerous," the Coast Guard says.

The word of caution goes out to all shipmasters, trawlers and fishermen, but it applies just as well to anyone conducting operations on the ocean bottom.

If an object which cannot be immediately identified (if you know it isn't a fish or an old tire or something) then it must be treated as an explosive item. Do not attempt to bring it aboard or even alongside. Release it on the spot and radio the Coast Guard, giving position and description of the object.

If the object cannot be released, or freed quickly by cutting net or line, there's trouble ahead. But here's what precautions can be taken: stream the object as far aft (that's back of the craft, to the novice) as possible; notify the Navy or Coast Guard and stand by the instructions or help; send the crew or persons on board forward to keep the deckhouse or cabin between them and the object; maintain the steeringway needed to stay in the area until help arrives.

Non-explosive naval ordnance items, such as practice torpedoes and mines, are usually painted bright orange and are easily identified. But if the object brought up isn't bright orange—beware.

One of these suspect items isn't detected until it's already on board—proceed with caution. Here's what to do: avoid any bump or shock to the object; secure it against any movement; keep it covered and wet it down; radio the Navy or Coast Guard and stand by for help (warn them NOT to bump your craft when they come alongside!).

Suspicious objects floating on the water, which cannot be readily identified (it's not a porpoise or log or empty half gallon whiskey jug or the like), must be considered explosive. Leave the thing be. Stay away, far away, from it. But call the Navy or Coast Guard and all other ships in the vicinity and try to keep it in sight until someone arrives to get rid of it. Or at least radios instructions about what to do.

The U.S. Navy is not alone in mine operations. Naval mines of many nationalities still generate risks to shipping, fishing, underwater exploration and other maritime endeavors.

If one mine is spotted, there may be others nearby. They may be floating or moored or laid in water so deep they will not be seen unless the water is very clear. But look for a long, regular shadow on the white sand bottom if the water is clear. And get out of the vicinity...one mine may indicate a minefield in the neighborhood.

Also, beware of a clump of seaweed—it could camouflage a floating mine. And any mine found beached or floating near shore should be kept under guard—at a distance of at least 200 yards—until the Navy or Coast Guard arrives.

The Coast Guard posts these warnings for waters as near Virginia Beach as the Chesapeake Bay and Cape Hatteras.

Bay areas considered susceptible (on Coast & Geodetic Survey charts 122 (N.O. 12061), 1227 (N.O. 12045) and 1109 (N.O. 12040) are: 36 degrees 50' 00" N, 75 degrees 56' 00" W.; 36 degrees 57' 00" N, 75 degrees 56' 00" W.; 36 degrees 57' 00" N, 75 degrees 59' 30" W.; 37 degrees 01' 30" N, 75 degrees 53' 00" W.; 37 degrees 01' 30" N, 75 degrees 59' 00" W.; 37 degrees 01' 30" N, 75 degrees 59' 00" W.; and 36 degrees 59' 00" N, 75 degrees 29' 00" W.

For Hatteras (on C&G charts 1232 (N.O. 11255 and 1110 (N.O. 11240) : the area within a circle of radius 12 miles with center in 35 degrees 09' 00" N, 75 degrees 43' 30" W.

One last reminder—ships spotting objects resembling mines should not attempt to recover the objects, should not pass close for positive identification and should keep well clear of the area. Masters of these ships should bear in mind, however, that proper information is important to the Navy and Coast Guard in these matters and are asked to furnish this information as soon as possible: position of object and how closely it was approached; size, shape, condition of painting and presence or absence of marine growth, whether or not horns or rings are attached; and whether or not definite identification was possible.

Willis Wayside

enthusiasm, the Willis company, along with a larger, growing clientele, moved into a new building on Granby Street.

Just as World War I started, another Willis son, John Willis, III joined his father and brother, Ben. This same year started a new concern in home furnishings. It offered long range home furnishings with free interior decorating services. That is another reason that Willis Wayside has a fine reputation for being outstanding in service and quality.

A third son, Grayson Willis, joined the family in 1923. His dedication and pride carried the store to larger quarters at Main and Granby Street, corner they occupied for twenty years.

After World War II, Norfolk had grown to a thriving metropolis, and the Willis family perceived the market they could reach in its outlying areas. In March of 1950, with the purchase of twenty acres of land and two frame structures, Willis Wayside came to Virginia Beach.

A grandson, Ben Willis Jr., entered the business after his second hitch in the Navy in 1953. After the death of his father, Ben Jr. assumed the presidency of the Willis Furniture Company.

Today Willis Wayside is recognized as one of America's Leading Fine Furniture establishments. Great care is taken to continually seek out the finest home furnishings and carpets, as well as linens, silver, china, and crystal from the great market centers of this country and abroad.

Since 1892, quality has been synonymous with the Willis name and service a by-word. Each item is sold with a deep sense of responsibility to the customer, and a pledge to offer innate good taste at a guaranteed low price.

Willis Wayside, a Virginia Beach landmark, a respected business and a family that loves to live their creed, "Nothing must ever compromise quality; nothing must ever compromise right."

Tax relief for elderly

Elderly property owners, living on limited incomes in Virginia Beach, became eligible for real estate tax exemptions on New Year's Day.

Qualification requirements include being a resident of Virginia Beach for at least two years immediately preceding the request for exemption. Property owners 65 years of age or older with a total household income of not more than $4,000, excluding $1,500 of the total combined income of each relative living in the household, became eligible for real estate tax exemptions ranging from 20 percent to 100 percent.

Another point of qualification is the determination that the property owner's net financial worth does not exceed $20,000, including the value of all assets, excluding fair market value of the owners dwelling and up to one acre of land on which the dwelling is situated.

Those wishing to receive tax exemption benefits must take application annually no later than May 1 of the taxable year in the City Manager's office. It has been estimated this program will result in an estimated annual loss of $50,000 in revenue for the city in real estate taxes.

Although it has been discussed for some time in the state legislature at present there is no provision for reimbursing localities for any of the lost revenues.

Funds called tax benefit

City Manager Roger M. Scott has viewed recently allocated federal Revenue Sharing Funds as being created "primarily to get jobs done that a City needs to do while giving tax relief to residents by not having to provide funds for these projects."

Scott's statement was made during this week's City Council meeting in response to questioning him to define the funds, while discussing a date for a public hearing on the proposed expenditure of the funds.

That public hearing has been scheduled during the regular January 15 Council meeting.

The City last month received $1,822,500 from the federal government, which represents half of the first year's allocation to the resort city. Scott has proposed devoting the major portion of the funds to highway improvements, upgrading the city's sewerage system, and public safety projects.

IRS explains car prices

Richmond-New car dealers in Virginia have been reminded that they may not post an auto's "sticker price" as its base price.

"An automobile dealer must post the base price, the price at which he actually sold cars during the base period rather than the sticker price," James P. Boyle, district director of the Internal Revenue Service for Virginia, said.

Auto dealers are classified as retailers under Economic Stabilization Program rules. The base price is the highest actual price charged by the dealer in a substantial number of transactions during the freeze base period, July 16 to August 14, 1971.

"In a trade-in situation, the base price is the amount of the buyer's cash liability plus the wholesale value of the trade-in as shown in a used car valuation book in general use by automobile dealers," Boyle said.

Once determined, the base price does not change. Recent price increases granted to auto manufacturers have no effect on a dealer's base prices.

Although the purchaser of a new car seldom pays the sticker price, the sticker price may be the same as the base price if a dealer gave no discounts during the base period.

governing feeder traffic.

"The whole feeder road thing is a matter of interpretation," Sgt. Belongia said. "Mine is that the signal light governs the intersection, whether there is a stop sign or not. The feeder roads are giving us fits."

William Berry, an assistant city attorney, also confessed confusion about the city's traffic laws in regards to feeder road traffic.

Berry said that he had observed the problem at the Hilltop area and "had to scratch my head a little" to decide how to proceed in his car. Berry acknowledged that a problem exists but had no solution in the law.

"I don't know of any specific interpretation," Berry said. "There is not any ordinance specifically governing feeder roads that I know of."

VA reminds veterans of GI Bill deadline

May 31, 1974, is a crucial date for most post-Korean veterans who haven't started using their GI Bill education benefits. That's the date their benefits expire—and the Roanoke VA Regional Office points out that unless they begin training soon, they could lose part or all of their benefits.

The deadline reminder applies to post-Korean veterans discharged from military service between Jan. 31, 1955, and June 1, 1968. Benefits for these veterans were not authorized until enactment of the current GI Bill on June 1, 1966; thus, they must complete training within eight years of release or by the May 31, 1974, deadline, whichever is later.

The deadline does not apply to veterans interested in flight training, apprenticeship and on-job and farm cooperative training, however. These particular veterans have until August 30, 1975, or eight years after discharge, whichever is later, to complete training. This is because these training programs were not available until October, 1967, VA explained.

More than two million veterans are expected to train under the GI Bill during the current fiscal year. Enrollment in October totaled 1.2 million, 17 percent higher than October a year ago. VA said recent increases in training allowances will encourage more persons to enter VA training programs, and enable many already training to continue their programs.

New rates start at $220 monthly for single trainees going to school full time under the GI Bill. Those with one dependent get $261 monthly; those with two dependents, $298; and they receive $18 for each additional dependent.

Rates for GI Bill apprenticeship and other on-job training begin at $160 monthly for single trainees. Those with one dependent receive $179 monthly; those with two dependents, $196, plus $8 for each additional dependent. Eligible wives, widows, and children going to school full time under VA's Dependents' Educational Assistance Program are now entitled to $220 monthly.

VA urges eligible persons interested in educational benefits, especially veterans whose benefits expire in May, 1974, to contact any of its offices, or local representatives of veterans service organizations.

VIRGINIA BEACH. Where The Living Is Lovely.

The City of Virginia Beach, Virginia was formed on January 1, 1963, by the merger of Princess Anne County and the city of Virginia Beach. It constitutes 258.7 square miles of land area, 51.3 square miles of inland water, and 38 miles of shoreline on the Atlantic Ocean and the Chesapeake Bay. Virginia Beach is located 117 miles from Richmond, Virginia in the southeastern section of the Commonwealth and is within the Norfolk-Virginia Beach — Portsmouth Metropolitan Area.

The population of the City, according to the 1971 count of the University of Virginia, was 184,573. This is an increase of 79.3 per cent over the 1963 figure (time of merger) of 102,921. At the present rate of growth, the number of residents should surpass the 200,000 mark in 1973.

Housing units comprise single-family and multiple-family dwellings which are occupied or vacant but intended for occupancy. The 1970 Census counted 47,960 housing units in Virginia Beach. This is a 92.8 per cent increase over the 1960 count of 24,879.

Building in the City in 1971 reached a record—$137.4 million, with a total of 5196 new permits issued. The 1971 Virginia Beach total represents a $68.9 million increase over 1970 when the value of new permits was $68.5 million. With this large volume of construction, Virginia Beach continues as the fastest growing city in the Commonwealth of Virginia. The following table shows the number of building permits and their values for the years 1963 through 1971.

Virginia Beach is a 1st class city with a council-manager form of government. An eleven-member council, elected from seven boroughs to serve four-year terms of office, is empowered to levy taxes, pass ordinances, adopt a budget, issue bonds for improvements, and appoint the city manager. Under this form of government, the administrative and executive powers are vested in the manager, and the legislative powers are reserved for the city council. The council elects, from its membership, a mayor and vice mayor who serve as moderators of council sessions and as representatives of the council at official and ceremonial functions.

There are four Administrative Departments in the city government, the Departments of Finance, Personnel, General Services, and Planning, and six Operating Departments. These are the Departments of Economic Development, Parks and Recreation, Community Services, Public Safety, Social Services, and Public Libraries. The directors of each of these departments are appointed by the City Manager and are directly responsible to him.

Dimensions of a decade

the beginnings of Virginia Beach unfolded with the placement of a cross...

The first English settlers to set foot upon American soil landed in Princess Anne County.

Three ships, the SARAH CONSTANT, the GODSPEED, and the DISCOVERY, left London on December 19, 1606 with 104 men and Christopher Newport in command. Four months later, on April 26, 1607, they entered the Chesapeake Bay. Thirty men survived the voyage.

Three days were spent exploring the Bay area in search of a safe place to make their new home before they came ashore at Cape Henry. They erected a cross at the landing site giving notice that the land was claimed for God and England.

*"They erected a cross . . .
the land was claimed for God and England"*

They named the land Cape Henry in honor of the oldest son of King James who granted them their charter. The name Chesapeake was thought to have meant "The Mother of Waters".

In spite of their three day search for the safest settlement location, within a few hours of landing, the Englishmen were met by Indians. One English settler, Master George Percy, recorded the events of that first night spent at Cape Henry:

"At night when we were going abroad, there came the Savages. Creeping upon all fours, from the Hills, like Beares, with their Bowes in their mouths: (who) charged us very desperately in the faces, (and) hurt Capitaine Gabriell Archer in both his hands, and two places in the body very dangerous(ly). After they had spent their arrows, and felt the sharpness of our shot; they retired into the woods, with a great noise, and so left us."

Percy was writing about the Chesapeake Indians who lived on the shores of the Lynnhaven River: the "Hills" were the sand dunes of Cape Henry. The loud noise he mentions was undoubtedly the Indian warwhoop.

Once again it was time for the Englishmen to search for a safer area in which to settle. Before moving up the coast to Jamestown where the first settlement was eventually established, the men explored the Lynnhaven River to its mouth.

According to the records in their sparse journals, they met and shared roast oysters with friendlier natives there and were favorably impressed with the cedar and cypress trees, the flowers, and the wild strawberries.

One settler wrote:

"... we came to a plot of ground full of fine and beautiful strawberries, four times bigger and better than ours in England."

But despite the luring of the beautiful countryside, the dangers of such open spaces along the Lynnhaven River forced them to move on. In addition, the Council of England advised them to head further north in order to prepare a better defense against an expected attack by the Spaniards.

The first Englishmen set foot in Princess Anne County at Cape Henry in 1607, but the dangers there were too great for permanent settlement. It wasn't until fourteen years later, in 1621, that the first English town was established.

In the 1600's, there were eight counties in the state of Virginia. Princess Anne County, now the City of Virginia Beach, was part of Elizabeth County and also included Nansemond County and Norfolk.

In 1637, all the land on the southern side of Hampton Roads was made into a new county called Norfolk County. In 1691, what was Lynnhaven Parrish in Norfolk County, was separated and called Princess Anne County after the daughter of James II.

Most of the early towns of Princess Anne County were established at the sites of old Indian villages abandoned when the white settlers forced the Indians further and further west.

The first known town to be established by the English in Princess Anne County was Lynnhaven. In 1621, fourteen years after the first landing, Lynnhaven was the site of a church, a court, and a market place. But as the population of Princess Anne County increased, it also spread out and shifted locations. The town of Lynnhaven slowly declined as other towns in more populated areas came into being.

Because of the easy access to water, providing vital transportation as well as ideal trading facilities, however, the Lynnhaven area was always a favored site. The English had a collector of customs stationed there as late as 1736, just 40 years before the final Declaration of Independence was signed.

The second town to be established was New Town, also called Eastern Branch, in 1697.

*They named the land
Cape Henry in honor of the son of King James*

Prior to the formation of the towns of Lynnhaven and New Town, Kempsville had long been a well established village called Kemps Landing. This area wasn't officially incorporated into a town, however, until May 5, 1783. By this time, Kempsville was the port of entry of the Colonial era and also boasted a tobacco warehouse. Because of the academy located there, Kempsville was also considered the educational center of Princess Anne County.

North Landing is the last of the early Princess Anne towns mentioned in the records.

With the exception of Kempsville, all of these towns were eventually abandoned. (Continued on page 14)

Cape Henry Lighthouse

As time progressed through the 18th Century, Princess Anne County attracted more and more people.

Pungo was considered the central community of the southern portion of the county. The definite origin of the word Pungo is unknown, however, it is said to have been named after an old Indian chief who established a trading post in the area. The trading post is said to have been the business center for that entire area until the last part of the 19th Century.

The construction of the railroad between Princess Anne County and Norfolk brought still more people into the area and at the same time was responsible for the establishment of additional settlements. One of the most noteworthy of these is Oceana.

In 1882, the railroad ties, still under construction, crossed an old county road that connected Norfolk to the ocean front. At this crossroads stood the Tunis Lumber Company, and so the railroad station was named Tunis Station. Soon a village, consisting of two stores and a post office, was established around the station.

But, in 1891, someone discovered that there were two post offices in the State of Virginia with the name Tunis. Since the Virginia Beach Tunis Post Office was located on the old ocean road, the name was changed to Oceana.

B.B. Brock bought some of the property in Oceana in 1892 and constructed a number of houses in an attempt to build up the area, but still the village grew slowly.

The contrast today, with one of the largest jet bases in the world located in Oceana, is obvious. The Oceana Air Station had its beginning in 1938 as an auxiliary landing field. In 1943, the Naval Air Station was commissioned and in 1952 construction began for the Master Jet Base called Oceana. The Oceana Naval master plan was conceived by Captain R.W.D. Woods, USN on a 5,000 acre site that had been a part of the Grayson Whitehurst Farms. Oceana Air Station was dedicated in 1957.

The City of Virginia Beach, now Virginia Beach Borough, had its beginnings in 1880 when a group of Norfolk businessmen, seeking a nearby vacation spot, constructed a hunting and fishing lodge on the ocean front near 17th Street. It was a rough wooden building, consisting of five bedrooms, a dining room and a kitchen, but it marked the start of the tourist business that flourishes in the city today.

The same enterprising men who built the lodge in 1880, organized a land company in 1883 called the Norfolk and Virginia Beach Railroad and Development Company. Their primary goal was to promote the city as a resort area. Their first step was to buy property and build a small hotel and pavilion.

The first such facility, the Virginia Beach Hotel was built to accommodate about 75 people. Its popularity with the Norfolk residents was overwhelming and it was soon evident that a larger facility would be needed.

By 1887, the popularity boom was still growing and the same developers built the Princess Anne Hotel. The building, located between 14th and 16th Streets, was four-and-one-half stories high with 137 bedrooms, a ballroom, dining room, and kitchen. The hotel had its own steam heating plant and electric plant which was said to be the first in the State of Virginia.

The land company, at this time owned about 1600 acres of land and began selling to individuals. The first lot was sold to Robert Morton Hughes of Norfolk.

In a short three years, the popularity of the Princess Anne Hotel had been proven and streets were planned and laid out in the vicinity of the building to facilitate horse- and buggy traffic between Norfolk and Virginia Beach.

A major step in the resort development was taken soon after when the land company provided a narrow-gauge railway from Broad Creek to the hotel to promote Sunday excursions to the seashore.

By this time more tourist facilities were needed and the Arlington Hotel had been constructed near 12th Street.

A dream was begun in 1888 when a wooden boardwalk was constructed that connected the Princess Anne Hotel with the Arlington Hotel. The added attraction of an evening stroll along the ocean front brought more and more visitors, especially honeymooners, from all over the state. The dream was fulfilled in 1929 when the concrete boardwalk was completed.

Fifteen years after the first crude hunting and fishing lodge was built for a tourist attraction, in 1895, Virginia Beach was destined to loose that restrictive label. In that year, Bernard P. Holland, the first mayor and first postmaster of the city, built the first year round residence at 12th Street and Atlantic Avenue.

The business district in Virginia Beach had its beginning in 1897 when J.W. Bonney built the first grocery store on 17th Street and Atlantic Avenue.

In 1906 Virginia Beach was incorporated into a township that encompassed about 1600 acres and was thoroughly established as a vacation spot. Mayor Holland is said to have given accounts of chats with Alexander Graham Bell, James G. Blaine, Robert Ingersoll, Grover Cleveland, and Benjamin Harrison during their visits to the Beach.

Formal education entered Virginia Beach about 1906 with the construction of the W.T. Cooke Elementary School. Prior to that time, school was conducted in a building near 14th Street and Pacific Avenue which also housed the Town Hall and jail. Today, Cooke School is situated on the original site, but with many reconstructions and additions.

1907 brought sudden and drastic changes to Virginia Beach. The Princess Anne Hotel burned to the ground, taking with it the Norfolk and Southern Railway Depot, the power houses and the one other building in the vicinity.

What was once the focal point of the new town was now gone. The population, now growing quickly, began spreading northward to Cape Henry. More and more permanent houses were built and Virginia Beach as solely a resort city no longer existed.

Virginia Beach gained addition stature on February 14, 1952 when it was incorporated as a second class city. At that time the city consisted of 2.4 square miles with a population of about 5,000. Virginia Beach remained a second class city until the merger with Princess Anne County ten years ago, when it became Virginia Beach Borough.

The first Princess Anne Court House was located in Lynnhaven, the site of the first settlement in Princess Anne County.

In 1691, when Princess Anne was made into a separate county, an order was given to build a new court house on John Keeling's old plantation at London Bridge. The order was later rescinded and the court house was never built.

Another order was issued later and a courthouse was built on land adjoining the new brick Old Dominion Church.

As the population shifted, so did the Court House. In 1751 the building was moved to New Town.

In 1778, it was decided to move the government facilities again and this time to Kemps Landing. Until the official building could be constructed, the old dry goods store belonging to George Logan was made into a court house and a bar room across the road was used for a jail. The new Courthouse building later became a Baptist Church and the jail was converted into a school house.

The court house was moved the last time in 1824 to its present location - near the geographic center of the County. On June 1, 1969 the doors of the new colonial-style brick city hall complex were opened.

During the American Revolutionary War, Princess Anne County was in constant danger of invasion by British troops. All citizens were forced to publicly declare for or against independence and many Tories were tried and arrested for treason.

The first Revolutionary battle fought in Virginia occurred in Kempsville on November 16, 1775. A group of 200 British soldiers, marines, and Norfolk Tories invaded Kempsville and quickly forced the Princess Anne Militia, made up of untrained farmers and merchants under the command of Colonel Anthony Lawson, to retreat.

The battle resulted in the first death of a Virginia patriot, John Adkirs, who later died of wounds received in the skirmish.

In 1777, a reward was offered in Princess Anne County for the arrest of three revolutionaries who were terrorizing citizens in the area. Levin Sykes, Josiah Phillips, and John Ashley made up what was locally known as "Phillips Rebellion". Phillips, the only one surviving the Revolutionary War, was declared a felon and was eventually captured, indicted, tried and executed.

WAR OF 1812

The participation of Princess Anne County was not as great in the War of 1812 as it was in the Revolutionary war where its citizens supplied much of the state with food.

The county, especially the Lynnhaven area, was menaced by British troops, and Watch Houses were set up along Chesapeake Bay.

In one skirmish, a British frigate anchored off Virginia Beach made an amphibious landing. The English sailors marched inland for about a mile before they were met by the Princess Anne County Militia and driven back. Once again on their ship, the British bombarded the Virginia Beach coast with cannon balls. That part of the coast that now makes up Virginia Beach Borough was called Seatack, a shortened form of "Sea Attack". The first life saving station, built in 1878 on 24th Street, was called Seatack Station.

CIVIL WAR

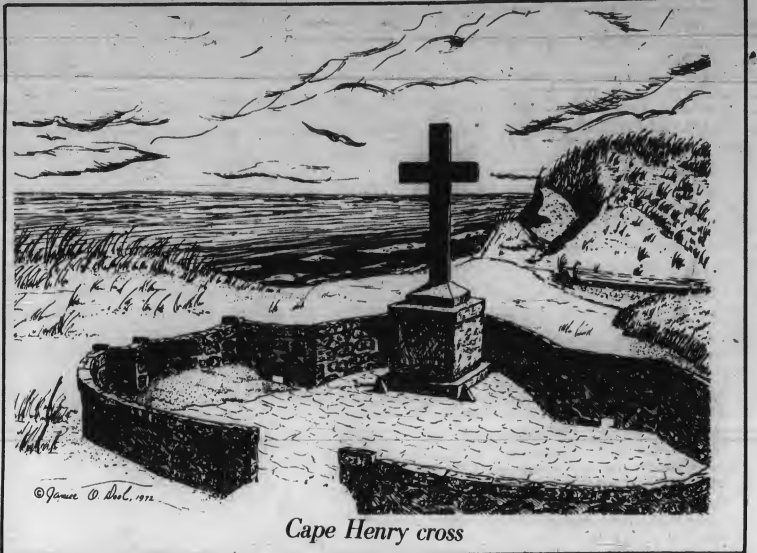

Prior to the Civil War, the Princess Anne Militia was made up of six or eight companies that composed the 20th Regiment. The three top officers were Major John Hill, Colonel Wilson M. Bonney, and Lt. Colonel William T. Griggs.

One of the biggest events of the year was the Annual Muster Day which took place near Princess Anne Court House. The last of these was held in 1860.

At the beginning of the Civil War, two of the Princess Anne Companies played a vigorous role in the fighting: the Seaboard Rifles and the Princess Anne Cavalry.

The Seaboard Rifles, a volunteer state militia, was formed on December 22, 1859 at London Bridge. George T.

Rogers commanded the troops. The men furnished their own uniforms, but their arms were supplied by the state. Later the Seaboard Rifles joined the 6th Regiment and became known as Company F.

As part of Company F, the Rifles fought in the Seven Days Battle, Second Manassas, Sharpsburg, Fredricksburg, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg.

As the Civil War progressed, more companies were formed in Princess Anne County. Federal garrisons were stationed at Pungo Ferry; where a prison was located at Kempville; and near Pleasure House Beach.

"Spec" Hodges, a notorious Negro, led frequent raids from these garrisons. He later represented Princess Anne County in the General Assembly.

An old map in the Library of Congress in Washington dated 1695, illustrates a continuous waterway running north and south through Virginia Beach. The water route, beginning at the Chesapeake Bay, runs into the Lynnhaven River, out Long Creek into Broad Bay (Battles Bay), into Linkhorn Bay (Lincolne Bay) to Little Neck Creek, or perhaps Crystal Lake to the ocean.

Another inlet probably existed about four miles south of Cape Henry according to the map. The highway there still floods as a result during heavy rains.

The area now known as Cape Henry was probably an island originally, and then became a sandbar and then eventually became part of the mainland as it is today.

Our early records of this time are very incomplete as the early settlers were more involved in survival than writing. Few of the early settlers could read or write and most of our information comes from records of wills, land transfers and some illegal activities.

But we do know that these early water ways in Princess Anne County provided transportation and food for the early inhabitants as well as protection from the wild sea and that the lands of early Princess Anne County were fertile ridges with creeks and swamps in between.

The sheltered entrance to the Lynnhaven River proved to be an ideal location for the first settlement in Virginia Beach. The first facilities for government and church (then closely related institutions) were located at the mouth of the river on the property of Adam Thoroughgood. He named the area Lynnhaven. The settlement was then called by many different names including Donation Farm, Dickson's and later Witch Duck and Ferry Farm, after the ferry operating on the Lynnhaven River.

The early inhabitants living near Little Creek made their living seine hauling. They had to travel from the Lynnhaven Inlet, by water, for six miles to the fishery at the Bay shore. Their profits were greatly cut by having to travel this distance and especially frustrating was the fact that the distance would be only one-half mile if not for a narrow strip of beach that blocked their boats.

A group of fishermen decided to remedy the situation. With field hoes in hand, they opened a trench across the beach just wide enough for the boats to pass through.

The moment the trench was opened though, the bay water, probably piled up by an easterly wind off the Atlantic, rushed through. That opening is now the mouth of the Lynnhaven River.

The water continued through the opening, for almost six miles, flooding all the low lying areas, until it was beyond the area known now as London Bridge. A river was formed.

Virginia Beach culture

A decade of significant art, theatre, and choral development

A city, a truly progressive city, is more than laws and economy and officialdom and buildings. It is, of course, people, their interests, their own personal contribution to community growth. That is why the cultural development of a city is so important; it represents the heart of the city, the people themselves.

In this respect, Virginia Beach has seen some healthy growth in its first 10 years, its infantile years, as "the world's largest resort city". It has seen the continued development of art, theatre and choral events. And the introduction of other cultural areas—ballet, modern dance, concert and orchestral music.

The combination of expanded interests with the totally new interests has provided Virginia Beach with a wide range of cultural exposure.

But perhaps the most significant thing that has happened culturally in this 10-year period is the City's own financial contribution and support.

The Arts Center opened its first art gallery in the old City Hall Annex

For many years such organizations as the Art Association (now renamed the Arts Center), Little Theatre and Civic Chorus have struggled to further their goals and programs without so much as a nod of appreciation from the city officials. They were, in fact, hindered in many ways during their early years of development by official apathy.

But they survived. And thrived. And in 1970 their perseverance began to pay off. The City officially recognized for the first time a responsibility toward the cultural growth of Virginia Beach.

It was the Arts Center that broke the ice.

A formidable group of some 250 community-spirited members, the Arts Center has for years stashed away its proceeds from the annual Boardwalk Art Show toward its own building, preferring to bide its time until it can afford what it wants rather than settle for less at an earlier date.

But, in the meantime, the group felt a dire need to introduce good art to the community, a need to launch a collection, an embryo step toward the city's own art museum.

City Council was approached with the idea of appropriating $10,000 for the first year's salary of the curator who would get the project rolling. The collected works would hang in City Hall where they would not only break the institutional look of the stark white halls but would be available for viewing by the public.

City Council warmed to the idea, but several problems lurked in the plan. Security, for one thing. Works of the Masters could not be displayed in a public place without security guards. And insurance costs were out of the question. Also, there was much concern about setting a precedent for the many other groups that had now organized, each with a financial need, each with a worthy contribution to the community.

The appropriation did not come easily. But it did come. And, in addition, council made office space available in the old City Hall Annex on Arctic Avenue where, by the end of 1972, the Arts Center had proudly managed to open its first art gallery.

The Virginia Beach Little Theatre keeps going despite many handicaps

During the summer members works were displayed in a rotating exhibit at the Dome. This proved to be popular with tourists and residents alike. But the new art gallery on Arctic Avenue is a giant step toward the realization of a dream of long, long standing.

As council had expected, other groups were encouraged by this show of interest in cultural development. The Little Theatre was the second to seek assistance.

The theatre's need for funds was actually more acute than the first group's request. After some 20 years or so of moving from pillar to post, the community thespians now found themselves without a home. Their beloved Court-yard Playhouse, which they had converted from the old Roland Theatre on 17th Street, had been included in a lump commercial property sale and the proposed rental far exceeded anticipated box office receipts.

For one season (1969-70) the theatre was dark. It was a grievous time for this group which had been performing since 1948. But they made use of their "time off". They launched a fund drive for their own theatre building. Thanks to the generosity of Herbert Harrell, they had the land...two lots at the corner of 24th Street and Barberton Drive...now all they needed was enough to finance a bank loan to pay for a $45,000 building.

The undertaking was not as financially secure as it first seemed. Being a non-profit organization, the theatre had to kick in much more than expected in order to qualify for the loan.

So they opened a 1970-71 season, performing plays that were required reading in the public school's English Departments, then taking the productions—sets and all—into the schools, in a joint educational-theatrical project. Once the shows had made the rounds of the schools, they were performed for the public, through a special arrangement, in the Harbour Room (the old Bay Harbour Club) of the White Heron Motel.

But, despite these handicaps, the theatre kept going. And the building fund gradually grew. By late 1971 the group knew reaching the full amount needed for the theatre would be several years away...several years without a home...unless the City gave them a financial boost. Pleas to the State for financial assistance through the Federally-funded, State-distributed arts and humanities program had gone unheeded. The City was the only hope.

Again, council voiced reservations about setting a precedent. There were those who obviously cared little about any of the cultural events. But, after hearing the theatre's tale of sincere woe, council voted unanimously to appropriate $15,000, the amount needed to qualify for the bank loan.

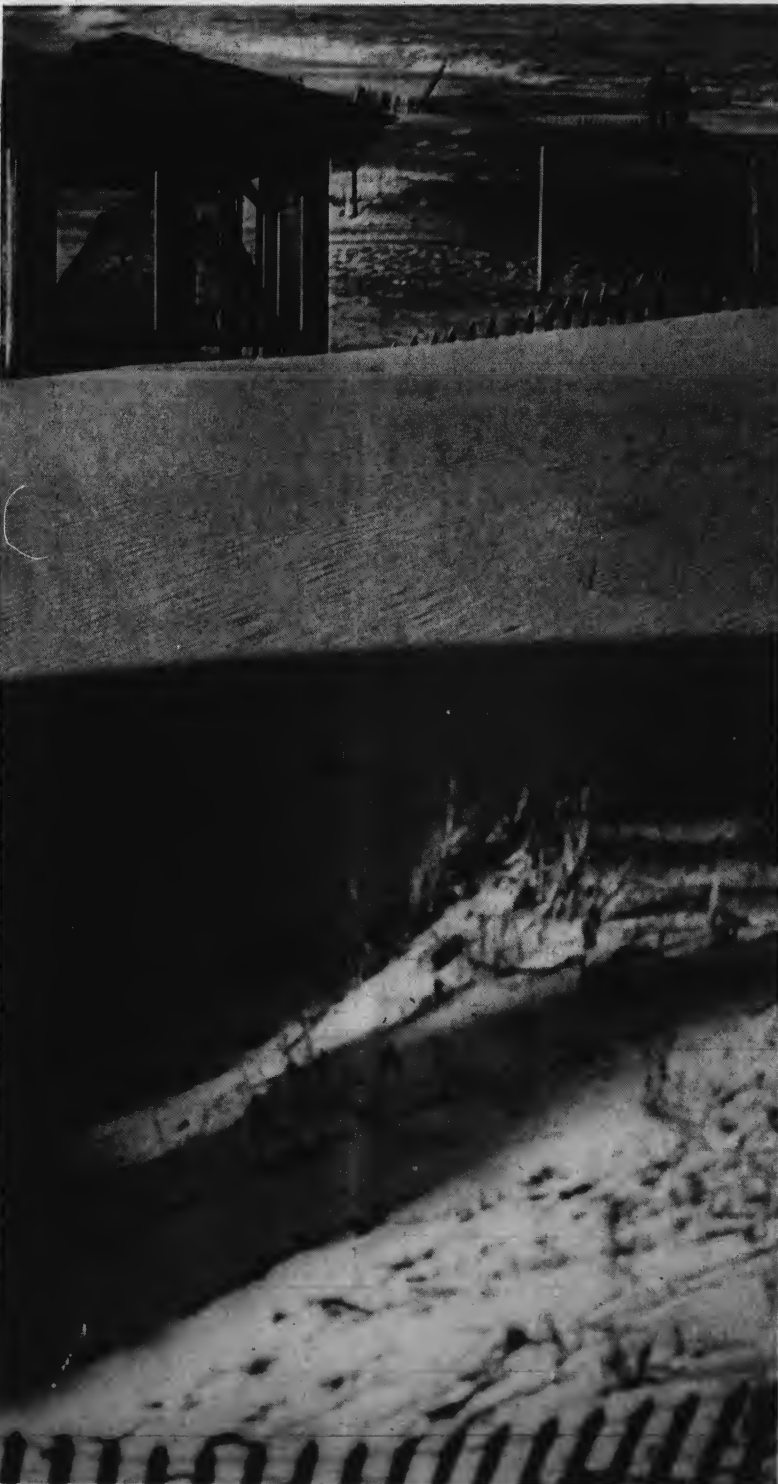

It was with this backing that the Little Theatre was able to open its 1971-72 season in December, 1971, with "The King and I" in its own shining new building on 24th Street. It was a milestone in the theatre's long history.

Where we live makes us what we are.

A special kind of place makes a special kind of people.

And around Virginians there's something rare.

Something of quality.

That touches our souls.

And shapes the way we see.

It's in Virginia's landmarks and monuments. Portraits of presidents. Plaques and markers all around.

In the world's greatest natural harbor and finest tobacco.

In Shenandoah's apples and MacArthur's statue.

All these have become a part of us. A measure for everything we do.

And Virginians have come to expect no less.

At Virginia National, we understand what living in Virginia means. And more.

We understand what living here means, too. We grew up here in Tidewater.

First landing for the first permanent colonists. And where history mingles with the taste of the sea.

So we know the kind of bank you expect.

And the kind of services you need.

And because we understand, that's the kind of bank we've come to be.

Virginia Beach.

There's no other place we'd rather be.

And it was a milestone in the thinking of City Council toward culture in Virginia Beach.

From these two efforts council was made to realize that the City does, indeed, have some responsibility to groups attempting, through strictly volunteer participation, to contribute to the balanced growth of Virginia Beach.

Council also realized that the City could not continue appropriating haphazardly to these groups, that some budgeting, some organizing was needed for the equal distribution of pre-planned funds for cultural development. Hence was nourished the creation of an Arts and Humanities Commission, which, like the Virginia Beach Development Council, would screen and weigh requests for funds, and study various projects beneficial to Virginia Beach, and take the commission's recommendation to council.

An earlier effort in the 1950's to coordinate the culture groups, which at that time were very few, had failed. Primarily because of the artistic temperament of the people involved. It was to be expected. The melting of talented persons does not necessarily mean harmony. Even though each contributes much of his own self to the overall project. It takes a velvet-gloved strong arm to objectively oversee and organize a combined effort toward the arts.

And that's what council had in mind by proposing an Arts and Humanities Commission. A committee was appointed from the Development Council membership to study the formation of the commission. Headed by James Bergdahl of Virginia Wesleyan College, the committee held a public forum on the arts early in 1972 to feel out the cooperative intent of the various organizations.

The forum was spirited, as might be expected. But the representation was good and the general feeling of all was that a commission would, indeed, be beneficial to the city as well as to the individual groups.

Within weeks of this forum the city got caught up in a highly competitive councilmanic election, then fell into the doldrums of the busy tourist season before easing into a very active national election in November.

As Virginia Beach enters its 10th year, the Arts and Humanities Commission hangs in limbo, obscured by some of the more pressing needs of this growing city. But it is only a matter of time before council, injected with new blood from the May election, revives this cooperative venture. Because it is only a matter of time before council is again faced with the financial needs of this city's cultural development.

Dimensions of a decade

Ten years ago, Princess Anne County and Virginia Beach came together as the new City of Virginia Beach under the guidance of six county supervisors and five councilmen.

“One thing about Virginia Beach politics: No matter whose side you're on, it's always interesting.” A familiar phrase. And an accurate one. Virginia Beach politics has probably been analyzed in print more than that of any other city in Virginia. Yet, there is no accurate record in print of exactly what has transpired in this growing city through the years. Too much is speculation, supposition and simply conflicts among personalities.

Accuracy of the records, most of which are in newsprint, is, in fact, obscured by the political interests, and perhaps pressures, of the times in which the accounts were written.

The merger in 1963 brought about inevitable changes. But to understand it, one must look back into the pre-merger days. Look back to the days when there were two governing bodies — the Virginia Beach City Council and the Princess Anne County Board of Supervisors; when there were fewer people and less involvement; when the Beach and the County were quiet communities still undisturbed by the conflicts of progress and growth.

Virginia Beach was, even then, a bustling resort during the summer: the season ran from Memorial Day to Labor Day and few motels or businesses were open beyond those dates. Nine months out of the year, Virginia Beach was like most other small towns. Its businessmen were concerned with earning a living off the year-around trade; the church and school were the main social contact; and the permanent residents were generally too involved in their own interests to take part in the city's political affairs.

In most small towns the reins of leadership fall to the strong, the community-minded, the ambitious. And usually to a person with deep family ties in the area.

Such was the case with Sidney Kellam, member of a family long involved in the economic and political development of both the Beach and the adjoining County, an intelligent man who knew how to lead. He knew the ins and outs of government through a father who had once been county treasurer and an older brother who, until his death, was Circuit Court judge.

As a staunch Democrat from a long line of staunch Democrats, it was not difficult for Sidney Kellam to pick up his party's reins. After all, he, too, had been county treasurer for 16 years; and through his political growth, campaign manager for several Democratic gubernatorial candidates; employed by the state as director of the Department of Conservation and Development; appointed to numerous influential committees and commissions; and eventually the Democratic national committeeman from Virginia.

He sought no public office, preferring to pull the political strings on the Princess Anne-Virginia Beach combine from his business offices of the insurance firm of Kellam-Eaton.

An unimposing man who can, and does, look slightly surprised and a bit apprehensive when he is called “political leader” of the “Organization Machine”, he quickly gained prominence throughout the state. One Associated Press photo went out across Virginia, and beyond, showing Virginia as “Kellam Country”.

He gained this prominence through sheer political know-how. He guided the party that controlled Virginia politics. He was a dedicated friend and backer of Senator Harry F. Byrd. His support was sought by the Governor's Mansion in Richmond And by the White House in Washington. “You'd be surprised how many calls Sidney gets from the White House,” a friend once commented. But Kellam seldom, if ever, mentioned these calls.

Kellam gradually eased his power in the County, which was less politically influential than Virginia Beach, and concentrated on the Beach, and Virginia. This power grew. His approval automatically placed a candidate in office. His word molded council appointments. The city's Democrats sought his guidance. It was inevitable that he rise as the leader over a small city that was, primarily, apathetic politically.

However, there were those who fought his dominance. The “anti's” were much in the minority, but they had a strong voice in the Princess Anne Free Press, a small weekly headed by a courageous editor, J. Willcox Dunn. He waged a weekly war against the Organization and threw in explosive information about gambling and prostitution and various forms of courthouse injustice.

Throughout the 1950's, Dunn waged his war, supported and encouraged by that handful of citizens who proudly comprised the “anti's”. For his efforts, he was persecuted, threatened, ridiculed, blackjacked and sued. But, eventually, he won. In the final days of the Free Press, which folded March 8, 1962, Dunn was the recipient of some of his nation's highest editorial awards. He had struggled for freedom of the press for 510 volatile issues and, even as the paper was sinking, he refused to sell. He preferred to close the doors rather than to compromise his own beliefs and standards.

But what Willcox Dunn had said in his editorials did not go unheeded. He planted seeds of discontent. Seeds that germinated in the population explosion that was to follow.

Of course, the national political picture was also changing. John F. Kennedy was elected president, aided by Kellam's Virginia backing. But the people were also listening to the straight-from-the-shoulder talk of his opponent, Republican Barry Goldwater. In the wake of Kennedy's assassination, the country overwhelmingly threw their support to Lyndon Johnson. Sidney Kellam was Johnson's state co-ordinator. He remained true to the Democratic party even though public quotes at the time indicated he had some misgivings about the candidate himself.

But, while the nation was on the brink of a political change, Virginia Beach was on the brink of a physical as well as a political change.

Norfolk had already annexed portions of Princess Anne County, incorporating such areas as Camellia Shores and other Communities near Little Creek Amphibious Base, gaining such facilities as schools and other developments provided by the tax dollars of Princess Anne County residents. And there was talk of more annexation.

It was Sidney Kellam, none too friendly with Norfolk

Mayor Fred Duckworth, who proposed that the county merge with Virginia Beach to cut off Norfolk's consumption of Princess Anne acreage. Land was Norfolk's only hope of expansion. Hemmed in by Portsmouth, South Norfolk, Norfolk and Princess Anne Counties, the seaport city had no way to grow but through annexation.

It was an emotional issue. Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County still felt a strong “Mother City” tie to Norfolk. The county's border communities, in fact, felt a closer bond to Norfolk than to either Princess Anne or the resort city. And there was little development at that time to bring about any unity. Virginia Beach Boulevard was the lifeline, stretching through miles of farmland and wooded acreage from the seashore resort to the first Norfolk commercial area at Thomas Corner.

In the late 1950's John Aragona had started his first housing development, Aragona Village, on property that “floated” in the center of the county, related neither to the Beach nor Norfolk.

The new council chambers

Princess Anne High School was built in the middle of a wilderness. The old Pembroke Manor sat way back off Virginia Beach Boulevard, nestled among trees in acres and acres of farmland, accessible only by a narrow dirt road.

This, then, was the challenge that faced the fathers of the merger, headed by Kellam: An area primarily unrelated to any governing body, a population that felt no particular allegiance.

It probably was the television debate at Princess Anne High School that most influenced the vote. Kellam represented the Beach County merger forces and Dudley Cocke, Norfolk attorney, represented his city. It was no match. Kellam was far more dedicated in his purpose than his opponent and Cocke had too few answers to offset the Kellam onslaught.

It was here, too, that the first water threat was introduced, a threat that Kellam called “Norfolk's water pistol”. Inferences were made that if the merger went through, Norfolk would cut off its water supply to Virginia Beach and the few portions of Princess Anne that were on the System.

The people rallied. They didn't like the idea of Norfolk “holding a water pistol to Virginia Beach's head”, as the papers described it. They didn't feel close to the small seaside resort (it only stretched from about 39th Street to Rudee Inlet) but they didn't relish the idea of a larger city using a necessity such as water as a weapon. Nor did they favor annexation to Norfolk. They feared the quiet peaceful life of Princess Anne County would be destroyed by the industrialism and commercialism of the bustling Norfolk.

The merger was approved by the voters. It wasn't a landslide vote. Nor was it a record turnout. But the merger was approved. It was January, 1962, a year before the consolidation would take effect January 1, 1963. There obviously was much to be done in that 12 months.

It probably was at this moment that the political climate began to change, although few realized it. The combining of the political powers of Virginia Beach with the leaders of Princess Anne County just naturally presented some problems.

Who was to take over? The 5-man City Council of Virginia Beach, obviously controlled by Sidney Kellam, or the 6-man Board of Supervisors, Kellam-related by highly influenced by ex-State Senator V. A. (Jack) Etheridge, then county treasurer.

Taking a backward look, it is relatively easy to see how the political tug-o-war between these two governing bodies came about, a tug-o-war that eventually led to a sort of political revolution.

Princess Anne County was a sprawling community of farmers, extending from the North community of farmers, extending from the North Carolina border, along the Norfolk County and Norfolk lines to the Chesapeake Bay, continuing around Cape Henry along the seashore nearly to the Cavalier Hotel area. It was primarily undeveloped. But it was rich in historical heritage, with many old and their own right. And "ne're the twain did meet!" to muddy the waters...until the merger.

With the consolidation of the Beach with the County decisions had to be made. Obviously there could only be one political leader. With Norfolk, and its skeptical Mayor Duckworth waiting for a political explosion and governmental failure, it was apparent that one person had to take the lead. And, from all apparent accounts, Etheridge turned his reins over to Kellam which was a logical decision since Kellam's power was dominant in Virginia Beach and had extended to Richmond and Washington.

But there remained with the county group a loyalty to their own. Etheridge continued to represent the urban and substantial population of the new city. Unity seemed to prevail. But those who were involved in the early organizational meetings recognized a division "When we get together, there's the county group on one side, the Beach group on the other, and nobody really knows who they're supposed to answer to," an insider once commented.

Despite this precarious political balance, however, the new city came into being with a logical governmental structure. The Beach's council and the County's supervisors were combined into 11-man City Council, which explains why the City of Virginia Beach has such a the supervisors, who would represent the boroughs the county had been divided into: S. Paul Brown (Princess Anne), James G. Darden (Lynnhaven), Swindell Pollock (Kempsville), Lawrence E. Marshall (Bayside), James E. Snyder (Blackwater) and Kenneth N. Whitehurst (Pungo).

At that first meeting Dusch was named mayor; Brown, vice mayor; John Fentress, clerk of courts; George Vagos, city attorney; Stanley Phillips, assistant city attorney; Jack Etheridge, city treasurer; and W. Russell Hatchett, city manager. It was a compromising blend of the county-city leaders.

The new city was to be called Virginia Beach simply because many advertising dollars had already been spent promoting the seashore resort. And it was felt that Virginia Beach was a more recognizable name than Princess Anne. The merger between South Norfolk and Norfolk County was having a far more serious name problem. It took weeks, months, to finally decide on the name Chesapeake.

treasured pre-Revolutionary War buildings and its farmers and small businessmen — mostly agriculture-oriented — were a proud lot.

The county had long been governed by six Supervisors, most of them farmers, and the political pressures had been fairly slight. The Kellams had been community leaders for generations. Judge Floyd Kellam sat in Circuit Court. His brother Frank had a thriving business. And assorted families of the 16 brothers and sisters lived in the county. But the more aggressive one, Sidney, along with brothers Harold and William (Bill), had established an insurance firm at the Beach.

It was Jack Etheridge, the ex-senator and country treasurer, who shared much of Kellam's thinking, that the rather politically unsophisticated supervisors looked to for guidance and support.

Etheridge, a dynamic and personable young man, was easy to follow. He, too was a born leader. And in the pre-merger years he had gained considerable political strength simply because he, as had Sidney Kellam, been the natural person to pick up the reins.

Both were Democrats. Both were political powers in

WE CONGRATULATE THE CITY OF VIRGINIA BEACH ON ITS ASTOUNDING GROWTH SINCE ITS BIRTH TEN YEARS AGO. OUR SUCCESS IN THIS LOCATION IS GREATLY ATTRIBUTABLE TO THE PATRONAGE OF THE PEOPLE OF VIRGINIA BEACH. WE TAKE THIS OPPORTUNITY TO EXPRESS OUR SINCERE THANKS FOR LETTING US SERVE YOU.

The City of Virginia Beach entered life with a group of small city politicians who controlled the resort and a group of farmers who took time off from their chores to play at being governmental leaders. Little challenge had actually been placed on either group. The public was pretty apathetic about the whole thing. Council and Board of Supervisor meetings were primarily attended only by those who had proposals under consideration. Occasionally there would be a loud voice of opposition about a certain issue. But he, or she, was considered a "radical", the opposition was ignored, and council forged ahead with what was politically expected.

Power upheavals within the combined government were inevitable. But other forces were now afoot which perhaps forced the showdown sooner than expected.

The Republican party, for instance, was gaining strength, struggling to overcome some of its own inner turmoil. And citizen participation was about to shatter the old cut-and-dried government control.

Virginia Beach was so predominately Democratic that the GOP was practically unheard of. There was little or no unity within the party at the Beach and the Democrats considered them nothing more than "trouble-makers" or "outsiders".

The poll tax kept the voters under control. Anyone moving into the area had to "fill out" a blank sheet of paper, if they could locate a registrar, in order to be a registered voter. This often was more trouble than the average voter felt it was worth. This was another reason why Virginia Beach remained under political control. In the late 1960's the Supreme Court ruled that poll taxes were to be abolished as unconstitutional. Voter registration was then taken out of the hands, homes, and businesses of neighborhood registrars and central files were set up in the office of the General Registrar at Princess Anne. At last voter information was available. The Republican party took advantage of it. The party secured the complete voter registration list and for the first time was able to reach every voter in the city.

Etheridge, dynamic and personable, was easy to follow.

The GOP movement was underway before this time, however; the Virginia Beach Republican Women's Club organized in 1959 and the Princess Anne Council of Republican Women chartered in 1964. Shortly after, the Kempsville Republican Woman's Club was formed, but later changed its name to the Beach Suburban Woman's Club. And all groups concentrated on training young women to work in campaign headquarters and to secure precinct workers. A Virginia Republican Assembly was also organized and the party concentration was on the dependent candidates.

The bi-partisan Council of Civic Organizations gained strength in membership, boosted by citizens who were disgruntled about community services and equity in taxes in the small housing areas now cropping up all over the county. And the League of Women Voters of Norfolk and Virginia Beach encouraged members to attend meetings of City Council and the Planning Commission. Citizen participation was well underway, a participation that eventually played a prominent role in political change.

Progress, to the early city leaders, primarily meant construction. That meant homes. And homes meant people. The population exploded. The little city that was now a giant wasn't prepared for them. There was no plan for the growth. There were few provisions for it. And the enormity of it all was more than the leadership could cope with.

By 1965 Kellam, several of his brothers, and many of his supporters were under fire. There were newspaper accounts of shady land deals, accusations of conflicts of interest, personal financial gains by public officials and political leaders. And old-time politics, like declaring election day a holiday for city employees—just didn't fit into the picture anymore. The people, most of them new to the area, were disillusioned.

In the spring of 1965, a young lawyer from the mountains of Roanoke appeared in Virginia Beach. He came seeking the support of the Republican City Committee to back him as the GOP gubernatorial candidate. His name was Linwood Holton. He won his party's nomination and, though he lost the election to Mills Godwin, his whirlwind appearances in Virginia Beach drew so much attention the Democrats knew their security might become a bit shaky.

In that same election there was a hotly contested race for three seats in the Third Senatorial District between William P. (Bill) Kellam, William B. Spong, William H. Hodges, Edgar S. Everhart, Paul C. Trolman Jr. and George R. Walker.

Kellam, Sidney's youngest brother, was making his first bid for public office. He needed strong support. Spong was the strong candidate but, even though he was a fellow Democrat, he did not endorse Kellam nor did he come to Virginia Beach to campaign for him. Kellam, along with Spong and Hodges, won a seat in the senate. But there now was an obvious crack in the party structure.

But there now was an obvious crack in the party structure.

The Democrats were not alone in their internal strife. The Republicans were also squabbling among themselves. The 1966 councilmanic election brought it to a head when the candidate's committee selected Lois Nelson to carry the GOP banner alone. Some of the more active members wanted a full slate of candidates so they broke away and joined an independent ticket called First Representatives.

Lack of co-ordination within the party failed to put a Republican or independent on council. The Democrats were still in control.

Etheridge, by now, was disgruntled with the Kellam domination. He feared Bill Kellam's election would merely be further domination of the family in government and it would be distasteful to the voters. He objected to a Kellam-controlled appointment to City Council. All of this brought a very distinct rift in the ranks.

The real break between the two political leaders came in 1966 when Etheridge refused to support the Organization's candidate for the U.S. Senate, A. Willis Robertson, who at age 79 was seeking another six year term. Etheridge threw his support to Spong, now competing for the U.S. Senate. Spong won.

And on the local level even more interesting things were happening. In 1967 Ned Caton, former member of the Kellam-controlled City Council, broke with the Organization and challenged Bill Kellam for the state senate seat. Caton, backed by Etheridge, was elected. Another Etheridge-backed independent, B.R. "Bev" Middleton, won a seat in the House of Delegates. And Etheridge, marked for political extinction after the Spong endorsement, broke Kellam's 35-year control over local elections and was re-elected city treasurer...with a tremendous majority.

The voters, at last, were in charge. And they obviously favored change. The "anti's" were not yet in control of council. But the Organization obviously was floundering. The Republicans and independents and unhappy Democrats moved in the kill.

In 1969 they elected the state's first Republican governor in a century...Linwood Holton, that mountain boy who had so impressed the people in 1965. In 1970 the voters put five strong-willed independents on City Council. In 1972 the independents gained control of council and a Republican went in as U.S. Senator.

The pendulum has, in fact, swayed so far that the voters, in 1971, deserted the independent incumbent state senator, Ned Caton, in favor of a young lawyer, A. Joseph Canada, a former Democrat and city employee appointed by the Kellam-controlled council, who switched to the Republican party.

It had been a turbulent decade for Virginia Beach, not only progressively, but politically.

Perhaps the final, most significant, incident of this change came in 1972 when Sidney Kellam, still a Democrat, supported President Richard Nixon. A Republican.

Courthouses: the old gives way to the new as government follows the people

This decade in which Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County became the City of Virginia Beach saw the demise of much of yesterday, a giving way to progress.

One of the ancients that did not survive modern trends was a shell of a building in Kempsville, a two-story building, crumbling with age, claimed by weeds and climbing ivy. It was one of the first court houses serving Princess Anne County. It dated back to 1781. But, despite its historical significance, it succumbed to bulldozers in the spurge to develop Kempsville.

It stood on a weeded plot of land for over 185 years, a reminder of days when Kempsville was in its glory, the center of a bustling community that boasted shipping wharves, tobacco warehouses and was said to be the educational and social center of the area during the colonial era.

Historians claim that courthouses and churches were the focal point of events, either social, educational, religious or judicial. That was where the action was.

The old building in Kempsville was the third courthouse in Princess Anne. The other two were in the Donation settlement near the present Old Donation Church and at New Town on the Eastern Branch of the Elizabeth River. In 1824 court matters were moved to a new building in Princess Anne...the one that still stands in the hub of today's Municipal Complex. And the courthouse in Kempsville became a Baptist Church.

The old building had an impressive history. Shortly after Cornwallis was defeated at Yorktown in 1781 several British sympathizers were taken into custody in the Kempsville area. It is believed they were tried in the courthouse for "taking up arms against their native country."

The old records tell much of the building's prominence in the development of Princess Anne County. But the courthouse did not survive progress.

Libraries: the number of branch libraries, as well as the number of books and services, has increased to keep up with the population increases.

The initial operations of the Virginia Beach Public Library System 10 years ago in an old telephone building with four staff members, 5,000 books and $28,555.55 obtained by public subscriptions and donations. It now has four branches with a staff of 54, approximately 104,000 volumes and a budget of $384,000 plus state and federal aid.

The opening of The Virginia Beach-Princess Anne County Library in October, 1959, was made possible through the efforts of citizens of both localities who felt such a facility was needed. The library was kept open by a volunteer staff. The Board of Trustees made all administrative decisions involving the library at the time.

Mrs. Celia Maestas, the first president of the Board of Trustees, also worked in the library. Mrs. Margaret Capps Beda was the first certified librarian to come into the system in July 1960. She later became library director, a position she held until June 1, 1970.

The real growth of the library began with the merger of Princess Anne County and Virginia Beach. It was also at that time it became the Virginia Beach Public Library. The average budget growth has been 20 per cent per year; circulation, 20 per cent and book collection, 15 per cent.

The need for additional facilities brought about the construction of Windsor Woods Branch on May 10, 1966; the Bayside Branch on Sept. 12, 1967; and the Kempsville Branch on April 22, 1969. The bulk of the construction was financed with federal funds made available through the Library Service and Construction Act, Title II with city monies and private donations making up the total costs.

As facilities have expanded, so have programs and services offered by the library system, according to Samuel Clay II, library director since July, 1970.

Two of the favorite services offered to children at all branches include weekly story hour sessions and film presentations. A summer reading program, special holiday projects and contests attracts hundreds of participants. Contests have included book-mark design, draw your librarian and make a puppet of your favorite character. Art and puppet shows, drama groups, and crafts courses at various branches are other activities directed at younger people.

Sculptures, records and jigsaw puzzles may now be checked out by patrons. The local system also boasts the largest 8mm film collection of any library in the state. Films appropriate for children as well as adults are circulated. Films on the first moonwalk and the Clay-Frazier fights are but two of the many which patrons may take home to enjoy. Each branch has a catalog of 16mm films which the system may borrow from the State Library for individuals and clubs.

An inter-library loan network allows library personnel to borrow requested books from a library outside of Virginia Beach if none of the branches have it.

The 12-year old bookmobile, which serves the southern end of the city and the elementary school, has generated a sizable increase in circulation and registration. It is the only contact many city residents have with books or related materials.

One of the most recent innovations of the system is the provision of services for the handicapped. It recently became the sub-regional branch for the State Commission Blind and Handicapped Service and provides braille and talking books, magazines and newspapers as well as tapes for persons in the entire planning district. A talking book machine and a cassette player are available free-of-charge. The library receives one copy of every talking book as soon as it is published and the present collection contains 3,000 books.

An urban assistance incentive grant, received recently through the governor's office will enable the library system to hire handicapped persons to work in the Handicapped Services Department. The grant provides for 10 individual including one full-time employee.

Clay said he is also interested in seeing the library work with the United Drug Abuse Council in establishing a community drug education program. He would also like to see it become the resource center for a college-entrance examination board. A person wishing to attend college and receive credits but who does not have the necessary formal background would get credits if he made an acceptable score on a standardized test. Library personnel would assist him in preparing for the test by helping him study the proper materials. "We're trying to get away from using totally book oriented," Clay commented. "I believe a library should not only be in the middle of the city but of the community. I want the library to be strongly community oriented."

In the not-too-far future, he would like to see the library provide information and referrals on such items as building codes and obtaining drivers' licenses.

"I'm interested in coordinating existing non-library housed library programs and encouraging new ones." These would include "store-front libraries" set up at such places as service stations. Book collections would also be left at places such as day care centers and nursing homes.

"I think libraries should be everywhere and everything should be in a library."

NEWPORT NEWS

Virginia Beach public school system

The Virginia Beach School System has grown in enrollment, facilities and programs since the merger of Princess Anne County and Virginia Beach city.

Approximately 26,000 students were in the early part of 1963. Today 48,030 students received their education in the city's public schools.

The 1963-64 operating budget for the new city of Virginia Beach public school system was $7,497,465. The current operating is $31,649,000.

A total of four high schools, one junior high and 22 elementary schools accommodated the students the first year of the merger. The present school term finds six high schools, four junior highs with three new ones under construction and 36 elementary schools with an additional one in the process of being built.

Personnel increased with the growth of the schools. In the 1962-63 school term the system employed 922 teachers, 33 principals and assistants, 10 supervisory and visiting teachers, two nurses and eight central administrative personnel including the superintendent.

The number of teachers increased to 1,200 in 1965-66, while six new principals and assistants were employed. A steady increase found 57 principals and assistants, 1,611 teachers, 29 supervisory and visiting teachers and 10 nurses in the 1967-68 school year; 60 principals and assistants, 1,759 teachers, 38 supervisory teachers and 13 central administrative employees in 1968-69; two nurses were added for the 1969-70 term and this year the schools employ 2,287 teachers with 80 principals and assistants.

During the 10-year period, transportation had to be improved to effectively accommodate the ever-increasing school population. In 1962-63, a total of 146 buses were operated to carry 29,209 students per day (including all trips made). The buses traveled a total of 1,400,000 miles that school term and the operating cost was $340,000.

During the 1970-71 school year, 39,000 students per day rode 266 buses operated at a cost of $390,000. The total miles traveled that year was 2,045,000.

As school attendance increase, the need for more facilities grew bringing about requests from the school administration for additional funds for construction.

At the time of the merger, the School Superintendent Frank W. Cox, asked City Council for a $9.5 million school bond referendum for a four-year building program. The program would include the construction of eight elementary schools, two high schools, additions to three existing plants and three stadiums.

In February, 1963, Council ordered the referendum reduced to $4,500,000 thus holding the program to high priority school needs. The referendum was approved by the citizens. In 1968, the citizens also voted favorably for a $14.5 million bond referendum and a $12.6 million one in 1972.

A $18.4 million referendum was voted down in 1971. It is the only one not passed since the merger. The decision of the people prompted the administration to accelerate studies on the best means of accommodating students coming into an already overcrowded system.

Studies resulted in the introduction of an innovative 45-15 school program to be implemented in June, 1973. Students at Windson Oaks, Windsor Woods, Plaza and Holland Elementary Schools will attend classes on a year-round basis—45 days in class and 15 days of vacation. The schools will be closed for two weeks for Christmas and New Year's. Other holidays will also be observed. The program will be evaluated throughout the year to determine its value in relieving overcrowding and determine any shortcomings that should be corrected.

During the 10-year period, the school administration also recognized the need for vocational-technical education resulting in the opening of the Vocational-Technical Education Center on North Landing Road on September 5, 1972. The high school students attending the Vo-Tech School will be trained technically for immediate employment following graduation.

Recent years have also seen a growth in the special education programs in the system. Many of the students attend special education classes plus one or two regular classes at the school they attend. Others are taught at the Virginia Beach Center for Effective Learning which has been in operation for four years.

Although special education has been in the school system since about 1955, major developments in program have not been until recent years. The number of special education children has increased from 159 in June, 1965 to 732 at present. A steady physical growth is evident in number of students each year during the nine years. In 1966 there were 253 special education students, 1967, 277; 1967, 423; 1968, 467; 1969, 464; 1970, 571; 1971, 712.

Of the total number of students in the program, 240 are at the Center for Effective Learning. The school has eight classes for the emotionally disturbed children including primary, intermediate and junior high, one pre-school hearing impaired class, four classes of children with learning disabilities, one class for cerebral palsy, seven classes for trainable mentally retarded and four for children with reading disabilities.

The purpose of the center is to try to help the children to the extent they can return to regular classrooms, according to Harry Blair, principal. The school meets state requirements for an accredited school and operates 180 days with 50-minute classes.

Virginia Beach Colleges

Six years ago, the paint was still sticky on new classroom walls, tracks of the heavy construction equipment were still fresh in earth that had recently sprouted corn and Virginia Wesleyan College's first student body, all 75 of them, were attending the first classes at the new college. The hum of still unfinished construction served as background music to the lectures of the College's first professors and study sessions were frequently interrupted by electricians and painters putting the final touches on Virginia Wesleyan's first dormitory-classroom complex.

Virginia Wesleyan

That was in 1966, when the dreamers, planners, educators, students and construction men were busily building a college campus on 300 acres of farm land astride the Virginia Beach - Norfolk line. Since then, the sounds of construction have seldom been absent from the campus of Virginia's youngest private college. An award-winning library now stands at the campus center. The first phase of science complex stands nearby and the first two buildings in a second dormitory-classroom complex, or Academic Village, are just across campus. And, even though the roar of heavy equipment is not heard on the campus today, plans are being made to break ground for a college chapel before next summer.

That first student body of 75, many of whom received degrees with the first graduating class in 1970, has grown to a capacity level of 826. The faculty and staff, as well as the number of course offerings, have increased.

Since 1966, when classes first began, Virginia Wesleyan College has been growing as a vibrant part of an even more rapidly growing Virginia Beach.

Like the city of Virginia Beach, Virginia Wesleyan College is still a growing youngster. But, as plans for building — inside the classroom as well as outside — unfold, College officials are optimistic. As Dean Wilson points out, "This is an exciting time in the life of the College."

In 1960 the then city manager, W. Russell Hatchett, said in an interview that he had one dream...to see Virginia Beach have its own junior college.

That dream came true in 1971 with the opening of the long-awaited Virginia Beach campus of Tidewater Community College.

Tidewater Community

Because of some fallacy in the thinking of the General Assembly—the legislators appropriated funds for the Beach Campus to operate but none for construction of the facility—the opening was not quite what had been hoped for. But it has proven to be a bonanza to local education.

Faced with the dilemma of operating a college without funds for housing, the Community College System, spurred on by an eager group of local trustees, secured 13 barracks buildings, 11 2-story and 2 1-story, at Camp

Pendleton, buildings that had been used for summer training facilities of the Virginia National Guard.

The buildings were not actually conducive to their new purpose. They lacked proper heating, shelving, lighting, the very basics needed in educational facilities. And, perhaps most importantly, they lacked that old college spirit feeling.

But the new college staff, a stalwart group of dedicated people, moved in with confidence and determination. The Beach Campus had been on the drawing board for many, many years. And it wasn't going to be held back now by a little thing like inadequate housing.

The paint began to fly, the carpenters and electricians put their shoulders to the wheel and in September 1971 Virginia Beach's own Community College opened, on schedule.

College officials had expected about 500 persons to enroll that first semester. But when the classes started the enrollment stood at 750, a sure indication that here was a badly needed facility.

By the time the Beach Campus opened this past September, the college had registered a picture of phenomenal growth. The student body had increased to 1,811; two additional 2-story barracks were added; the curriculum was expanded; the night program enrollment jumped from 300 to 600 and the number of courses offered tripled over the previous year.

Things have not been easy in the establishment of the Beach Campus. But relief is now in sight. In October City Council appropriated $680,000 to start work on site improvements for a permanent campus in the area of Green Run.

And last January the General Assembly got its thinking straight and finally granted $3.7 million to build the long-awaited Virginia Beach college.

Target date for the opening of the permanent campus is September 1974. It will be a memorable day. But there will surely be among that first class a few students and faculty members who will feel than nostalgic about leaving

Still in existence

Coast Guard Station

Winds howled through the night and tore at the foundering schooner lying off the coast of Virginia. Mammoth waves threatened to sink the ship and drown all hands aboard.

The only thing standing between the doomed sailors and death was a handful of men with a 20-foot boat and plenty of gumption. They made a living pulling desperate sailors from the coastal waters.

This was a familiar scene in 1879 when the first lifesaving station was built at Virginia Beach.

Located on the site of the still existing, but now deactivated, Coast Guard Station at 24th Street and Atlantic Avenue, the first building was made of heart lumber cut from the surrounding forests.

The original 2-story structure consisted of a large crew room where the seven members drank coffee, made their reports and took short naps and a large section where the boat and rescue equipment was kept ready at all times. A framework on top of the building, called the wildcat's nest, was used as a watch tower.

Around the station were a few buildings and the homes of the seven crew members. This was the founding of Virginia Beach. And from this meager beginning came the resort that is today one of the finest on the East Coast.

But it was a far cry from a resort in those yearly years of the lifesaving station. The members took turns walking patrols along the beach from the station to Dam Neck and back. Also to Cape Henry and back. A patrol left every three hours.

Walking along the lonely beach, surrounded by nothing but wilderness, the men scanned the sea watching for wayward ships coming too close to the shoreline. If they spotted one too far inland, they lit a warning flare.

Storms took a heavy toll among the schooners before steamships were in use. Winds hitting 105 miles per hour wrecked three ships on Virginia Beach in one day in 1889. Two of them hit near where the old Spotswood Arms Hotel (in the 19th to 20th St. area) once stood. And a fishing boat cracked up at Rudee Inlet. All but one of the crew were lost. The same storm took the entire roof off the old Princess Anne Hotel, the largest building in Virginia Beach at the time.

During World War II sailors were brought in from torpedoed ships

The lifesaving station became a Coast Guard Station but the rescue operations didn't change. Men were still saved by a line shot out to the ship and each one brought ashore via a breeches buoy.

In those early days it was such stalwarts as the late Edward Drinkwater and Manning Gray who kept the station going. "Captain" Drinkwater (as he was affectionately called) followed in his father's footsteps as a station keeper, a post he held for 30 years.

As he commented in an interview in 1969: "It wasn't all moonlight and starlight nights in those days. It was a hard life."

Gray, a station keeper from 1937 to 1949, introduced the Coast Guard amphibious DUKW to off-shore rescue operations. By testing the vehicle through heavy seas, with waves 20 feet high, the Beach pioneer proved that the DUKW would simplify the job.

During World War II the old lifesaving station again played an important part in sea rescue. Many sailors were brought into shore from torpedoed ships off the Virginia Beach coast.

Gray once told an interviewer: "One night I took the

The old and the new stand side by side rescue boat and ran out about five miles to where a ship was sinking. I didn't know that all the crew had already been taken off. When I got there a tanker came up on me out of the dark and I blinked my flashlight at it. I scared that tanker so bad, thinking I was a sub, it turned and ran." Today the Coast Guard Station stands silently on its grassy lot. Patiently awaiting its fate. The outcome of a property ownership battle between the Drinkwater heirs and motel interests will perhaps in the coming months determine whether the station will stand, as a memorial or museum or some public function, or give way to one more oceanfront luxury motel.

Agriculture: a vast change has taken place in Princess Anne County in the last decade

Take a good hard look at the industry of agriculture here—it's one of the most vital in the city.

In terms of dollars and cents it brought in $25 million in January 1, 1963, when the rural Princess Anne County tied the unbelieved knot with the city of Virginia Beach. And the projected figure for January 1, 1973 is $60 million plus.

These figures come from the office of Dick Cockrell, Extension Agent for VPI Extension Service and Virginia Beach. Cockrell has held the position since 1953.

He defines the industry of agriculture four ways: professional agriculturists; business firms that furnish supplies and equipment; the farmers themselves; marketing of the commodity.

"For instance," he says, "take the marketing category. The average person wouldn't know what to do with a hog. It's the responsibility of those connected with marketing of agricultural products to transpose that hog into a pork chop, ham or bacon."

Cockrell has seen a vast change in agriculture over the past decade, since rural Princess Anne County became part of the city.

Fewer and fewer commercial farmers are predicted for the future

"There is evidence that things are certainly in a process of change and I think it will continue," he says.

Notably, he predicts there will be fewer and fewer commercial farmers. His figures would bear this out. "In January 1, 1963, we had 394 commercial farms versus 210, anticipated for January 1, 1973. Farm acreage decreased from 62,998 to 52,486."

Cockrell says that while farmers will become fewer, the size of farms will increase tremendously. The projection for 1973 is for 300 acres plus, compared to 159 acres in 1963.

The reason? "Pure economics. The profit in farming is exceedingly small and the only way a person can make a desirable income is to produce an ever increasing quantity of goods. So when small farms become unprofitable, the owner will either sell or rent his farm to another farmer who needs more land to maintain a desirable income level."

Small profit, too, can be traced in part to the high cost of equipment and labor, he says.

"Ten years ago, a 100-horse power tractor would have cost $7,000. Today that same tractor sells for $12,000."

"Then take the fully automatic combine. It stays in the barn nine months of the year, yet it costs $35,000 today."

Cockrell's had a life-time of experience in agriculture. Raised on a farm in Northumberland County, Virginia, he received his professional training from Virginia Polytechnical Institute.

He observes that there has been a great change and increase in livestock products in the past decade.

"We've gone to environmental housing of livestock, such as swine."

He explains that hogs are now confined inside of buildings where climate is controlled, thus enabling farmers to put a much higher density of livestock in smaller areas than ever before.

"We didn't know how to control the environment a decade ago, but we do now," he says.

In addition, Cockrell notes that environmental housing of dairy cattle in 1963 was pretty much the practice of putting the cattle out to pasture and letting them forage for food.

Farmettes, for the joy of living or recreation, will increase in the future

But the picture here has changed. "Today we bring the feed to the cows in a feed lot. This way they don't waste any of it, and the cows don't burn up energy hunting for nourishment."

"As a result, a dairy cow in Virginia Beach produces about 5,000 lbs. more milk per year than in 1963. The average milk production per cow is about 15,000 lbs. today," Cockrell says.

What's more, the entire dairy operation of feeding cows is determined by computers. Therefore, the income from livestock products is projected to jump from $2.3 million in 1963, to $10 million plus in 1973.

And Cockrell notes that the nature of the countryside of the once solely rural Princess Anne County is changing.

There is Holland Road, for instance, which at one time was almost entirely a community of Mennonite family farms. The Mennonites have left these farms, and the only evidence of their former presence are the deserted barns and empty silos standing like silent sentinels over the once flourishing land.

That land is broken up now by bulldozers, in the process of constructing modern suburban housing.

But along with the great move of people into suburban housing, there seems to be an equally vital migration of people away from the concrete of the city into the country, Cockrell says.

Agriculture is one of the most vital industries in the city

"They're buying up what we call farmettes—usually between five and 25 acres. You see, many people want a place like this where they can have a collier, perhaps, or a pony or a couple of horses, and even have a family argument in private if they feel like it."

Cockrell sees this as a tremendous movement that is increasing daily. And as it does, of course, those larger farms are then broken down into the small units.

There are 400 such small farmettes today, compared to 100 in 1963.

"This is not agriculture or farming in the old sense, but in the new way. The by-product has changed from corn or soybeans to the joy of living, or recreation."

Is the land, then fertile, producing healthy crops? "Absolutely," Cockrell replies. "We lead the state in production of corn, soybeans and wheat. Virginia Beach was the first municipality to break the 100-bushel per acre corn barrier in 1962, and we're still leading in corn."

What does Cockrell foresee as major changes in the future of farming in the 10-year-old resort city?

"My crystal ball won't tell me exactly when changes are coming, but they will happen, I know."

One of the major categories to benefit from the great movement of people into townhouses and subdivisions that will gradually creep over the rural areas, is that of ornamental landscaping.

"As these dwellings are constructed there will be a demand for their landscaping."

Already the jump in nursery sales is impressive:

$111,116 in 1963; $381,893 plus projected for January 1, 1973.

And Cockrell says that in terms of dollars produced through farming, we have not yet reached the peak. "But it will soon be reached, and then we will have a gradual decline."

Dick Cockrell laments the loss of nature's balance

million in farm dollars produced in 1954, to $18 million plus in 1973.

"I believe the peak is somewhere around $20 million. But as resources are removed from farming, and land is lost, there will be a steady decline in the years ahead."

"I also think there will still be some kind of commercial farming in the lower city by the year 1993, but it will be a different kind."

Cockrell predicts that the complexion of farms will change...there will be large farms owned by the very rich for their enjoyment, and there will be a vast number of small farmettes. The single largest farming commodity, he says, will be nursery stock to supply the demand for landscaping of new city dwellings.

"It seems inevitable that as land value increases, land will be removed to satisfy the need of the people."

But Cockrell laments the loss of nature's balance. "The trees and plants consume carbon dioxide, remember, and they give off oxygen...and oxygen is the key to life."

Industrial and economic development

The Virginia Beach Department of Economic Development began operation on September 1, 1970. This department is headed by A. James DeBellis and reports directly to the city manager's office.

Prior to the Department of Economic Development, all industrial development was handled by the City Council appointed Industrial Development Commission. This commission pioneered the industrial development of Virginia Beach with the establishment of two industrial parks, the 20 acre Lynnhaven Industrial Park and the 170 acre Airport Industrial Park.

Industrial development is important to a city in that it serves to broaden the tax base and to equalize the tax load. For example, Airport Industrial Park was producing $38.70 per acre (170 acres) of land prior to its establishment as an industrial park. The present acre return to the City in real estate taxes alone will be in excess of $900 per acre, based on a land and improvement value of $69,800 per acre.

1972 has been significant in the area of new construction. Construction, either currently under way or completed this year, has totaled 511,500 square feet, with a 5.05 million dollar value, in areas outside the established industrial parks with 420,000 square feet, with a four million dollar value, within established industrial park boundaries.

New light industrial companies who have located in Virginia Beach in 1972 are processing, service, and distribution oriented. The City will receive tax benefits from real estate alone of $116,745 per year as a result. Their location will also add 484 new jobs.

The Department operates under a "resort economic development" concept. This means that new industrial businesses must be compatible to the tourist industry. New industry must strive to maintain clean air, open sky, beautiful beach, and a general climate for healthy recreational activities.

By achieving such compatible growth, the Department serves to broaden the City's economic base so that all segments of business activity and the individual property owner provide a fair share of operational revenue. These expanded revenue sources are created by increased employment, expanded payrolls, increase in tourism and turnover of fresh outside money, construction of additional commercial and tourist accommodations, location of new and expanding businesses and their resultant

BUILDING PERMITS AND VALUES

In 1963, 3165 building permits were issued, representing a total value of $44,353,193 in construction. 1966 was the only year during this ten year period that construction has been less. From 1963 through 1971, 30,863 building permits were issued with a total construction value of $599,490,869.

LABOR AND EMPLOYMENT

The population of Virginia Beach has grown from 85,218 in 1960 to over 200,000 today. In 1960, the civilian work force totaled 14,201. 34,570 people made up the civilian work force in 1971. Approximately 20,000 people were also employed at Little Creek, Oceana, Dam Neck, and Fort Story military bases.

TOURIST DOLLARS

In 1961, the total tourist gross was $12,573,730. This year, the tourist spend more than $60,000,000 in Virginia Beach. $196,385 was collected in 1965 from the hotel room and meal tax. This year, the figure was $288,698. The restaurant meals tax resulted in $206,584 in 1965 and $482,338 in 1972.

PROPERTY TAXES

$4,592,347 was collected in fiscal year 1964 in general property taxes. In 1972, the figure had grown to $16,692,834.

BUSINESS LICENSES

Business license sales totaled $597,233 in 1965. The 1972 figure doubled to $1,717,125.

TAXABLE PROPERTY

In 1964, the assessed value of real property in the City was $167,487,590 and the estimated appraised value was $465,243,305. By 1972, the real property assessed value had jumped to $659,747,836, and the estimated appraised value stood at $1,099,579,727.

The personal property figures jumped just as drastically. Assessed value of personal property increased from $3,787,487 in 1964 to $37,346,968 in 1972. The estimated appraised value jumped from $37,874,870 to $106,705,623.

SHOPPING CENTER DEVELOPMENT

Princess Anne Plaza opened in May 1961 with three stores increasing to 25 by the end of the year. Today, 42 businesses are located in the complex. Pembroke Mall opened March 1966 1967 with 48 firms and has grown to 66 today. Pembroke Meadows opened in 1972 with nine stores, and fourteen are in business now. Aragona opened in 1957 with one store. Today seventeen merchants are located there. Other Beach shopping centers opening within the past two years include Haygood, Hilltop North, Carolanne, Kempville Plaza, Arrowhead Plaza, and the Lynnhaven Mini-Mall.

VIRGINIA BEACH CIVIC CENTER

Between 1964 and 1967, the Department caused an average of 6,600 conventioners per year to come to Virginia Beach. In 1967, $800,000 was generated in convention business.

During 1972 alone, the Department brought in eight convention groups totaling 10,700 delegates. These conventioners spent $2,182,500 while in Virginia Beach.

RUDEE INLET

The Rudee Inlet charter boats numbered twenty-two in 1972. Fishermen renting these boats spent about $1,000,000 while in the City.

1972 industrial construction in Virginia Beach measured 931,500 square feet and will add 484 new jobs for the residents

Parks and recreation

Ten years ago, the City of Virginia Beach's Department of Parks and Recreation had only two employees. Today, the Department has 90 full-time employees and 100-175 part-time employees, the part-time employment varying with the season.

In 1963, the Department operated just eight tennis courts, eight ball diamonds, six football fields, six gymnasiums, no parks, no boat ramps, no picnic shelters, no municipal golf course, and a very small activities program schedule.

Today, the City has 70 tennis courts, 51 of which are lighted; 85 ball diamonds, 30 of them lighted; 29 football fields, 21 of them lighted; 25 gymnasiums for year-round activities; three large parks; 94 playgrounds and neighborhood parks; 20 large picnic shelters; three surfing areas; a 144-acre oceanfront park; two municipal marinas; a boat ramp; and Red Wing Lake Municipal Golf Course.

There is no admission to any of the City's parks or playgrounds. At most of them, a full range of equipment may be checked out at no charge.

There is no admission to any of the City's parks or playgrounds

Besides the physical facilities, instructional classes are offered year-round. About 500 full classes are conducted each year, featuring more than fifty different types of activities, arts and crafts, etc.

Athletic teams are also on the upswing. The Department was responsible for 70 community league teams in 1963. This year the figure has jumped to approximately 700. They are organized under the direction of the Recreation Division for youth and adults, men and women. Adult physical fitness programs are held in the high school gymnasiums, and nearly 9,000 adults participate in them yearly.

Beach Fire Department

Substantial changes have been witnessed in the City's fire protection service during the past ten years, ranging from a closer coordination of volunteer fire departments to the placing of full time paid firemen in previously all volunteer units.

The only paid firemen at the time of the 1963 merger were those in the Beach Borough, the previous City of Virginia Beach. The remainder of the newly created City was served by volunteer fire departments utilized in the former Princess Anne County. At that time each of the fire departments, with the exception of the Plaza unit, maintained volunteer rescue squads to meet medical emergencies. All of these units are in operation today.

The 1963 strength of the Beach Borough department stood at 15 paid firemen, and several volunteers. Today that unit's strength is 19 paid and 35 volunteer firemen. Basically the strength of the volunteers in the City has remained stable during the past ten years, numbering approximately 450.

The first major fire protection service change after the merger was the method of dispatching equipment and men to the scene of fire alarms.

Prior to 1963 fire alarms were set off at the Beach Borough, Oceana, Seatack and London Bridge units electronically from the dispatchers office located in the Beach Borough fire station at 20th Street and Arctic Avenue. The alarms at the remaining stations were activated by placing a phone call to the station. In 1963 alarms at all fire stations in the city were electronically connected to the dispatchers office.

The purchase of new fire fighting equipment to replace apparatus no longer usable, or to bring individual stations up to standard, got underway in 1964. During the past decade this has resulted in the purchase of 18 new pumps and a 100 foot aerial fire truck to replace the 65 foot aerial unit at Beach Borough, which was relocated in the Chesapeake Beach volunteer department. The city, in 1972, also placed orders for two additional new pumps and another aerial fire truck.

The construction of new fire stations to replace antiquated structures got underway in 1968 with the construction of the present Princess Anne Courthouse and Plaza stations, in the Princess Anne Courthouse Complex and Windsor Woods areas.

The only paid firefighters in 1963 were 15 Beach Borough men

The loss of an important rescue service was witnessed in 1970 when the Beach Borough fire department had to dispose of its amphibious DUKW, utilized in emergencies developing in offshore waters of Chesapeake Bay, the Atlantic Ocean, and/or lakes or rivers of City. The move became necessary when the DUKW was declared unsafe due to deterioration resulting from continual use for too long a period of time. This left the City dependent upon Fort Story to furnish such a service. The City immediately entered into negotiations with the Federal Government to obtain a similar unit, which had been declared surplus, but was unsuccessful.

In September 1971 E.B. "Bubber" Bayne was appointed City Fire Chief by City Manager Roger M. Scott, following a request from Scott for fire departments of the city to nominate the person they felt most qualified for the position.

Bayne began implementing the Municipal Fire Protection Study recommendations in July 1972 by adding an instructor to his staff to formulate a continuous training program for all firemen of the city. He began expanding the number of paid firemen in the City by adding 36 paid firemen, between August and October of 1972, to the previously all volunteer fire departments. These were divided among Chesapeake Beach, Kempsville, Davis Corner and Plaza departments. Bayne's next step in reorganization of the fire protection service was the dividing of the city into two districts, and the appointment in December 1972 of a district chief to supervise operation of all fire departments in their respective region. That same month also saw approval of the design of another new fire station for the city. The facility, for which funds were included in the 1972-1973 portion of the City's "Five Year Capital Improvement Plan", is planned for future construction with the completion of the new Old Dominion Road. It will be situated between First Colonial and Great Neck Roads, and will replace the existing Oceana fire station.

When asked what he felt was the most significant advancement in fire protection during the past ten years Bayne replied, "The improvements we've made in hiring men and improving the program. The next big thing we need is a permanent training facility."

Bayne concluded, "Our fire fighting procedures are continually changing with the times. We have the respect of the people. Adding paid firemen has added efficiency in getting to fires faster. It has brought good comments from the public and the volunteers. Overall, I feel like our relationships with the public are improving."

Beach General Hospital

The General Hospital of Virginia Beach came into existence December 1, 1961 through the efforts of residents who realized the fast growing city could not continue to be dependant on Norfolk for medical facilities.

At the time the citizens formed a committee to investigate the feasibility of a community hospital, the only hospital in the city was a private 36-bed one owned by Dr. H.F. Dormire and W.L. Taylor. Built in 1948 at 25th and Arctic, the hospital offered medical, surgical and obstetrics services.

Conducting two fund-raising campaigns the citizens group obtained the monies to purchase the hospital from the doctors as well as property adjacent to it for the purpose of expansion. The group also made application to Hill-Burton for federal assistance in building a new hospital. Realizing it would be several years before plans and construction could be completed, the group provided for 10 additional beds in the old facility.

At the same time the Virginia Beach citizens were working toward a community hospital, a group of citizens of the Princess Anne Plaza area were investigating the possibilities of establishing a hospital there and had applied for a Hill-Burton grant. They also started a fund-raising campaign.

The State Health Department indicated it could not allocate funds for two hospitals in the area and suggested the two groups get together.

The two groups merged; the Hill-Burton application was approved and the two fund-raising campaigns netted approximately $1,400,000. Plans for a 105-bed facility with the necessary supporting services were drawn up by Baskerville and Spns of Richmond. The contract was let and construction of the hospital on First Colonial Road began in August, 1963. The land on which the hospital was built was donated by Mrs. Levi Old.

The hospital opened in July, 1965 with 24 obstetric beds, 72 beds for medical and surgical cases including pediatrics and nine intensive care patients. There were also some beds for private nursing care. The facility had a well-equipped X-ray laboratory. The hospital at 25th Street was closed.

Realizing that the 105-bed facility was not going to be sufficient in the future, the Board of Directors applied for federal assistance in the construction of a 50-bed wing and a third floor accommodating 76 beds. Only funds for the 50-bed wing section were approved and the 25th Street facility was opened to handle the overflow. The North Wing was completed in January, 1969.

The Board was still aware that the facility would not be able take care of the rapid growth of the area and began making plans for completing the third floor and floating the shell of the fourth floor. Knowing that federal monies were not available for the project, the Board began another fund-raising campaign. Once again the community rallied and construction was begun July, 1969.

The third phase of construction, completed July, 1971, included the floor for 76 beds, expanded ancillary facilities, bigger laboratories and X-ray laboratory.

Currently, an application is in for approval by the Tidewater Health Planning Council for the completion of the fourth floor. Once funds are available for the completion of the floor, the hospital will have a total of 320 beds.

Future expansion plans include programs for the construction of satellite facilities in outlying areas as growth requires. The satellites would be ambulatory care centers.

Currently, an emergency coronary care program, partially funded by a federal grant, is underway. The project will enable emergency crews of rescue squads to communicate directly with a doctor at the hospital to determine the patient's condition and what should be done for him prior to his arrival at the hospital.

The staff of doctors connected with the hospital has increased from 16 when the facility was first incorporated to 90, with numerous physicians serving as consultants.

Norfolk Airport

The Norfolk Regional Airport, which serves the Tidewater metropolitan area, is being expanded to better serve the needs of the local residents and businesses.

The Norfolk Port and Industrial Authority, which owns and operates the facility, adopted a Bond resolution authorizing the sale of $26.5 million in revenue bonds to finance the expansion. The Federal Aviation Administration through the Airport Development Aide Program participated in the expansion program with a grant of an additional $5.4 million.

As a result of the Airport expansion program, the four airlines—Allegheny, National, Piedmont and United—which serve the airport, will have the added capabilities of programming longer flights and using larger aircraft for the convenience of the passengers utilizing the facility.

In addition to the increased operational capabilities afforded the airlines, passengers will experience greater convenience in baggage handling, ticket processing and aircraft boarding.

To facilitate the expansion, additional land was obtained from the city of Norfolk. This land was a portion of the Norfolk Botanical Garden. The Port Authority initiated a program to redevelop the gardens by relocating plants in newly developed garden areas. In addition, a new garden gate, rest room facilities, superintendent's residence, maintenance building, parking lot and trails were programmed and paid for by the Authority to improve the facilities of the Gardens.

In an effort to maintain continuity between the neighboring airport and the Botanical Gardens, a Joint Venture Team of architects and engineers was enlisted by the Port Authority to study and make proposals for a revised Master Plan of the Gardens as well as the airport.

The Port Authority required that the Joint Venture Team develop the Master Plan around three important parameters—1. expansion of the airport; 2. redevelopment and improvement of the Gardens, and 3. integration of the Gardens and the airport. The Joint Venture Team is composed of Shriver and Holland & Associates of Norfolk, architects for building; Ralph H. Burke Associates of Park Ridge, Ill. engineers for runway and taxiway and Sasaki, Dawson, DeMay Associates of Watertown, Mass., architects for landscaping.

The Master Plan which resulted was approved by the Norfolk Port and Industrial Authority with the concurrence and approval of various other commissions and agencies interested in the continued development of the Botanical Gardens and the airport.

On Aug. 24, 1972, a jury representing the Virginia State Chapter of the American Institute of Architects presented a 1972 Honor Award to the Joint Venture Team for the development of the Master Plan. The jury commented that the plan was a "very successful relocation of the new and older spaces with skillful separation of dissimilar functions."

To implement this plan, the Port Authority entered into contracts for the redevelopment and improvement of the Gardens and the construction of a new Terminal Building.

The future Norfolk Regional Airport access roads, parking lots and an aircraft apron as its airport improvement program. Improvements were made to the existing runways and taxiways to enable them to accommodate larger and heavier aircraft. The primary runway was overlaid with asphalt to provide added strength and was extended 1500 feet to the north to provide the added length required for programming longer flights and the accommodation of larger aircraft. A new fuel storage and loading facility was constructed to better serve the needs of the Airlines. The new facility has a capability of storing 1.1 million gallons of jet fuel.

The currently approved construction program is scheduled for completion in the first quarter of 1974. At that time the residents of the local area will be presented with a facility designed to serve the increasing demands of air transportation, provide added convenience to passengers and be a step in the direction of making the Tidewater area the most progressive area on the Eastern Seaboard.

Daniel Boone in Virginia Beach?

There's a rugged old stone monument standing on the Oceanfront at 17th Street that has for decades remained a mystery as to its purpose.

There are no engraved works to give a clue. Only a metal plate that shows, to those who look closely, a tall man in a knee-length fringed hunting shirt, deerskin leggings and moccasins with his trusty rifle and faithful hunting dog. Immediately above the plate is an engraved bear with the word "trail" etched in amateurish script.

A little thought and study and one might realize that the plaque is engraved with the traditional picture of Daniel Boone.

But why Daniel Boone? The famous frontiersman made history with his trek to the West, by establishing Wilderness Road (now U.S. 25 or "Dixie Highway"), by discovering Cumberland Gap. But why is a monument to him in Virginia Beach?

Shaped like an arrowhead and built of granite rock and coarse cement, the monument was built in late 1937 by a man who identified himself as a retired history professor at Wake Forest College.

His name was J. Hampton Rich. He said he was a descendant of Boone. And he said that the frontiersman started his trek westward from the ocean at 17th Street.

Rich appeared before City Council, then under the mayorship of Roy Smith, and presented documents in Boone's handwriting that indicated the trail had been started at this point.

J. Clarence Hayman, retired justice of the peace who was at that time assistant city judge, told a reporter in 1960: "I distinctly remember the old gentleman reading the records before council. He had a picture of the maps Boone made showing the presumed trail."

"The records said he started westward by foot from the sea not too far south of where Capt. John Smith landed. That would be Cape Henry, of course. Boone was not too well educated, but he had a keen mind and the documents appeared accurate to me. After all, we couldn't deny them."

A. Worth Petty, who is still with the Department of Community Services, came to Virginia Beach shortly after the monument was erected. He told a reporter some years ago he had an opportunity to meet Professor Rich on one of his return visits.

"He was president of an organization called Sons of Daniel Boone, he told me, and the documents had been handed down from generation to generation until they finally came to him. He was convinced that Boone came here to see the ocean and that the point at 17th Street was the most logical place for him to start his journey."

The monument, built in faith by strangers to the area, has gone untouched through the years. It has not weathered too well. The top has been chipped off the metal plaque, painted silver many times over, has rusted almost beyond recognition.

When it could be read its words raised a few questions. For instance, one line at the bottom of the plaque notes: "Metal from Battleship Maine in Tablet." An insert in the upper right hand corner reads, "In Honor of John A. Lesner — Pioneer Good Roads Builder." The connection between the two inscriptions has never been determined.

Retired City Manager W. Russell Hatchett once offered his opinion: "It just may have been that he felt Senator Lesner deserved credit for building the Lynnhaven Bridge and road."

But on the back of the monument, facing the ocean, here is the etched profile of an Indian chief. And there is no inscription to explain his presence there.

Hurd's Seafood Restaurant

Hurd's Seafood Restaurant

Way back off the beaten path, on a winding road bordering Lynnhaven River, set an eating establishment that for 36 years has been making a growing name for itself. Not because of advertising or impressive facilities but because of its outstanding seafood.

For over a quarter of a century, HURD'S SEAFOOD RESTAURANT has been growing in popularity with Tidewater residents and vacationers.

Always strictly a family affair, the restaurant opened originally as a form of therapy for Mrs. Grace Hurd who had been uprooted from her Norfolk home and placed in the "wilds" of the Lynnhaven woods when her husband, Richard, moved out of the city to take over a milk route for Birtchard's Dairy.

The first restaurant was in a run-down building on the same property the present one is located. It seated about 40 people and Ms. Hurd did all the cooking on two stoves, one coal and one oil. The menu included fried chicken and oysters with whatever vegetables or "fixins" the Hurd family happened to have on hand.

It was a modest beginning. An old record book, that would make a modern bookkeeper cringe, tells in penciled letters and figures what a struggle the early days were. One week Mrs.

Hurd cleared $7.24. Another week is jumped to over $12. Then the following week she lost $8 on her business venture.

Gradually, however, the figures began an upward climb. Word of mouth advertising brought a great number of Navy personnel to the eating establishment during the early months of World War II. The first party at the restaurant, which drew crowds because of its "all the oysters you can eat for $1" slogan, had to eat off paper plates because Mrs. Hurd only had six dinner plates and couldn't afford to buy more. She borrowed silverware to feed the group and profits from this first party sent HURD'S on its way.

Her sons waited on tables while her daughters gave their mother a hand in the kitchen. The restaurant continued to grow in popularity until in 1941, HURD'S found it necessary to expand. They added a big front section onto their modest home that would seat 250 and opened to an eager clientele before the addition was even completed. By now it was obvious the restaurant was first and foremost in the family so Mr. Hurd quit his job and devoted himself to the restaurant.

Location of the restaurant should be a great handicap but its patrons have always supported it even when the roads were impassable.

On one occasion, a big party hired three wreckers to take the cars in and out after a big rain. The mud was so deep the roads were nothing but bogs. The customers used to take off their shoes and wade in and Mrs. Hurd would give them a big tub to wash their feet in.

From all these experiences has grown the eating establishment known as HURD'S SEAFOOD RESTAURANT.

Today the roads are paved but they lead to the same type of food that was served 36 years ago. After the death of Mr. and Mrs. Hurd in 1961 and 1962, respectively, their daughter, Patricia took over as the manager.

Things were a bit rough at first. Barbara Hurd Hickey, another daughter, had just had a baby, and son, Harry Hurd was attending Fredrick Military Academy. But the Hurd children had the same drive as their parents.

"Barbara would bring the baby over in a bassinet and put her in the office. We would leave the door open so we could hear if she cried. The noise never bothered her and if she cried, someone would run to take care of her," reminisces Pat.

Times have changed and a great many food institutions have gone to fast food service. In spite of this modern food processing, HURD'S still pans their own oysters, picks, cleans and cooks their own shrimp, cleans their own softshell crabs, etc.

The menu is basically the same as it was in 1936 with most food being served on a large platter. Although they are specialists in seafood, HURD'S also has a variety of dinners for land lubbers.

In 1967, HURD'S became a family corporation with Pat as president. She was practically raised in the restaurant; having worked there since she was 15 years old. She is now the overall manager.

Barbara is the first vice president and does all the panning of oysters, flounder, and perch and helps Pat supervise the kitchen.

"HURD'S feels that personal contact with customers is most important," commented Pat. Obviously, that is why, Harry and Mrs. Ruth Hurd Killingsworth are in the dining room to assist customers.

Harry, second vice president, is the host. Mrs. Killingsworth, secretary; treasurer, who recently retired from the Naval Supply Center in Norfolk after 30 years of service, is also in the dining room to make sure customers are welcomed and satisfied so they will return.

When liquor by the drink was voted in during December of 1968, HURD'S got its license on January 22, 1969. Pat and Harry didn't take a "hit and miss" attitude toward mixed drinks either. Instead, they both attended the U.S. Bar School in Norfolk and are licensed mixologists.

With more and more customers every week, HURD'S was well on its way until a disastrous fire struck on November 11, 1969. "It was an electrical fire and destroyed nearly 50 per cent of the interior," said Pat. "It was heartbreaking but we went right to work to rebuild the restaurant. Many friends and neighbors offered their help and customers were constantly calling me to find out when we were going to be open again," Pat added.

June 5, 1970 was the day, and according to Pat, "the doors opened to standing room only, with a line waiting out as far as the middle of the parking lot."

The reputation of HURD'S was certainly upheld by the loyal customers who came on opening night.

By being extremely popular with the local residents (a lot of which were and still are military personnel) the name and reputation of HURD'S is world renowned. This explains why every year Virginia Beach has more and more vacationers, and more and more of them are going out of their way for some really good seafood in a homelike atmosphere.

Not only do the customers feel at home at HURD'S but several of the employees have been at the restaurant for years and years; making everyone sort of "part of the family." The chef, Joseph Roscoe, has been working there for 25 years, and has seen Pat, Barbara and Harry grow up and take over the business.

As Mrs. Hurd used to say, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again." HURD'S SEAFOOD RESTAURANT is one family establishment that is really trying and succeeding in giving local and vacationing customers a reason to drive down that long winding road bordering Lynnhaven River.

Police Department

One of the areas of major improvements in public service in the resort city during the past decade has been in the field of law enforcement. Increased police personnel, creation of new operational units, and a continuing modernization of the Police Department through technical advances has resulted in greater citizen protection.

The merger of the former City of Virginia Beach with Princess Anne County created a police department with a strength of 71 sworn officers. This included 47 former County officers, 21 officers from the previous city, and three civilian employees. Today's department strength stands at 290. This includes 222 sworn police officers, invested with full police authority; 34 dispatchers, who, while wearing a uniform and identifying badge, do not have police powers and are not armed; and 34 civilians, who are utilized in various administrative and/or clerical positions. Of the total 222 officers, 143 hold the rank of patrolmen, and 26 are veterans of from 10 to 30 years service as police officers.

The city's recognition of the importance of its police officers is reflected in a number of ways, but perhaps the most personal is the increased monetary benefit to these men. For example, the starting salary of a police patrolman in 1963 was $355 per month, today that salary has increased to $614 per month.

At the merger of the former city and county, the police department was equipped with 34 motor vehicles, including one motorcycle, with 15 of the vehicles previously seconds. They are accurate, and flexible, to the point that they fully replaced earlier teletype systems in the resort city police department as of November, 1971.

Plans call for the initiation the future of another similar communications system called the Central Criminal Records Exchange (CCRE), operating out of the Virginia

The Police Department had 34 motor vehicles in 1963 and 110 today

State Police headquarters in Richmond, Va. CCRE will provide resort city police with any individual's complete criminal history anywhere in the State.

One of the lesser known police operations concerns the Auxiliary Police, whose members devote their nights, weekends, and other spare time from their regular employment to police work. Each of these men are thoroughly trained in law enforcement, police duties, and use of firearms. They accompany uniformed police officers during regular patrols, and assist in law enforcement. Each of these men are required to meet standards identical to all sworn police officers.

The police department in January 1971 acquired a Mobile Crime Lab, to provide more thorough investigation in the field. Fully equipped, and self-sustaining, the unit brings all equipment to any crime scene required for the gathering of evidence, and its preservation for later use. This also includes any photography which may be necessary during an investigation.

used in the former County. Today the department is equipped with 110 motor vehicles, including 4 motorcycles.

While Virginia Beach is fortunate in containing an abundance of waterways for relaxation and enjoyment, the dangers they present have not been overlooked. Protection was offered to watersport enthusiasts and fishermen in the Lynnhaven Inlet and Linkhorn Bay areas in 1963 by a police boat, which was operated earlier by the County police department and based at Lynnhaven Inlet. In 1969 this service was expanded by placing a second police boat into service out of Rudee Inlet. During the warm weather months these units constantly patrol waterways, and the Chesapeake Bay and Atlantic Ocean shorelines to aid in any emergency.

In September 1963 the police Underwater Rescue & Recovery Team was organized. Their primary assignment consists of searching the ocean, bays, or inland creeks and ponds for drowning victims, evidence in criminal cases, and sunken boats and automobiles. The team has expanded from its initial strength of 8 men to 12 men, all of whom are thoroughly trained in surface and underwater practical search problems, and basic demolition.

Two additional services initiated shortly after the formation of the present City were the police Traffic Bureau and K-9 Corps. Men of the Traffic Bureau are charged with enforcement of traffic laws on resort city thoroughfares, and investigation of all traffic accidents whether involving property damage or the loss of life. When the K-9 Corps was organized, it contained 4 trained handlers and dogs. This has been expanded to 8 teams today. Each team is thoroughly trained, and retrained periodically, for use in incidents such as crowd control, the searching of buildings, fields, and dense woods for lawbreakers, as well as tracking suspects who flee the scene of a crime.

Special Weapons Range was constructed in 1964 for training of all police officers in the use of firearms. The ensuing years have seen the improving of the range to the standard of its being adopted as the official firearm training range by several State and Federal law enforcement agencies, and the Tidewater Police Academy.

Another area of vast improvements in the police department during the past ten years was in the field of communications. This included the establishing of a secondary radio frequency. The main frequency is still devoted to the major portion of radio communication between police headquarters, and the various bureaus, to units in the field. The secondary frequency is reserved for priority communications in the event of emergencies or serious crimes where specially designated units are assigned and require immediate radio service availability, and/or administrative type communications.

The department has also joined a highly technical telecommunications system linking it with the National Crime Information Center (NCIC), the Virginia Criminal Information Network (V-CIN), and the Tidewater Electronic Police Information Network (TENPIN).

NCIC, operated by the FBI headquarters in Washington, D.C., provides resort city police with information as to whether any individual is wanted for any felony violation of the law anywhere in the United States. The system can also identify recovered merchandise, or specific items, as having been stolen anywhere in the United States.

V-CIN provides an exchange of police information on file between virtually all police departments, as well as some sheriff's departments, in the entire State. The system also provides a link with the State Department of Motor Vehicles for comparison of information regarding any motor vehicle, license plate, or operators license registered in the State.

TENPIN provides a direct link with all Tidewater police departments and offers background information on any individual including arrest records, type of law broken, and court disposition.

All of these systems function with such proficiency that the requesting station is furnished with an answer to inquiries, whether positive or negative, in a matter of

Rudee Inlet: a 16 year old problem and a decade filled with financial and legal difficulties

Perhaps the most perplexing problem the City of Virginia Beach inherited in the merger with former Princess Anne County was the development of Rudee Inlet, which began nearly six years before the merger.

As the City celebrates its 10th anniversary of that merger it is still entangled in that 16 year old problem, and reflects on a decade filled with financial and legal difficulties in that development. Today a number of these difficulties have yet to be resolved.

Development of Rudee Inlet began in 1957, at the request of surrounding land owners who petitioned the Princess Anne County Board of Supervisors to cultivate the potential which they saw in the area.

The Virginia Beach-Princess Anne County Rudee Inlet Development Committee was created in 1959, and given the responsibility of the project. Shortly after its formation the Committee decided the scope of the project was too large for it to accomplish.

In 1960 the Virginia General Assembly created the Rudee Inlet Authority for the purpose of the economic development of Rudee Basin.

January 1964 witnessed the first physical move in the development of Rudee Basin when the Authority began acquiring of land necessary for a marina site. While the majority of the property was purchased, the refusal to sell on the part of some property owners resulted in the Authority instigating condemnation procedures to obtain land.

Owners of property acquired through condemnation challenged the procedure from Judge Robert S. Wahab, Jr.

Although the decision was appealed to the State Supreme Court, it halted all plans for the development of a marina at Rudee Basin, and ultimately resulted in the disbanding of the Rudee Inlet Authority.

The State Supreme Court's upholding of Judge Wahab's decision in 1966 resulted in the Authority deciding it could no longer function as originally intended, and proposed conveying all property acquired at Rudee Basin to the city. City Council voted to assume the responsibility of developing the Rudee Basin marina and to retain the Rudee Inlet Authority in a capacity of advisor to Council. All Authority assets and liabilities were transferred to Council.

The City succeeded in having the State construct the high-level bridge to accommodate marine traffic into and out of Rudee Basin, with the construction completed in September 1967.

The City unveiled its plans for a marina complex at Rudee Basin in August 1967, which included a motel, restaurant, saltwater aquarium, and marina for a charter fishing fleet.

The first major setback in establishing the Rudee Basin marina occurred in November 1967 when the State Commission of Outdoor Recreation declined to approve State funds for construction of the marina.

After numerous attempts by the city to obtain a reversal of the decision the Commission reaffirmed its opinion that the proposed marina would not be of primary service to the general public and postponed any further consideration of granting financial aid.

April 1968 witnessed City Council approving the construction of a temporary marina and leasing of slips to a charter fishing fleet. Charter boats began operating from the marina shortly thereafter.

A continual build-up of sand in the Rudee Inlet channel and sandtrap, which at times left the channel impassable, prompted a decision, in October 1969, to consider replacing Erosion Commission dredges with larger commercial dredging equipment. The Army Corps of Engineers was also requested to investigate the possibility of the federal government assuming maintenance of Rudee Inlet.

The controversy over the best method of keeping the inlet open continued until the Spring of 1972, when a commercial dredge replaced Erosion Commission efforts in clearing the inlet channel and sandtrap. Ironically, this move was directly connected, however, to efforts to correct severe eroding of resort strip beaches attributed to heavy storm activity.

The Rudee Basin Economic Study released in February 1970 showed that while the City had invested 13 years in numerous phases of the project, a sum nearly equal to the originally estimated $1.5 million in capital expenditures, the development of Rudee Inlet had not yet been realized. The investment already made was too large to warrant discontinuance of the project.

City Council, in June 1972, authorized the Department of Economic Development to dispose of all city-owned interests at Rudee Basin for the purpose of commercially developing the area. This development was proposed through a design-bid procedure. The bid proposal stipulated the facility would contain a marina to accommodate 19 charter fishing boats, plus a motel, restaurant, aquarium complex with at least 12 slips to accommodate publicly owned pleasure craft.

While these bids have been received, and accepted by the City, final consummation of the sale and development of the land is still being delayed by litigation involving privately owned property in the area.

Beach-Norfolk

Expressway

December 1, 1967 witnessed the opening of the Virginia Beach - Norfolk Expressway to relieve the increasing traffic volume on Virginia Beach Boulevard between the two cities.

The Expressway was constructed by the State Department of Highways, at a cost of $29.8 million. It was financed through a 40 year $34 million bond issue, with imposing of tolls upon motorists to assist in retiring the bonds.

The east - west bound two lane dual highway covers a distance of 12.1 miles, providing entrance and exit ramps at intersections with primary north - south bound roadways, between Baltic Avenue and Newtown Road. At this point the Expressway connects with Interstate 64.

The importance of the Expressway is perhaps best exemplified in reviewing traffic and revenue statistics. During its first year of operation traffic volume totaled 9,676,973 vehicles, resulting in $1,873,522.63 in revenue from tolls. During its five year operational period ending on December 1, 1972 these figures more than doubled. During the year ending last month the traffic volume increased to 19,033,850 vehicles producing a toll revenue of $3,736,492.57.

The expressway fails to relieve traffic on Virginia Beach Boulevard

Before the Expressway had been in operation one year, heavier than anticipated traffic made it evident that additions to the Expressway were required. In 1968 the east bound exit ramp at Independence Boulevard was widened, and an automatic toll collection unit installed at this point.

While the above facts indicate the Expressway continues to attract increasing number of motorists, statistics indicate Virginia Beach Boulevard did not decrease to the degree anticipated, and it would also appear the Expressway failed to play any large role in making the Boulevard a safer thoroughfare. This becomes evident in reviewing the Boulevard's accident record over a two year period.

From September 1970 to September 1971 a total of 729 accidents were recorded on Virginia Beach Boulevard. During the identical period between 1971 and 1972, 826 accidents were recorded, representing an increase of some 13 per-cent. These accidents also resulted in 11 fatalities on the Boulevard during this two year period.

Highway improvements

One of the major areas of progress in Virginia Beach during the past ten years, and one which has benefited everyone, is the vast improvements in the streets, highways and bridges of the city.

A partial picture of the scope of the program is obtained in pointing out nearly $13.5 million was expended in two major bridges, five key highway projects, and three important city streets alone. This does not include continuing repairs to some 75 secondary thoroughfares.

When considering the financial aspect of the program it is important to remember the bridge and highway projects were financed on a cooperative basis, with 85 percent of the cost covered by Federal and State funds and Virginia Beach bearing the remaining 15 percent.

The major projects began in 1966 with an addition to the Lesner Bridge on Shore Drive, at Lynnhaven Inlet, when an increasing traffic load on Shore Drive could no longer be handled by the existing structure.

Basically this involved the construction of a second bridge span, adjoining the existing structure, creating two new traffic lanes to handle west-bound traffic. The overall cost of the addition was $1,217,000.

Three projects which got underway in 1967 involved the largest amount of funds invested in the overall program, representing a combined expenditure of $6,020,000.

Mushrooming residential and commercial development of the area made extensive improvements to Independence Boulevard necessary, creating the thoroughfare which exists today. The work, which covered a three year time span at a cost of $4.5 million, was completed in two phases.

Originally the roadway extended from Virginia Beach Boulevard to Hessian Road. The first phase of improvements extended the roadway to a median-divided four lane thoroughfare to Haygood Road. The second phase consisted of extending the roadway to Shore Drive, and constructing the clover leaf interchange with Northampton Boulevard.

The Bay Bridge Tunnel is repaired

The number of cars increase with the number of people

Bay Bridge Tunnel

April 15, 1964 was a significant date in Virginia Beach's history in that it marked the end of one era and the beginning of another, with the opening of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel.

The event marked the end of a 84 years of waterborne traffic between Virginia's Eastern Shore and the Hampton Roads region which began in 1880, by the use of steamers. This service was replaced in 1933 by ferry boats making daily runs, transporting passengers and vehicles, over the waters of Chesapeake Bay. The last ferry boat bay crossing took place 31 years later with the opening of the Bridge-Tunnel.

This also raised the economic potential of Virginia Beach by placing the resort city on the direct route of motorists traveling between northern and southern points of United States' eastern coastline.

Although construction of the Bridge-Tunnel was authorized by the Virginia General Assembly in March 1956, it wasn't until September 1960 that construction actually got underway. Completion of the facility took the lives of seven men, cost some $200 million, and required a 42 month work period, involving nearly 2,000 workmen.

The southern terminus of the system is in the Chesapeake Beach area of Virginia Beach, and its northern terminal is located at Wise Point on the Eastern Shore.

The 17.6 mile long crossing is one of the most complex in the world. It contains approximately 12 miles of low level trestle roadway, two tunnels under the Thimble Shoals and Chesapeake Channels, two bridges over the Northern Channel and Fisherman Inlet Channel, and required the construction of four man-made islands.

During the first full calendar year of the Bridge-Tunnel's operation, 1965, a total of 1,167,682 vehicles crossed the span, transporting 2,138,688 passengers, to produce a toll revenue of $7,581,296.50. The next financial statement available for an operational comparison is for the calendar year of 1971; the 1972 report will be released this month. During 1971, vehicle volume increased to 1,411,547, to produce a toll revenue of $7,581,296.50. It is important to remember the revenue figure does not reflect any revenue received from passengers. This results from a revising of tolls as of January 1971 to a combined vehicle-passenger toll, and also discontinued any count of passengers crossing the span.

As with any operation of this magnitude, that of the bridge-tunnel has not been without its difficulties, the most costly has been forced closures to all traffic for lengthy periods of time.

The first of these occurred on December 3, 1967 when an unmanned barge, the "Mohawk", collided with a bridge section, closing the facility for two weeks until repairs were completed. On January 21, 1970 a Navy vessel, the "USS Yancey" crashed through a bridge section, and closed the crossing for six weeks until that section of trestle could be replaced. Another two-week closure of the span followed a collision with the bridge last September 21 by the tug "Carolyn" and barge "Weeks 254".

REPORT 72

looking back...

A decade or so after the War Between the States, a group of hardy sports from Norfolk established a club on the oceanfront (at 17th Street) and dubbed the area Virginia Beach. Their neighbors were only a few farmers, fishermen and the flora and fauna native to the region. The venture, however, proved to be very popular and soon many others got into the act including various land developers, the Vanderbilt family and what eventually became the Norfolk Southern Railway.

By the 1890's the old Princess Anne Hotel was in its heyday catering to the cream of east coast society, and smaller counterparts were joining in the action. Streets had been laid off and lots were selling for $25.00, with corner lots at a high of $35.00 each.

In 1906, with enough businesses, homes and people on hand to justify the move, the area from Rudee Inlet to 25th Street was incorporated into the Town of Virginia Beach to supplement such services as were rendered by the rural County of Princess Anne.

The minutes of Council and other records of the early years made for interesting reading although sometimes difficult to decipher, being handwritten. Problems with water, sewerage, roads, drainage, etc., sound familiar even today though of a different nature, as does the request for reimbursement for a buggy wheel broken off in a hole in Atlantic Avenue.

One early resident reported that it was always possible to tell when the last train returned at night to Norfolk. All the lights in town would go off, the town's electric supply being the same as that on the trolley wire.

Then there was the riot at the Busy Bee Cafe on Pacific Avenue which occurred when a party of commercial fishermen became overly enthusiastic in celebration of a great catch. In the report by the Town Sergeant, who represented what passed for law and order in those days, he tells how he arrived at the scene and describes the two pistols he had with him and how he furnished one of them to a citizen to help quell the uprising. This citizen, when questioned in later years, agreed that the report was true but that it failed to mention that there were no bullets in the gun, the Town Budget being limited at that time.

People continued to come, and more hotels, stores and homes were built. Shadowlawn was developed and named for Woodrow Wilson's home. Finally in 1923, the Town's boundary was expanded by annexation to 40th Street, including Linkhorn Park, a combination golf course and residential area. The annexation of 1928 carried the limits to 49th Street.

The Town also engaged in the unusual procedure of de-annexation by dropping the area west of Holly Road between and including 29th and 31st Streets when Laskin Road was constructed. This was done so that the city would not have to provide for fill across the swamp. After the 1933 hurricane washed away a section of Atlantic Avenue leading to Croatan, the Rudee Inlet area was also de-annexed to save the cost of putting the road and drainage flume back in place.

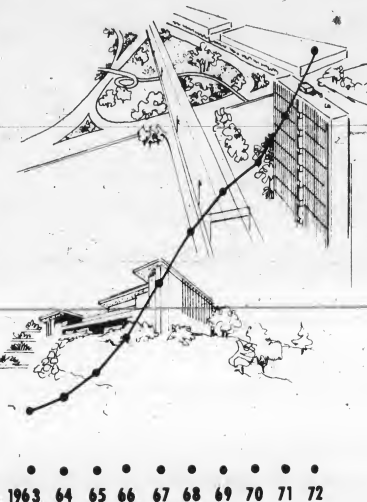

Along with old Seaside Park and its many happy trainloads of Sunday school picnickers, probably the outstanding developments prior to World War II were the building of the Cavalier Hotel, the oceanfront boardwalk in the late 1920's, and the initiation of a modern effective mosquito control program which reduced the need for exhaustive slapping in the evening hours. One Coast Guard "Cap'n" claimed it was possible to go outside the station in the old days after dark with a tin cup, whirl around twice and catch a cupful of mosquitoes. This could be an exaggeration.

With all the development, there were still so few people around in the winter prior to 1940 that it was necessary to add an anti-oxidant to the town water to keep the mains in North Virginia Beach from rusting since the water stood still in the pipes from Labor Day to May 30.

Finally, after World War II came the deluge of people. The Town became a City in 1952 and with the population roughly doubling every decade, the former little family resort and pastoral Princess Anne became the great new City of Virginia Beach to provide services for the people, by the people, on account of the people.

POPULATION GROWTH SINCE MERGER OF PRINCESS ANNE COUNTY WITH VIRGINIA BEACH

virginia beach:

Roger M. Scott

This Annual Report is your city's attempt to tell its story to the stockholders and customers of the company, the citizens of Virginia Beach. Any story of this type must contain some good and some bad news, and ours does, but we believe the good far outweighs the bad.

Service to the citizens has been foremost in the minds of your City Council this year.

Concern for our youth has been demonstrated by the development of the Drug Outreach Center, the opening of the new less-secure detention home at Princess Anne, and the plans for the "Pendleton Project," a pilot project developed by the Cities of Virginia Beach and Chesapeake and the State of Virginia, that will provide a full range of services for young people with problems. Concern for our senior citizens has been demonstrated by the Council's adoption of a program of tax relief for the elderly and the new SEVAMP program, which delivers a variety of existing municipal services to the elderly through an outreach program. The City Council also demonstrated its concern for the environment by being one of the first in the Commonwealth to establish a wetlands board to review any proposal that would encroach on these valuable areas in our city and by continuing the city's program of sewer expansion.

1972 saw Virginia Beach take its first step toward a full paid fire service for the entire city; a step that eventually will result in greater protection and lower insurance rates for every citizen. The new Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance (CZO) that has been talked about for several years, came to the final stages in November when the text and zoning maps were put on public display and public hearings were held. This new zoning ordinance will be an important tool to insure orderly land development.

The professional real estate appraisal firm employed by the City Council last year has almost completed the reappraisal of the 58,000 parcels of land in our city and every citizen should soon receive his notice of true value. This reappraisal will assure that each property owner enjoys a fair and equitable assessment on his land and that everyone carries an equal share of our real estate taxes.

In October, 1972, the federal government approved the General Revenue Sharing Bill. As a result, Virginia Beach will receive $2,435,500 to assist in much needed local programs such as street and highway construction, new fire stations, more books in the libraries and recreation facilities.

On the debit side of the ledger, Virginia Beach suffered from severe beach erosion in 1972. Water was also a problem; not enough pressure in July; a moratorium on new connections in August, and too much in the streets in September. Steps have been and are being taken to resolve these and other problems suffered this year. To top it all off, our population increased from 190,000 in 1971 to 205,000 in 1972.

All in all, it's been a good year.

Edgar W. Howe once said, "The government is mainly an expensive organization to regulate evildoers and tax those who behave; government does little for fairly respectable people except annoy them." We all feel this way sometime. I hope this Annual Report will give a better insight into your government's programs and services and can serve as a positive testimonial when we tend to become just a little annoyed. Please give us your continued assistance, suggestions and support to make Virginia Beach the kind of city we all want it to be.

Sincerely,

Roger M. Scott
City Manager of Virginia Beach

Having recently assumed the Office of Mayor, I comment prospectively and on the basis of optimism. I am completely aware of the complex problems that daily confront and confound all local governments, but on a comparative scale I see Virginia Beach in a relatively good position. With proper planning and the support of an involved citizenry, there is no limitation to the quality of the community that will evolve.

In a geographical sense, we enjoy practically every advantage afforded by nature; in an economic sense, we enjoy growth and general prosperity; and in a 'people sense', we enjoy a talented, affluent and energetic population... I look forward to the future.

Having been honored by my fellow Councilmen with the opportunity to serve as Mayor for two years, there are of course, many things about which I could comment. They have been busy years, but well worth the time and effort. Never did I forget that each Councilman has an equal voice in the decision making process, and that progress and accomplishments result from a majority vote of the Council. Fortunately, while there has been some difficulty at times; for the most part, progress has been good.

To enumerate several of the major accomplishments during these two years, I feel that the general reassessment of all real estate, which has just been completed, is most important. Supplementary to the general reassessment, the City Council adopted an ordinance to assess land based on its use, as is now allowed by State law. This, I feel, is another fine step of progress by the City. Not only will this method of taxation be more equitable to our farm community; it will allow farmers to remain on their land and not be as quickly forced into a sale for residential development. This is one of only a few ways in which the Council can reflect the citizens' desire that our growth be orderly.

In the general area of growth and development in our City, one additional step has been taken which is noteworthy. Council has also contracted with Public Administration Service of Chicago, Illinois, to perform a cost benefit study. It is hoped that the results of this study will enable us to determine more accurately, the cost to the City in services rendered, in relation to the revenues received from all types of development, both residential and commercial within the City.

There are other accomplishments which are no less important, but I must leave those comments for another time. Service to the community as Mayor and Councilman has been, and continues to be, most gratifying, and I wish to close by thanking each of you for your support.

Twenty years of public service to the citizens of Virginia Beach have highlighted an eventful life for me. As Mayor for sixteen of these years, it was my pleasure to serve the "two" Cities of Virginia Beach: the original resort of Virginia Beach and the 1963 merger expanded City of Virginia Beach.

Record population growth and building expansion combined to produce years of challenges. Our City is still confronted with them. The quest for solutions to these problems and the need and desire to develop a long range program to solve the pressing beach erosion question must continue.

Many events come to mind as I reflect upon the past few years. However, now is not the time to look to the past. It is my hope that the city will continue to grow and prosper. The people of Virginia Beach have been most rewarding to me and the thoughts of their goodwill will remain with me always.

water 72

Water problems — shortage, moratorium, flood — dominated the thoughts of many Virginia Beach citizens in 1972.

Beach Borough residents endured occasional water shortages brought about by failing water pressure this past summer. In August, the Norfolk City Council declared a moratorium on new water hookups to their system.

The City of Virginia Beach buys water from Norfolk and sells it to residents living in the Beach Borough. All other Virginia Beach residents buy their water directly from Norfolk.

In the early days of the Town of Virginia Beach, this arrangement was considered adequate. After the merger of the City of Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County, the population increased very rapidly. Customers buying water from Norfolk increased from 9,000 to over 28,000.

Unfortunately, the City of Norfolk did not use the profits from the sale of water to Beach residents to upgrade and expand its water plant facilities during this time.

At the time of this writing, negotiations aimed at solving the water supply situation continue.

Extensive installation of water lines in the City leading to the Beach Borough are being designed for 1973 and, hopefully, will eliminate the water shortage problem for next summer.

Flood water inundated the north end of Virginia Beach in September.

Two days of heavy rain, combined with strong winds and high tides, left twenty blocks along Atlantic Avenue impassable and many streets and yards under water. The storm was reminiscent of the severe Ash Wednesday storm in 1962.

Cars were stranded, rubber rafts filled with children floated down the middle of Atlantic Avenue, people waded knee-deep in water to greet neighbors, surfers rode the wakes of the LARKS.

City crews worked 24 hours a day for twenty-days during the storm crisis trying to pump and drain water from the flood areas. Their untiring efforts won the approval and admiration of all the affected residents.

Damage to public and private property was extensive. Cars were ruined, homes and personal belongings suffered damage as a result of the flood waters.

Virginia Beach was declared a disaster area by President Nixon at the request of Governor Holton. The City became eligible for 100 percent federal funding for damage to public property.

The Small Business Administration, too, declared the City a disaster area. Financial aid was offered to residents who had suffered storm damage.

A mountain was completed in Virginia Beach this year: Mt. Trashmore.

This mountain resolved the momentous problems of refuse disposal and environmental protection. At the same time, a unique recreational facility will be provided.

Five years ago the City of Virginia Beach was using a nearly filled open-burning dump for its major waste disposal requirements. The dump was surrounded by 30 acres of available land and two lakes totaling over 70 acres.

The site was ideal for building an unusual mountain composed of refuse layered with dirt. The mountain was designed to cover 30 acres and reach a height of 65 feet. It was planned to meet the City's refuse needs for four years.

Today, at the end of those four years, Virginia Beach has the potential site for a park that will offer hiking, picnicking, downhill coasting, fishing, boating, and concert facilities.

As the federally-aided mountain project grew higher, so did interest from cities throughout the world. Several cities around the country, with similar waste problems, are planning their own Mt. Trashmore.

In September, the Mt. Trashmore project was carried to the Eastern European countries by the United States Information Agency. The U.S.I.A. Mt. Trashmore exhibit of engineering data, photos, and news releases will tour Russia, Hungary, Poland, Romania, Czechoslovakia and other Balkan states for three years and will be viewed by millions of people.

In the spring of the past year, a grant of $160,000 was awarded to the city by the Department of the Interior and the Virginia Commission of Outdoor Recreation to begin construction of the recreational reuse of Mt. Trashmore.

Man has used 170 acres of useless land and 860,000,000 pounds of garbage to build a mountain that resolves a vital environmental problem and creates a much needed recreational park area.

virginia beach city jail 72

The Virginia Beach City Jail does exist. But few people are aware of how it operates.

The City Sheriff has direct responsibility and supervision for overall operation of the jail. The City Sheriff, formerly called the City Sergeant, is elected by the people of Virginia Beach and is responsible to the State.

The City is responsible for providing and maintaining a structure for the jail and for providing one-third of administrative costs. However, the City has no authority in jail administration.

Many accusations concerning the operation of the City Jail were voiced during the past year. As a result, the City requested an investigation by the State Department of Welfare and Institutions. State standards of jail operations were asked to be enforced.

After months of investigation and public hearings, changes were recommended to bring the City Jail up to State standards. One of the most important improvements has been the addition of a Visitor Partition Section.

To improve the overall correctional system in Virginia Beach, the City asked the National Clearing House for Criminal Justice, Planning and Architecture of the University of Illinois to study the City Jail and make recommendations.

These recommendations will provide the basis for new direction in the City's correctional facility program.

virginia beach schools 72

Innovation, progress, and success marked the 1971-72 school year in Virginia Beach.

Overcrowding continued to be the most demanding problem. More than 46,000 students were enrolled at the beginning of the school year. Adaptations and changes were required.

On the secondary level, the school day was extended to eight periods and the students attended overlapping shifts. On the elementary level, additional portable classrooms were utilized and careful scheduling was arranged to ensure that all student needs were satisfied.

A $12.6 million bond referendum was overwhelmingly approved by the voters on February 8, 1972. The bonds will finance the construction of three new junior high schools and an elementary school. Ground has been broken for two of the schools, College Park Elementary and Princess Anne Junior High.

A year-round education pilot program was also initiated to solve the problems of overcrowding. Holland, Plaza, Windsor Oaks, and Windsor Woods Elementary Schools will participate in the new 45-15 plan beginning June 18, 1973.

Under the 45-15 plan, the pilot schools will divide their students into four groups. Each group will attend school for 45 school days and then have 15 school days off. By cycling the attendance so that three groups are in school at all times and one is on vacation, each school can house one-third more students than they can at the present time.

Although the students in the pilot schools will be attending classes year-round, they will still be in school the same number of days as the traditional nine-month school year and will have the same holiday schedule as Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Easter.

A great deal of thought and concern was obviously focused on classroom overcrowding problems. However, significant accomplishments were made in other areas as well.

Virginia Beach established the first public school classes for deaf children in Tidewater. School age and pre-school age deaf children are now given special instruction at Old Donation Elementary School and at the Center for Effective Learning.

In May, the Annual Virginia Beach Festival of Visual and Performing Arts hosted Julie Nixon Eisenhower as its opening night guest of honor. Works of art by Virginia Beach students drew large crowds throughout the program at the Civic Center.

vo-tech center 72

On September 5, 1972, the Virginia Beach Vocational-Technical Education Center opened its doors for the first time.

Students from all six area high schools are now able to receive the technical training necessary for employment in many areas of our economy. At the same time, each student receives a sound academic background at his own high school.

The Vocational-Technical Center is located on North Landing Road, just beyond the Municipal Center complex. The building contains fifteen trade and industry shops, five business laboratories, two horticulture laboratories, a horticulture greenhouse, and eighteen classrooms.

The building cost $2,269,523 with 43 per cent coming from federal and state funds and 57 percent coming from local funds. The equipment cost $288,549 with 71 percent coming from federal and state funds and 29 percent coming from local funds.

The Center offers nearly two dozen courses of instruction ranging from one to three years in length.

These courses include auto body repair and painting, carpentry and cabinetmaking, commercial art, architectural and industrial drafting, masonry trades, cosmetology, homemaking occupations, practical nursing, stenography, and advanced clerical accounting.

comprehensive zoning 72

Rapid growth has again plagued the City of Virginia Beach during the past year.

The dramatic transformation from a resort and farming community into a mature and diversified city has continued.

The need for new and expanded highways, new water and sewer lines, more classrooms, and improved drainage systems has been intensely emphasized by this year's growth.

The City has responded to the expansion and its related problems in a positive and coordinated effort.

A Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance will soon be adopted for the City of Virginia Beach. The CZO divides the City into districts and regulates the use of the land. Placement, use, and size of buildings, as well as parking facilities and other development will be closely governed.

The CZO should promote orderly and planned growth and minimize piecemeal rezoning in the future development of the City.

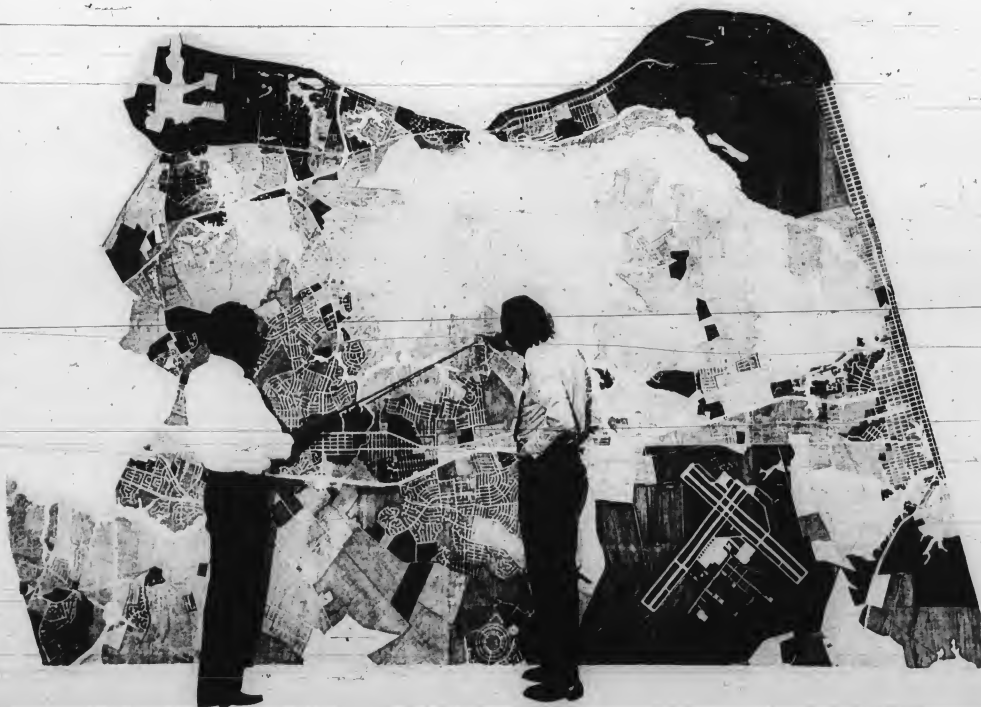

The new CZO will replace the old "Master Zoning Ordinance of the City of Virginia Beach" and the "Master Zoning Ordinance of Princess Anne County" which have been used jointly since the merger in 1963.

The City Council wisely placed a six-month moratorium on all rezoning applications while the Planning Department labored in its gigantic effort to prepare the text and the maps of the Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance for the City.

Zoning is intended to assure the maximum collective good for all the people rather than to favor specific individuals. It protects the rights of property owners and citizens against undue interference by groups or individuals. Subdivision regulations, building codes, nuisance control ordinances, and private restrictive covenants also help regulate private development.

The Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance will implement land development plans and preserve the interests of the people. It is intended to prepare Virginia Beach for the future.

property reassessment 72

All property in the City of Virginia Beach has been reappraised during the past year by the City Real Estate Assessor.

The last reassessment of land in the City was done in 1969, but the last reassessment of homes and buildings was done in 1962 and 1963.

It has been a long time. 1963 was the year of the merger. Our City Code now requires that all property be assessed annually.

Property values in our City have increased tremendously since 1963. Owners of newer homes and structures have been paying taxes on property at near fair market value. Owners of older homes have not. The Constitution of the State of Virginia requires that all property appraisals be based on current market value.

Beginning this year, the Real Estate Assessor's office will annually review all appraisals in the City. In areas where real estate values have changed, property will be reevaluated.

Property owners in Virginia Beach will be notified of their new property appraisals during the following month. They will be able to compare this value with the old appraisal value. They will also be able to compare their appraisal values with the values of similar structures located on similar parcels of property.

Differences of opinion concerning the value of property may be appealed in February and March of 1973 to the City Real Estate Assessor.

The entire Atlantic coastline of the State of Virginia, excluding the Eastern Shore, is contained within the City of Virginia Beach.

Mother Nature raged a constant battle in 1972 to try to remove the sand from the Beach Borough's oceanfront. The U.S. Corps of Engineers, the Erosion Commission, and the City have fought back through its sand replenishment program.

A unique sand stabilization project has been initiated by the City's Department of Community Services. Jetty-like "groins," made of tough nylon bags, each filled with two tons of sand, have been placed in the surf on 24th Street, 40th Street, and 45th Street. Hopefully, they will reduce the sand drift along the oceanfront.

The severe storms that damaged the shoreline of Virginia Beach during 1972, resulted in a need for year-round sand replenishment. To protect the oceanfront, all oceanographic experts agree that sand nourishment is the most practical method of beach replenishment.

A $17 million Beach Erosion and Hurricane Protection Project for the City of Virginia Beach is now under consideration in Congress. Approval of the bill will greatly help solve the City's erosion and hurricane damage problems.

REPORT 72

ANNUAL REPORT PAID FOR AT THE REGULAR ADVERTISING RATES OF THE SUN

Beach in snow

By ANNACKERMAN

The telephone weather lady and I have had a very close relationship all weekend, but it reached a special intimacy Sunday when I heard (second hand, from my eighth-grade sister) the four inch snow prediction. From this point forward, the personal contact increased to about five calls an hour—just for reassurance.

All official reports may have had Virginia Beach's first snow storm of the year beginning at 6:30 Monday morning, but that's only official. The minds of Virginia Beach school children began preparing for the phenomena days in advance.

Frances had only the weekend to read and report on "The Diary of Anne Frank". Sunday morning, 23 pages from the front cover, she slammed the book closed, declaring "No school tomorrow; radio says four inches of snow."

With the final verification from the telephone lady, whom I had now crowned Suzy Snowflake, Jane instantaneously located the cardboard box of Chicago winters past and began flinging long-forgotten earmuffs, gloves, and stockings through the house.

So engrossed was he in explaining his pseudo-sled of cardboard and clothes line, Jamie almost forgot he came to collect for two months of paper delivery.

And so, I imagine, Operation Snow Communication invaded the households of many. Some fell asleep glued to transistor radios, others set alarms for a 3 a.m. window check, and the more enterprising continued into the night with Suzy Snowflake of the C&P Telephone Company.

And just like in the fairytales, the diligent are rewarded. At 7 a.m. even I was encouraged and by 8:30, forty minutes into my twenty minute ride to work, I gave in to SNOW IN VIRGINIA BEACH.

Virginia Beach Boulevard had turned into a magnificent bumper car track not unlike the summer attraction at Seaside Park. Sideways, backwards, to the left and then the right, my trusty blue Volkswagen had suddenly developed a will of its own—completely separated from my own. When there wasn't room for five abreast, the ditches gulped up the overflow.

If my excursion down the Boulevard hadn't already made the distinction, a stop at Dunkin' Donuts really separated the southerners from the northerners—a smile of distant memories or a ferocious frown of present inconvenience. One reported gleefully, "This is my first time driving in snow and I've had only one accident...so far."

Along the highway, young and old alike came out to tentatively test the strange white stuff which, remarkably enough, was still falling—falling and even sticking on the ground. Not quite prepared for winter in our sunshine city, they emerged sliding on their ten-speeds and carrying umbrellas for protection. One young man, with unknown intent, was seen carrying a surf board under his arm.

Innovation was also evident on the first tee of the Princess Anne Country Club where the bumping hills had found a purpose. Equipment ranged from unfolded cardboard boxes to miniature toboggans to full-fledged sleds. The long-haired, the straight-laced, the wide-eyed children; all were participating.

Sounds like any winter scene around the country, doesn't it? It wasn't—but I had to watch carefully to see the difference. My first clue was the little kid with socks instead of mittens on his hands. Then there was the little girl, crouched close to the ground and patting a snow mound—a tiny snow man, I thought, no, she said, a sand castle.

But it was a long, lanky youth with sun-bleached hair that gave it away. Sled positioned at the top of the hill, he gave it an even shove with his toe, ran along side it a minute, and then jumped on. Upright legs apart, arms outstretched, body bent, he yelled "Surf's Up!" and rode the snow all the way down to Holly Road.

Yes, snow in Virginia Beach—but we adjust and adapt and we still surf. Stumbling into the Delly, pants wet, toes numb, and body shivering, I discovered a whole new kind of Virginia Beach snow people. Warm, dry, and smiling, they sat, with no intentions whatsoever of leaving until June—ignore it and it will surely go away.

But it didn't go away. The schools were closed. Offices began closing. The banks began closing. City Council was cancelled. The Navy was "secured." By 4 p.m. Virginia Beach was closed.

Snow in Virginia Beach.

Bundle up is the message and TWA stewardess Susan Jaffee knows what it's all about as she makes her way down Atlantic Avenue Monday morning.

Undercover investigation

Drugs decreasing

The culmination last Friday of a four month undercover investigation strongly indicates "hardcore" narcotics, such as heroin and cocaine, are becoming less prevalent in Virginia Beach.

This fact became significant with the arrest of some 30 persons accused of alleged illegal sales of drugs such as hashish and marijuana, as well as a variety of amphetamines, barbiturates, and hallucinogenics.

LT. E.F. Buzzy, police narcotic squad officer-in-charge, said, "The investigation shows the presence of heroin on the streets is diminishing. During this investigation the undercover men haven't been able to pick up a whisper of it."

When asked to what he attributed this Buzzy said, "The stringent crackdown on heroin throughout the world has helped." He cited stiffer penalties given those convicted of dealing in heroin, and increasing surveillance on the movement of heroin as additional factors.

Buzzy highly praised the work of the undercover men which made the arrests possible. They were identified as Bruce Benson, 24, of Chesapeake; and Thomas Collins, 23, of Virginia Beach. Benson was undercover four months, while Collins moved throughout the drug circles for two months.

Both men began their assignments immediately after being sworn-in as police officers. Each man worked without knowledge of the existence of the other. Buzzy explained this by saying, "If two men know one another in this line of work they might develop a tendency to fraternize, and if one is 'burned' (exposed) it might hurt the other. Also if we 'bring one up' (uncover him) it won't hurt the other."

During their investigation Collins and Benson purchased approximately $2,000 worth of drugs, consisting primarily of hashish, marijuana, and LSD. The largest single "buy" was 111 doses of PCP (a tranquilizer used on dogs) having a street sale value of about $300.

Buzzy said, "While most of the contacts were made in the Beach Borough the drug buyers covered a wide area of the city, and even spread into Norfolk and North Carolina."

The arrests followed a Circuit Court grand jury indicting 44 persons on a total of 60 drug law violations. Those charged included three Virginia Beach juveniles, three Norfolk adults, and three adults in North Carolina. Buzzy added, "We have one man convicted of drug sales in 1970 and one man charged in December, who is still awaiting trial."

In comparing today's drug trafficking with the past Buzzy said, "Today's pusher is a lot more careful, he's more paranoid. He doesn't accept strangers as quickly." Buzzy added police tactics have also changed. He said, "We're not only trying to get the person selling drugs off the street. We're trying to widen our scope and endeavoring to reach the drug supplier, we're

From rural to urban

Beach 4-H Clubs alter image

By Helen Crist

If the first thing that pops in your mind at the mention of 4-H clubs is the image of a youngster and a cow, then "you're just not with it," as the kids would say.

Because 4-H, like all progressive organizations is altering its image. "We're coming from a rural to an urban concept, but we're not neglecting the youngsters from the farm," said John J. Beasley, VPI Extension Agent for 4-H youths.

And though 4-H still remains rural in most areas of Virginia, such is not the case in Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Richmond or Roanoke. Here urbanization is the rule.

"It's the same basic educational and learning experience that it's always been, and quite successful too, but we're revising it to keep up with today," Beasley said.

He believes that a cultural lag results when a belief doesn't change with the times, and 4-H recognizes this and is meeting the need to satisfy all of its youngsters from all walks of life.

Here at the Beach membership has jumped from 150 boys and girls, between the ages of 9-19, to 1200, in one year. This is immensely gratifying to Beasley, who came here October, 1971.

He's a 1969 East Carolina graduate, with a M.S. in sociology from VPI. Both he and his wife Sandra, a nurse, are Tar Heels; he's from Raleigh, she's from Henderson.

Beasley, 25, was teaching special education for the mentally retarded in Williamsburg public schools, and attending William and Mary College for additional study, when he received a state tuition scholarship and research grant to VPI.

Keenly attuned to young people, with a compassion and sensitivity to their needs, and a natural talent for leadership, he was overjoyed when the 4-H position became available at the Beach.

"I thought that here was a chance to work with enthusiastic youngsters who love to do things or they wouldn't be in 4-H," he said.

It's been everything he hoped for.

He's especially happy with the 4-H Satellite Horse and Pony Club that was one of his first projects.

"When I first came here I noticed there were a lot of beautiful horses and ponies around. I saw the ranches and lots of children, and I couldn't figure out why there wasn't a 4-H Horse and Pony Club."

Then as he visited the more rural areas a disturbing situation came to his attention. He observed that many of the animals were being treated unkindly by children, not because of cruelty but because they simply didn't understand how to care for them.

"You know very often a child will be given a pony as a sort of toy, much as a bicycle, so the child doesn't have any idea how to take care of the animal."

This bothered Beasley. So he contacted a volunteer who spoke at meetings, conducted a clinic and even went into the homes to give proper instruction on treatment of animals.

The result was the formation of the Horse and Pony Club, which now numbers 50 members and has three leaders. Mrs. Dale Whitten is club leader.

"Our goal is to work with children and teach them the basics of horse care and horsemanship—it's not a riding club as such. The most important things is to make children appreciate their horses," Beasley said.

It's been most successful, he added. They even had two shows last year at Princess Anne Park.

Another program, recently begun in the schools, draws praise from Beasley. Four-H clubs meet once a month after school in Seatack, Windsor Oaks, Pembroke Elementary, Shelton Park, Point of View, Lynnhaven Elementary and Greeds. Mrs. Demetra Maras is coordinator.

This materialized when Beasley and Jim Spencer, coordinator of after-school program for the Department of Parks and Recreation, put their heads together to come up with a coordinated program best suited to the youngsters' needs.

"Parks and Recreation has an after-school program five days a week, when they teach such things as art, crafts, music etc. I thought that possibly more educational programs could be offered, and here was a chance to bring in some 4-H Club programs," Beasley said. So the efforts were coordinated, and no program was duplicated, to the mutual benefit of all.

"In this respect, by the way, I think it's important to realize that we are a city, state and federal sponsored organization, therefore we need to coordinate and work with all government agencies," Beasley said.

Sun staff takes five awards in state newspaper competition

Three Virginia Beach Sun staff members have won five writing and photography awards in the Virginia Press Association's annual statewide competition.

Helen Crist, special features writer for the Sun, and Kirt Babuder, chief photographer, each won two awards while Ruby Jean Phillips, managing editor, took one.

Mrs. Crist placed in both writing and photography categories. Her story on the whims of men aboard the America was a runner-up (second place) in Women's

A tranquil picture of a country scene reflected in the dark, still waters of the North Landing River won for Mrs. Crist an honorable mention (third) in Pictorial Photography.

Babuder, who joined the Sun staff last summer as its first full-time photographer, captured two honorable mentions: in the Spot News category for his flood shot of youngsters pushing an automobile out of deep water and in the General News category for an unusual photo of an "endless" petition being presented to City Council.

Mrs. Phillips won an honorable mention for editorial writing.

The awards will be presented this week-end at the VPA's annual winter meeting in Roanoke.

Sun staffers planning to attend, in addition to the three award winners, include David Poole, general manager; Jay Brumbley, sports editor; and Ann Ackerman, editorial assistant.

Joseph E. Rainer, Jr., has been chosen "Fireman Of The Year" by members of the Chesapeake Volunteer Fire Department. Rainer's selection was announced last Saturday night during installation of newly elected officers.

Rainer, 22, has been a member of the department for four years. He was selected for the award on the basis of his outstanding contributions to the fire department and community during the past year.

Meritorious Service Award plaques were also awarded Fred Quist, Jr., and T.W. Marois upon their retirement from the department.

Chief Joe Lewis, recently retired from the Norfolk Fire Department, presided over installation ceremonies. The newly elected administrative officers include E.R. Wynn, President; D.E. Doring, Vice trying to get up the ladder just a little bit.

Last Friday's activities witnessed another change in police tactics. In past operations, police usually waited until nightfall to begin making arrests, they said. "This time we chose to start immediately after issuance of the indictment to prevent the flight of suspects." This results from the rapid spreading of word of the police raids after a few arrests. It apparently paid off. Within seven hours after the raid began, 20 suspects had been taken into custody.

Officials said 22 of those arrested were charged with selling drugs to an undercover agent, with a number of those facing multiple charges. They were identified as Larry W. Earlywine, 22, 20th Street; Hilda A. Earlywine, 19, 20th Street; Walter L. Petty, Jr., 22, Canby Street; Connie C. Bunyan, 21, McIntire Road; Walter E. Coats, 20, Alcott Road; David W. Fire damages Beach motel Fire of undetermined origin severely damaged a portion of the Ivanhoe Motel, 21st Street and Atlantic Avenue, last Saturday night.

One of the oceanfront rooms of the motel, where the fire began, was completely gutted by flames. A fire adjacent to and above this room received severe heat, smoke and water damage.

Firemen were hindered in battling the fire, by strong winds and low temperatures but there were no injuries. The alarm was sounded at 8 p.m. and firemen were at the scene for about two hours.

One source indicated early estimates placed the fire damage at approximately $10,000.

JC's seek men

The Beach Jaycees will hold a membership meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at Atlantic Permanent Savings and Loan on Independence Blvd. Young men between 18 and 35 years of age are invited to attend.

Man shot five times

Officials say Emmitt Tibton Young was shot five times in the head early Tuesday morning in a room at the Waves Motel, 23rd Street and Atlantic Avenue.

Young, 35, Glennville, Minn., reportedly was shot with a small calibre pistol. His condition was listed as stable, but serious, after several hours of surgery.

According to investigators Young was shot about 2 a.m. during a party, with four other persons, in his motel room. After being shot his hands and feet were bound, he was reportedly robbed of his wallet and keys to his truck, and left in the room.

Approximately 30 minutes later, according to police, Young managed to free himself and hail a passing police patrol car on Atlantic Avenue.

Authorities say they are searching for Alphonse D. Ruiz, 23, New York City, reportedly in the room at the time of the incident, on warrants charging him with armed robbery, malicious assault, and grand larceny of an auto.

A total of 76 years service with the Virginia Beach postal service concluded with the retirement of these key supervisors (l. to r.) Miller, Mrs. Foskett and Davidson.

Long postal careers end

The retirement of three top management employees marked the end of more than three-quarters of a century of service with the Virginia Beach postal service.

The retirees consisted of Joe L. Miller, Assistant Postmaster; Richard S. Davidson, Jr., Assistant Superintendent of Mails; and Mrs. Virginia C. Foskett, Station Superintendent.

Miller's career spanned 30 years. He began service with the Virginia Beach Post Office in 1942 as a substitute clerk. He entered the United States Army in 1943 and served with the 7th Army postal unit in England, France, and Germany. After his discharge from military service he returned to the resort city's postal service as a clerk and advanced to Assistant Postmaster in 1969.

Davidson retired at the end of 25 years postal service. He began his career as a substitute clerk in 1947. A series of advancements over the years saw his appointment as Assistant Superintendent of Mails in 1969.

Mrs. Foskett's 21 year career covered a series of supervisory positions. She was appointed Acting Postmaster of the third class office at Lynnhaven in 1951. This office was consolidated into the Virginia Beach postal system as a classified Carrier Station in 1960. Mrs. Foskett served as Superintendent of the Lynnhaven station, which grew into one of the city's largest carrier stations, until 1971. She was then named Superintendent at the Back Bay postal station, where she served until retirement.

All of the retirees were honored by their fellow supervisors with a retirement luncheon.

People do care

The temperature was below freezing. A layer of icy whiteness covered the city. A sharp biting wind penetrated unmercifully.

Yet this week was one of the warmest in Virginia Beach.

People were warm. They cared about their fellow citizens, their fellow man. They went out of their way, extended the first hand to help.

Smiles of understanding replaced brazen horn-honking as motorists clumsily attempted to maneuver slippery corners. Strangers opened their homes to aid stranded pedestrians. They left their cars idling at traffic lights to push another out of a ditch.

Does it have to take a crisis, a disaster, such an obvious need, for people to become human?

'Oh, not me' is your first reaction. Sure, not me either. I'm only too glad to help out a friend, to assist a neighbor, to accommodate a fellow worker. When someone asks me, I'll rarely say no.

But what about the silent appeals? How often do we answer the silence? The smile to lighten a heavy moment. The praise. The encouragement. The kindness. How often do we give a part of ourselves for another?

And what about the stranger? We don't know his name, but does that mean we can't open a door, help lift a package, offer a ride—or just smile and say hello?

Virginia Beach is a transient area. People come in and out, sometimes without even unpacking. Virginia Beach is a widespread area. Some residents rarely leave their own Borough. Virginia Beach has no center—no focal point. This may explain the coldness often felt here. But it doesn't excuse it.

The snow on the ground this week will melt, the temperature will rise. Our conspicuously visible excuse for kindness will be removed.

With only a little effort, the kindness can remain.

—Ann Ackerman

A Week To Salute

Next week is National Jaycee Week.

This may not mean much to most people but to at least one hundred of this city's most active, most community-minded young men, and their families and friends, next week is THEIR week.

It is a deserving observance, especially to the members of the Beach Jaycees, for these young men give much of themselves in serving the people of Virginia Beach.

Their efforts are felt in so many areas of community life...collecting clothing for mental patients; undertaking a project for the handicapped; raising funds for the Cancer Society; seeking the freedom of the POW-MIAs in Vietnam.

These are the humane contributions. But the Jaycees don't stop there. They stand up and fight for what they believe to be right and don't back away from controversy. They didn't hesitate to jump into the Vote Yes for Classrooms movement or to block the dredging of Pleasure House and Crab creeks.

The Jaycees are a scrappy bunch who don't believe the old saying "You can't fight City Hall." They can, and do, fight City Hall when the cause demands it. Jaycee spokesmen frequently appear before City Council, sometimes in opposition, sometimes in support, of proposals that will affect Virginia Beach. They don't always win. But they have a good batting average.

For two consecutive years the Beach Jaycees have been named the most outstanding chapter in Virginia among cities of comparable size. And last year the local group was awarded the highest national honor for being the most outstanding chapter in the United States among cities of comparable population.

So when it comes to observing National Jaycee Week, the citizens of Virginia Beach have much more to celebrate than perhaps they realize...the efforts of the Beach Jaycees have, in some way, at some time, touched every resident of the city.

LOOKING BACK — You don't have to be too much of an old timer to remember the majestic white gabled building at 25th Street and Atlantic Avenue that was the old Princess Anne Hotel. It was torn down in the early 1960's to make way for the new Princess Anne Inn. This hotel was actually the second Princess Anne. The first, a Virginia Beach landmark at 16th Street and Oceanfront, burned in 1907.

PBL thrives at Beach campus

Tidewater Community BY CORINNE LEE

Among their projects was an on-campus lecture series conducted by local businessmen, adoption of a young orphan girl during the holiday season, and sponsorship of a "favorite instructor" contest. Also, the PBL sponsored a coffee and donut concession in the student lounge.

PBL recently held its elections for 1972-73. The following were elected:

Gary John, President. Gary is a sophomore majoring in Business Administration. In his leisure hours, he enjoys coaching a little football team and woodworking.

Terry Gillenwater, Vice-President. Terry is a sophomore majoring in Business Education. He hopes to get his degree in Business Psychology.

Virginia Straddele, Secretary. Ginny is a sophomore majoring in Secretarial Science.

Our sponsor is Miss Patricia Witt, a Business Teacher. She is from Tennessee.

One of the first organizations to form when TCC-VB opened last fall, was the Phi Sigma Chapter of Phi Beta Lambda. Phi Sigma wasted no time in gaining recognition not only on campus, but throughout the state and on the national level.

Who are they? Phi Beta Lambda is the national organization for all students in postsecondary institutions enrolled in business programs.

Who is eligible for membership? Anyone majoring in accounting, business administration, business management, clerk-typist, data processing technology, general merchandising, hotel, restaurant and institutional management, merchandising management, and secretarial science.

Last year, Phi Beta Lambda (PBL) undertook a number of projects that was of direct benefit to the student, college and community.

Lively issue ends

The Sun Survey fell at the Wayside Last Week In The Wake Of Preparing The Salute To The City's 10th anniversary. But it gave more citizens time to respond. And respond they did.

The question about prohibiting go-go dancing proved to be a popular one, indeed. More letters came in. Comments were flying. All in all, it was a lively issue.

Among those who opposed any restriction on this form of entertainment, here were some of the comments: "A resort city needs all types of entertainment." "No common sense laws should provide limits to excesses only. Witness: present liquor statutes. The Council is not elected to be my conscience!"

And from the "Yes" group came this analysis: "Go-go, topless, etc. should be restricted, if ONLY to draw a line somewhere to permitiveness and the desensitizing of public morality."

Many empires have fallen from MORAL decline and the new morality, the divorce and delinquency and V.D. rates, etc., indicate a good start on the road downward. If the trend continues, we won't have to wait for communism to conquer us. Our own weaknesses can be suicide."

So what was the final count? Well, those who favor restriction made a valiant effort the final week but they couldn't overcome the strong support for go-go dancing. It ended 2 to 1 in favor of this gyrating entertainment.

VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

PERSON TO PERSON
CLASSIFIED ADS...

Why do SUN Classified Ads work so well? For several reasons...First of all, they're circulated in 50,000 local homes right here in Virginia Beach every Thursday. This gives you a long weekend of selling... at a time when people have both time and money to spend.

And, the low, low cost of SUN Ads appeal to many people. For instance, a 4 line ad, which will run for 4 weeks... (that's a full 16 days of prime time selling) costs only $5. If you sell before the end of the first or second week, just call and cancel your ad and you will be charged for only the weeks your ad actually ran, at a rate of $1.50 per week. Tuesday noon is the deadline for all ads or cancellations.

We firmly believe a classified ad should have no restrictions on what individuals can or cannot sell, and it is for this reason that we allow you sell, rent or advertise anything you want to sell.

Why not pick up the phone and place a SUN Person to Person Classified ad now...just dial 486-3433 or 34. One of our trained ad takers will gladly help you with the wording of your ad.

Versatile lady enjoys variety of hobbies and life

Mrs. W.A. Green of the Beach seems to be a believer in the old saying, "variety is the spice of life."

Mrs. Green, a retired bookkeeper and secretary, enjoys a variety of hobbies and activities - from gardening and making lace to actively working in the London Bridge Homemakers' Club.

Some of her interests were initiated while she was a young girl at home, while others have been developed through the years. "I like to keep busy so I have various hobbies rather than just one," Mrs. Green remarked.

She has enjoyed gardening - inside and out - for as long as she can remember. "Growing things have always interested me. My mother used to say I should have been born a boy since I always enjoyed working in the field with Dad. We would go out together to watch things as they grew."

She has a garden each summer but can enjoy the home-grown vegetables throughout the year since she cans some of her garden produce. Home-made preserves may also be found on the pantry shelves.

About five years ago she decided to take up African-violet raising. "I wanted to do something inside," she said. Her collection of violets includes about 20 varieties.

In discussing her gardening, Mrs. Green said she likes to grow plants the natural way as much as possible.

Flower arranging also stems from her love of flowers and plants. She picked basic instructions on the art at garden club meetings.

"I prefer using fresh flowers because they grow to suit themselves and have more originality. Mother Nature makes the greatest arrangements."

Music is another love and Mrs. Green plays the piano, organ, guitar and trumpet. She learned to play the piano prior to her teen years but did not play formally for any groups.

She had to drop out of high school because of an illness and she took up the trumpet after she recuperated at the suggestion of her doctor, who was aware of her interest in music.

Thus, when she began playing for the community orchestra in Providence Forge, she doubled on the piano and trumpet. The orchestra played for the local movie theater three times a week.

It provided the background music for the movies.

She became interested in the Hawaiian guitar while she was working at Miller-Rhodes and Schwartz - her first job following her graduation from a business school. Her instructor was a native Hawaiian and she took her lessons during her lunch hour. During the time she was learning it, the YMCA and the YWCA worked together on programs for the Navy personnel at the local bases. She used her musical talents on the guitar and piano to help with the programs.

Following the death of her first husband, she began to study the organ to help herself keep busy. She became the church organist at London Bridge Baptist Church, a position she held for nine years. At present, she does not play regularly for any church but does substitute occasionally.

Her home is now graced with a red organ which was originally in the old Lyon United Methodist Church. It was the first organ she ever played. The organ was replaced when the new building was finished in the early 1900's.

Sewing was an activity she began learning at the age of 8. "I began by making my own underclothes and progressed from there," Mrs. Green explained. "I remember crying as I had to pick something out. My mother wouldn't do it because she said if I'd paid attention to what I was doing I wouldn't be picking it out. She was right."

Her grandmother was a seamstress adept at tailoring. She had passed her skill on to Mrs. Green's mother who in turn taught it to Mrs. Green. "I never thought when I was learning tailoring that I would ever be using my knowledge to help alter clothes for military personnel during the war," she said.

Feeling that she wanted to do something to help during the war, she took a job in a Virginia Beach tailoring shop to alter uniforms for soldiers. "The government just didn't have the time to make uniforms to fit so they had to be altered."

"I even altered a uniform for Douglas Fairbanks Jr.," she recalled. "It's interesting how something can seem so routine at the time you're doing it but later brings interesting memories for one reason or another."

Her mother and grandmother were also responsible for her ability to crochet and quilt. "My mother taught me to crochet and my grandmother started me quilting when I was a small child. I have her quilting frame."

A fifth grade teacher showed her how to tie the tatting. She learned knitting on her own. She also makes lace and has braided and hooked rugs.

Cramius was added to her list of interests in the past couple of years when she took classes through the Department of Parks and Recreation. She learned china painting techniques by attending a couple of symposiums at a local shop and studying instruction books.

Recently she decided to try her hand at tooling leather, which is one of her husband's hobbies. "I just wanted to see if I could learn how so I made several small pieces and cut," she said.

Friends and family may enjoy her many hobbies as most of her gifts for Christmas and special occasions such as birthdays are handmade. She also made a granddaughter's wedding veil of tatted lace with seed pearls and French illusion.

In addition to her many hobbies, she is active in the Women's Society of Christian Service and the Nettle Hebdon Circle at Lynnhaven United Methodist Church. She is a member of the London Bridge Homemakers' Club, and served as president for three years. She's also a charter member of the Virginia Beach Eastern Star Chapter 75. She belonged to the Lynnhaven Garden Club for a few years before helping to organize the Eastern Shore Garden Club.

Working as a bookkeeper and secretary through the years, she stayed with her first job for 12 years. Later she worked for an Esso Oil distributor for seven years before he sold out. Her last job began as a temporary one but she ended up working for seven and a half years for Roy DeHart's Construction.

Following her husband's retirement from the Navy, she decided to drop some of her activities, so she could spend more time with her family. "Sometimes we become so involved we lose sight of important things," she said. She resigned as secretary of the Eastern Star and dropped out of the garden club.

Opposing views on ERA presented to Council of Church Women

"The Equal Rights Amendment will remove all barriers to equality treatment regardless of sex," Mrs. Alfred Wood, League of Women Voters, told members of the Virginia Beach Council of Church Women United.

"We do not oppose equal rights but we do not oppose the Equal Rights Amendment because of its broad scope," Mrs. Arthur Gallagher, president of the Richmond Diocesan Council of Catholic Women, an affiliate of National Council, said in presenting the reasons for the opposition of the Council to the amendment.

The two speakers presented the opposing views on the amendment at a forum held by the Council of Church Women United Friday morning at the First Presbyterian Church Chapel. Preceding the forum, officers for 1973-74 were installed.

Mrs. Gallagher told those in attendance that the National Council of Catholic Women comprised of approximately 10 million women, are not in favor of the ratification of the amendment, which reads:

Section 1: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex."

Section 2: "The Congress shall have the power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article."

Section 3: The Amendment shall take effect two years after the date of ratification."

Women already have recourse against discrimination through the Equal Pay Act of 1963 and the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and similar laws, Mrs. Gallagher said. She feels the amendment would falsely proclaim the sameness of sex rather than equality.

Emphasizing that equality does not mean sameness, Mrs. Wood explained that the amendment would not prohibit reasonable classifications based on characteristics that are unique to one sex. Equality would mean decisions on employment as well as other areas such as social security and divorce, will be based on an individual factor rather than a sex factor.

She noted that the working women who favor the ERA are aware that laws in the present state of technology and collective bargaining practices not only do not help them but seem to keep them from moving into better jobs.

The Catholic Council feels that the amendment will wipe out laws in states which make husbands responsible for their wives and children, Mrs. Gallagher said. It would also necessitate changing the Social Security law which presently allows women to retire at 62 and men at 65.

It would subject women to military service and override some of the laws dealing with sex acts against women.

"I don't think it's fair that men must wait until 65 to retire while women can do so at 62," Mrs. Wood commented. "Statistics show that women tend to live longer than men."

She also brought out the fact that a housewife who has not worked outside of the home has no social security benefits of her own. If she and her husband should obtain a divorce she would receive no social security benefits regardless of her age or ability or lack of it to support herself. If her husband dies she draws a smaller amount whereas her death does not affect his benefits at all.

"What a housewife does is not accounted for at all."

The fact that women would be eligible for draft as well as men would not mean that certain physical characteristics would not be taken into consideration in determining roles in the services. She pointed out that women have been serving in the military for years on a voluntary basis.

Sex laws would not be invalidated because of the ERA according to lawyers with whom the League of Women Voters have conferred or have read their opinions. Many states have laws which make it impossible or very difficult for married or divorced women to obtain credit on their own, sign contracts or own property in their own names.

Mrs. Wood said the League feels if the ERA is not ratified by the required number of states, women can not expect any further improvement in their status in the near future. "It could, perhaps, even take a downhill slide toward our fettered past."

Mrs. Gallagher concluded her presentation by explaining, "We believe in achieving rights, not incurring unnecessary risks or undesirable burdens. This is the approach favored by two of the counties most prominent constitutional authorities, Prof. Philip B. Kurland and Prof. Paul A. Freund."

The national board of Church Women United supports the amendment but the local unit has not as yet taken a position.

Officers installed were Mrs. George E. Grant, president; Mrs. L. W. Chase, vice-president; Mrs. Arthur M. Gallagher Jr., treasurer and Mrs. J. H. Kircheval, secretary.

VIRGINIA BEACH. Where The Living Is Lovely

FALSE CAPE AT VIRGINIA BEACH... What Other Seaside Resort Offers Such Variety?

Twenty-eight miles of seashore, not interrupted by jetties! At historic Cape Henry on the north, a cross marks the site of the Jamestown colonists first landing. Near is the oldest (1791) federal lighthouse, and 2,770-acre Seashore State Park with nature trails through primeval cypress swamps. Then cottages line the beach for several miles. Next come miles of luxurious high rise hotels, motels and apartments, shopping centers, concrete boardwalk, amusement parks, three fishing piers, etc. Next comes Rudee Inlet, a narrow waterway that takes sport fishermen from a marina and charterport tucked into a small inland bay out to sea for some of the world's best fishing. Below the inlet lies Sandbridge, a quiet non-commercial, family vacation area of cottages devoid of commercial establishments, and finally False Cape, miles of wild, unpopulated beach for barefoot explorers, nature lovers, and beach buggies. Minutes from the ocean front are half a dozen golf courses, bays and lakes for water skiing, sailing, etc. Less than half an hour away is Norfolk, with a varied sight-seeing tour of historic and other attractions including the world's largest, naval base and only 6000 miles from the beach are Williamsburg, Jamestown, and Yorktown!

Higgins Realty

Higgins Realty is celebrating its 10th anniversary this month along with the city of Virginia Beach. The main office, at Indian River Rd. and Military Highway, was established in January 1962, incorporated in 1964 with Cecil M. Harrison, President, and a staff of five. As the area has grown and progressed in the past 10 years, so has Higgins Realty. There are now branches in Chesapeake and a new branch just opened in December at 3700 S. Plaza Trail, Va. Beach. Higgins Realty specializes in sales, rentals and custom home building. They employ 35 agents and 7 brokers of which 20 will be GRI (Graduates Realtors Institutes) this year. Joseph C. Robinson is General Manager of the new office in Virginia Beach, with a personable, friendly staff of 15 specializing in residential sales. They have the distinction of being the only Virginia Beach Realtor who is a member of the Homes for Living Network, a National Network of Professional Real Estate firms organized and trained to expedite the purchase and sale of homes locally or across the nation and to provide the finest personalized real estate service. Mr. Robinson chose Virginia Beach for his permanent home when retiring from the Navy in 1967, "because I like Virginia Beach. I'm crazy about it." He has three sons, one who will graduate from Old Dominion University this year and go into the home building business. His wife, Grace, just acquired her real estate license. Besides raising a family, he is also active in local organizations, including the Norwist Masonic Lodge, Khedive Temple, Legion of Honor, of which he will be Commander this year. He is an Elder of Diamond Springs Christian Disciples Church. "I don't see any decrease in the population explosion in Virginia Beach for the next five years," Mr. Robinson stated; "which means building in Virginia Beach will have to expand to the rural areas."

And the emotional rewards of his job were never more evident than at Christmas. "One thing that really touched me was when one of our leaders, with four children in the program, came to the door with a basket of vegetables she'd grown herself, topped off with a big piece of homemade ginger bread. I thought that was one of the most thoughtful gifts anyone could receive."

Then there was the Donn Lee family down the street from the VPI office on North Landing Road.

"There's an Arabian horse down there named Michael. I love that horse. The Lee children came up to see me Christmas and said they couldn't give me Michael for a gift, so they did the next best thing and gave me a miniature gray spotted horse that's the image of him."

And it's right there on his desk. "It's things like that, that make it all worthwhile."

4-H movement one of largest in the world

Four-H is an action movement, and one of the largest for youth in the world.

There are four million 4-H boys and girls in the United States and Puerto Rico, with programs in 85 other countries.

It's a youth educational program of the Cooperative Extension Service. Conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture, the State Land-Grant Universities, and the local government, it's assisted by business persons, those in industry and community groups.

The emblem is a green four-leaf clover on white background, with a white H on each leaf. Green represents life and growth; white is for purity.

The four H's are: Head, learning, thinking, making decisions; Heart, love, feelings for others, setting values; Hands, learning to do things with the hands, developing skills, learning a trade; Health, developing habits of everyday living for keeping yourself and others healthy.

The motto is, "To Make the Best Better." The 4-H'er strives to improve himself and help others to do so. He or she is expected to take a project and work on it for one year. This is in-depth study. Services are free and require no equipment, as a rule.

Parents provide leadership and give support to the total program. An adult leader is a volunteer who serves as advisor and helps in any way necessary to promote the club. Four-H members, 12 to 19, may act as leaders to other members.

Selected faculty of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, Blacksburg act as Extension Agents. They help to design and build 4-H programs.

Because 4-H'ers reach around the world, they have the opportunity to visit other 4-H'ers in foreign countries through exchange programs. One of the most popular and familiar is the 4-H International Farm Youth Exchange (IFYE). Families may participate in a host capacity.

MINIATURE MICHAEL — The Donn Lees gave the tiny version of their Arabian horse, Michael, to 4-H Extension Agent John Beasley.

A SUN SUPPLEMENT

JANUARY 11, 1973

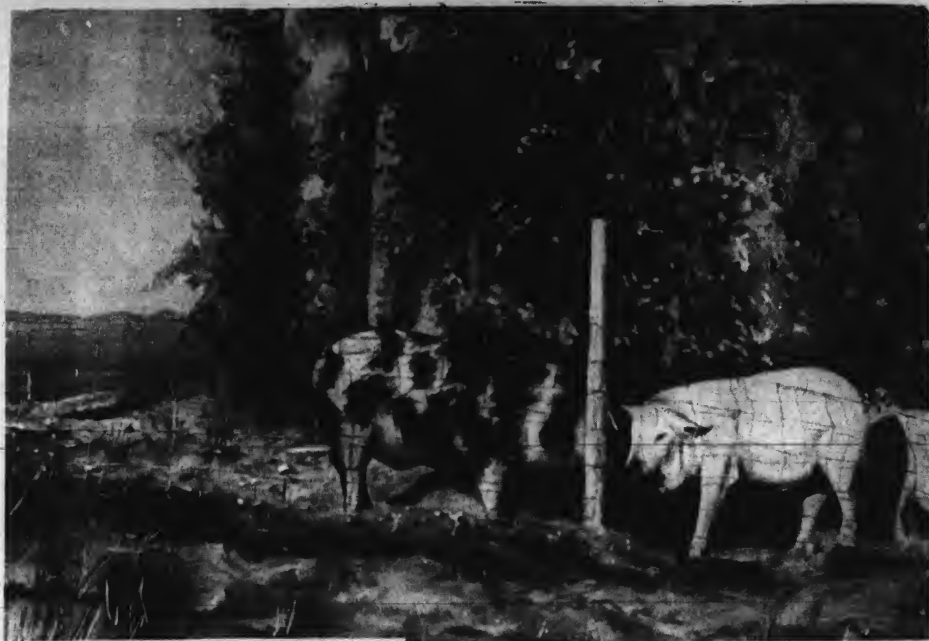

The painting at left by Richard Sachrist and the bottom painting by Charles W. Kello are representative works from the two-man show currently on exhibit at the Schertle Gallery.

'Morning Flight'

'Social Security'

'Country Gentlemen'

Schertle Gallery caters to every taste in art

"We are trying to cater to the taste of anyone who comes in the door," says Burton Jones, owner of the Schertle Art Gallery in Virginia Beach.

The Schertle Gallery has something to answer almost any need in the art field. It has a different two-man show every month, a continuous exhibition of every type of painting, a frame shop, an art supply section, a painting repair section, a collection of print reproductions, mirrors, a painting rental system and art instruction.

The current two-man show, which will be on exhibit at the gallery through this month, features Charles W. Kello Sr. and Richard Sechrist.

Kello is a commercial artist whose son is also a painter. Kello works in almost every medium, and his Schertle exhibit includes works in pastels, watercolors, sepia, oils and ink.

One of Kello's most humorous works is entitled "Social Security" and shows two chimpanzees snuggling. Another animal portrait, facetiously titled "Country Gentlemen," is a 1970 Kello watercolor work depicting pigs on a farm. The painting is a prize winner and is priced quite high, at $1,500.

"Autumn Scäpe," a very large oil, is brilliant with trees of red and gold. "Sandscape" is a quiet landscape in India ink, and "Sam Lee's House" is an oil of an old house with a brick chimney.

Richard Sechrist, a letter carrier for the Norfolk Postal Service, works mainly in acrylics. His "Morning Flight," a very crisply executed acrylic, shows geese flying across the horizon.

"Sunny Day" shows a golden woods with beautiful acrylic colors, and "Green Woods on White" is an effective little acrylic work showing green trees on a white background.

With a few exceptions, the paintings in both the Kello and Sechrist exhibits are very reasonably priced and are nicely framed at no extra charge.

Another feature at the Schertle Gallery is a continuous exhibit of works by Anne Woolard, who works mainly in acrylics and currently has an exhibit of still lifes.

Ms. Woolard is a former art teacher in the public schools, a Virginia Beach artist and prize winner. She teaches all art classes at the gallery.

Classes are currently offered four times a week, two in the morning and two at night. Each class contains 10 people and is primarily for beginners.

The classes cost $30 for a six-week course meeting two hours each week. Although the current classes are filled, the gallery will soon be opening up new classes for students of any age.

The Schertle Gallery is one of a national chain of galleries. The Virginia Beach gallery gets many of its paintings from a central source, which supplies all the galleries across the country. The galleries have about 400 artists on exclusive contract.

The varied works offered include everything from a little clown print for a child's room to an original abstract in big, bold colors.

Customers who can't make up their minds about a certain painting are invited to rent the work. Paintings may be rented for three months, renewed for another three months and then either returned to the gallery or purchased. The rental fee may be applied toward the purchase price.

"The rental idea lets people live with a painting for a while before making a large investment," Jones pointed out.

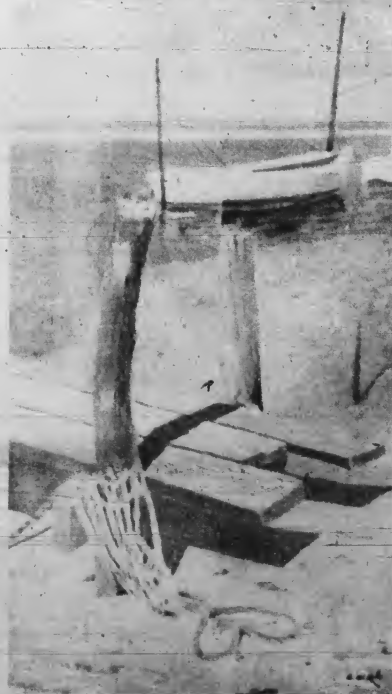

A very significant part of the gallery business is custom framing. It can supply between 350 to 400 frame styles, or framing tools may be purchased for the do-it-yourself buff.

The gallery currently contains about 2,500 original paintings and nearly 300 print reproductions.

The next two-artist show at the gallery will feature Virginia Hurley and John B. Tenney through the month of February.

The gallery is located at 4702 Virginia Beach Blvd., one block west of Pembroke Mall. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday; 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and 1 to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Friends of Music

Bringing good music to people

By DONNA HENDRICK

"We want to bring to bring good, serious music to the people," says G. Stafford Balderson, president of the Virginia Beach Friends of Music.

The Friends of Music are doing exactly that with their series of winter recitals, featuring emerging talents in classical music.

In previous years, the Friends have sponsored three concerts each winter. But the size of their audience has been growing and this year the Friends decided to sponsor four concerts.

The first recital, on October 29, featured Japanese pianist Minoru Nojima. Contalto Louise Parker sang in recital November 19 and this month's concert, January 21, will feature Japanese violinist Hamao Fujiwara. A recital in March will spotlight American pianist Robert DeGaetano.

A recital series has been an overwhelming critical success and, according to Balderson, is the only major recital series in the Tidewater area.

In August, 1967, the Friends of Music was organized to foster music in Virginia Beach and to sponsor an ambitious Arts Festival in the summer of 1968. The several hundred members of the Friends of Music mounted an elaborate, expensive festival spanning three weekends.

Among those featured were Odetta, the Norfolk Symphony, the Recorder Society, the Puppypat Puppet Theatre, the Virginia Beach Civic Chorus, Veronica Tyler, the Felman Quartet, William Warfield, Carlos Montoya and the School of Music Faculty Concert Band.

"Music really came alive in Virginia Beach at that time," Balderson said, "but the festival was very expensive. It cost $50,000 or so. We raised the money we had budgeted through contributions, but there was a serious falldown in audience.

"At the end of the festival we were left with a financial deficit. And everybody was exhausted. So we didn't have another festival."

Instead, the Friends of Music decided to turn their attentions to bringing a recital series to the area. They also hit upon the idea of each winter's series having a musical theme.

This year's theme is the musical friendship between two great composers of the 19th century, Schumann and Brahms.

"Each of our artists is performing major works by these composers," Balderson said. "We sometimes have problems in getting programs containing these works, especially when dealing with the younger performers.

"Ever since the festival, I have been the contact between the Friends and the artists' agents. I go to New York and initially deal with the agents, who can give us a good idea of what that particular artist is prepared to do."

Besides Balderson and his staff of officers, the Friends of Music is also directed by an executive committee and an advisory committee of experts.

"When there are questions about a program the executive committee doesn't feel qualified to answer, we draw on our advisory committee of specialists," he said. "The really difficult thing is coming up with an idea and then working out the details."

The current elected officers of the Friends of music are president, Stafford Balderson; first vice president, Mrs. E. Bradford Tazewell Jr.; second vice president, Oscar Northen; recording secretary, Mrs. Robert Bennett, and treasurer, Mrs. John A. Trinder.

The officers appoint the executive board and the board in turn appoints the advisory committee.

The officers serve two-year terms, which will expire in May. Balderson is only the third president of the Friends. Mrs. John W. Musick was the first president and Mrs. John H. Doyle Jr. was the second.

The Friends of Music have no real "home," but present each concert at the Plaza Junior High School auditorium, which is rented for each recital. This situation is not ideal, according to Balderson, but it serves adequately. The Friends do not plan to build their own theatre, preferring to rent the school auditorium.

"We think that Plaza Junior High is fairly well located in Virginia Beach," Balderson said. "It is easy to get to from almost any area of the city. It is a fine auditorium of medium size and the acoustics are OK. That's about the best we can do right now."

Each recital in the winter concert series is preceded by a pre-concert lecture on some aspect of the program. Bristow Hardin, who has taught piano in Virginia Beach for 50 years and is a former concert pianist, supervises the pre-concert lectures.

Although he is not a professional musician, Balderson does play the piano and is on the board directors of the Norfolk Symphony and vice president of the Feldman Chamber Music Society.

"I went to my first piano recital in Baltimore when I was 10 years old, and I was bitten by the bug then," Balderson said. "Music has been a major part of my life ever since."

Although the Friends recitals have been huge critical successes, Balderson said that the financial success of the concerts has not been as great.

"But the concerts are budgeted in such a way that they will pay for themselves with as little as 300 subscribers," Balderson said.

A subscriber is a member who is a season ticket holder. Anyone may become a member of the Friends of Music, for as little as $2 a year.

"This has been our most ambitious season," Balderson said. "With four concerts budgeted at $4,300. The artists get $3,300 of that and the other $1,000 goes for all the extras, renting the auditorium, printing the programs, mailing our newsletter."

Besides the winter recital series, the Friends also sponsor a series of very informal musical meetings in members' homes.

"We call them Potpourris, for lack of a better name," Balderson laughed. "Whoever can come and do something musical is invited. A lot of young performers are interested in playing for a small audience. They call us and ask to perform or if we know them, we ask them."

"We have them roughly every six weeks and they really are fun."

Last summer, the Friends sponsored a performance by the Williamsburg Consort at the Virginia Wesleyan Summer Music Workshop. The Friends hope to participate in the workshop again this summer.

The Friends of Music is a non-profit, musical, educational group. They contact all public schools and colleges when they send out mailings for the winter concerts.

"We're not a performing organization ourselves, but rather the sponsors of the concerts," Balderson said. "So we don't take these concerts to the schools."

"We think it's more important to encourage students in the schools to go to the concerts rather than have the concerts brought to them."

Membership in the Virginia Beach Friends of Music may be obtained for as little as $2. Balderson urged anyone interested in joining to write the Virginia Beach Friends of Music, P.O. Box 963, Virginia Beach, Va. 23451.

Patrice Munsel stars in Tony-winning 'Applause'

Patrice Munsel stars in the Tony Award-winning Broadway musical hit, "Applause," coming to Chrysler Hall at Scope for three performances on January 12 and 13.

Miss Munsel, former prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is a singer-actress who more recently appeared in notable productions of "The Merry Widow," "Mame," "Dolli Hear a Waltz," "My Fair Lady" and other stage shows as well as many TV shows.

She has been a Time cover girl and appeared on the cover of Life magazine three times. "Applause" is based on the 1950 Bette Davis movie, "All About Eve," an inside view of feudin' and fussin' backstage in Broadway show-business. Per that title the story then centered on an ambitious upstart named Eve Harrington, first encountered as a demure autograph-seeker in a theatre-alley who craftily insinuates herself into the graces of a great stage star, Margo Channing, and then schemes to rob the star of her career and her sweetheart.

The focus of this tale has been shifted from upstart Eve to be "all about Margo" as it has been adapted into a song-filled musical. The center interest is now the stage star (Miss Munsel), forced into a biting, scratching, all-fangs-bared and no-holds-barred battle for survival against the wiles of a sneaky, younger rival.

The stage adaptation is by Betty Comden and Adolph Green, authors of "Bells Are Ringing," "On the Town" and three-time Tony Award winners - with this show, with "Wonderful Town" and with "Hallelujah, Baby!" - and winners of Screen Writers Guild Awards for four of their movie scripts, for "The Bandwagon," "On the Town," "Singing in the Rain" and "It's Always Fair Weather," and honored as well with three Oscar nominations. Charles Strouse and Lee Adams have contributed the songs to the show. They are the team who supplied the ditties to "Bye, Bye, Birdie," "Golden Boy," "All-American" and "Superman."

"Welcome to the Theatre!" is one of their very, ironic numbers that help impart the show's authentic flavor of what big-time Broadway stage life is really like. This is a song that reverses the sentimental roteness of "There's No Business Like Show Business" from "Annie Get Your Gun," and tells it like it is, listing the bells, not the glories, of an acting career, while admitting its irresistible excitement for those magnetized by it.

One of the bonuses of the hazardous-acting-life is admitted in the show's catchy title song that relates how "Nothing I know brings on the glow like sweet applause, having a taste of the sound that says love." This is undoubtedly the most tuneful and popular song in the

Still another of their 15 sassy songs about the theatre world is called "She's No Longer a Gypsy," celebrating the emergence of Eve-the-climber from the ranks of the gypsies, which is the show-business term for the corps of chorus boys and girls who flock from the casts of one Broadway show after another. This rousing paean is sung in a scene that reproduces Joe Allen's - a real hang-out of actors and gypsies in New York's West 46th Street.

Innumerable stories, plays and musicals in the past have told and re-told tales of life behind the Broadway footlights. Usually they've been about the triumph of a neek, frightened understudy taking over a star's role in an emergency - per all those Busby Berkeley musicals starring Ruby Keeler of the 1930s, from "42nd Street" onward. But few have as truly revealed this grubby-but-glamorous world as "Applause."

Walter Kerr of the New York Times declared it an accurate yet exhilarating picture of "the behavior of Broadway's wayward, wicked, winning people."

Ticket prices for "Applause" are as follows:

Friday, January 12, at 8:30 p.m. - $5.50, $6.50, $7.50
Saturday, January 13, at 2:30 p.m. - $4.50, $5.50, $6.50
Saturday, January 13, at 8:30 p.m. - $6.00, $7.00, $8.00

American artist Stuart Davis was an important figure in the development of the use of color in contemporary art. This work, "Little Giant Still Life," is from the collections of the Virginia Museum and may be seen in the Artmobile exhibition, "Encounter II: Color."

'Encounter II: Color' is Artmobile exhibit

The expanding role of color and its dramatic effect on contemporary art will be examined in a Virginia Museum Artmobile exhibition at Virginia Wesleyan College, January 15-19. "Encounter II: Color," the second in a series of Artmobile exhibitions dealing with various aspects of the creation of a work of art, is currently on a tour of the Virginia Museum. "Encounter II," which will be open to the public, explores the artist's use of color and color effects in much the same manner that "Encounter I: Space" delved into the various methods by which an artist could create the feeling of space and depth in his work. The touring exhibition will be set up near Virginia Wesleyan's Fine Arts building.

To demonstrate the use of color, the Artmobile display will make use of paintings and prints from the collections of the Virginia Museum.

Filatov Bears among Moscow Circus stars

The world-renowned animal act, Valentin Filatov's Bear Circus, is a stellar feature of the internationally celebrated "Moscow Circus," currently at Scope through January 14.

The circus will also perform at the Hampton Coliseum January 17-21.

To the sound of bells, a troupe flashes into the arena spotlight pulled by three bears. The fabulous Filatov carefully watches over his select group of quadruped acrobats, jugglers, gymnasts, rope walkers and bicycle riders.

His shaggy pupils perform so many different acts with such highly-trained precision, it is hard to imagine the performers are really bears. Clown Max, the oldest of Filatov's "actors," and the "impressive" bear motorcycle riding finale bring both unrestrained laughter and applause from delighted audiences.

Growing up in an atmosphere of two generations of circus performers, the famous Filatov began his training as an acrobat. However, always interested in the care and handling of animals, even after an encounter with an angry bear, nearly ended his life. Filatov dreamed of becoming a master trainer.

His father, deputy manager of the Animal Center, turned their apartment into an overflowing Noah's ark. Thus, able to play with and study many kinds of animals, the future trainer learned animal habits.

dispositions and means of influencing them.

This highly experienced and strict mentor has taught his human assistants to consider themselves thoughtful and creative artists of unyielding patience.

With such an understanding philosophy of training, which he considers the essence of his life, it is no wonder that Valentin Filatov is considered an artist of the 'highest' world-wide regard.

The Filatov Bears are only one attraction among many at the "Moscow Circus." Other stars featured are the great clown Oleg Popov, the daredevil Cosack riders Iriston with their feminine leader, aerialists Veronika Birina, Galina Petronakaya and Valentina Gorionova with Alexander Denisenko, still-walker Valeriy Glezman and Oleg Shavanov.

Plus the mixed animal act of Ludmila Filatov, the Tuva jugglers and ropewalkers, the Yegorov hand balancers, eccentric musician Ignatov, Stanislav Chernykh who balances on a tower of cylinders, the Barkar acrobats and the strong men jugglers Igor Petrukhin and Vladimir Smirnov.

The legendary "Moscow Circus" is presented by Morris Chalfen, in association with Madison Square Garden Attractions Inc. and the U.S. State Department Cultural Exchange Program.

Hilltop N. expansion denied by Planning Commission

The City Planning Commission Tuesday turned down an application to expand Hilltop North Shopping Center after an emotional 90-minute session.

Residents of the area who opposed the expansion filled the commission meeting room to overflowing. They stood against the walls and in the doorway after every chair was filled. The session was interrupted several times by applause from the opponents.

The application by Su Su Developers before the commission involved a change of zoning from Residential Suburban District 3 to General Commercial District 1 and a use permit for a proposed Montgomery Ward store selling tires, batteries and accessories.

The 10 acres of land involved in the application is immediately east of the existing Hilltop North Center, north of Laskin Road, west of Winwood Drive and along Laurel Lane in Lynnhaven Borough.

Su Su Developers plan to build an enclosed mall adjacent to the existing shopping center containing 29 business firms. The developers also plan to enclose the shopping center with a looped road involving an extension of Laurel Lane, construction of a new road along the eastern side of the center and using the Laskin Road feeder road. The city also plans to close the existing crossover at Laskin Road.

H. Calvin Spain, attorney representing the developers at the hearing, said that the covered mall was envisioned by the developers as another Penrose Mall.

Spain also said that the completed shopping center would generate $60 million a year in business and valuable real estate and sales taxes for the city.

Spain also said that the developer has offered to deed to the city 190 feet of wooded land with the exception of the frontage on Laskin Road, which would serve as a buffer between residential areas and the shopping center.

Spain proposed that the city lease the land to the Winwood Civic League (which opposed the application) for $1 a year. The 190 feet of land would be parallel to Winwood Drive, which borders the Linlier residential development.

"The developer has no opposition to the findings of the planning department in this matter," Spain said. "It is unprecedented for a developer to offer what has been offered here."

To insure the protection of an adequate buffer between the center and the residential area, the planning department recommended that a strip of land 250 feet west of Winwood Drive remain as single family residential and that a 50-foot tree retention strip be maintained along the western boundary.

The department also recommended that the developer provide a 60-foot street on the west side of the buffer strip parallel to the residential area.

"The developer has no

dedication," Spain said. "But where it will go is the question."

Attorney Richard G. Brydges represented the Linlier Civic League in opposing the application. Brydges presented petitions to the commissioners signed by Linlier residents and also introduced several residents who cited problems with the existing Hilltop North Center.

Don Merrick, a resident and representative of the Linlier Civic League, said that the area in question had been historically zoned residential since its conversion from farmland.

This shopping center have updated the laissez faire attitude of 'Let the buyer beware' to 'Let the owners of homes around shopping centers be damned,'" Merrick said.

"The owners of the shopping center have proved they are not responsible citizens," he said.

Michael Pasquale, a resident whose home is at the rear of the existing shopping center, said that he and his family had been bothered by noise pollution, strong lights and trash from the center.

"If I sound furious, I am," Pasquale said. "My neighbors are furious, too."

Rick Harvey, who lives in Laurel Manor, said that the developers had bulldozed trees which were to be left standing, had contributed to flooding conditions in the area and had drawn rats to the area because of improper sanitation facilities.

Harvey said that he brought a dead rat which had been killed when residents saw it running from the shopping center toward the homes. The rat was contained in a cardboard box and Harvey did not exhibit it at the meeting.

Chairman J. Harry Mote asked for the site plan on the original shopping center complex. He said that the developers had done "a mighty poor job" of providing a landscaped screen between the center and the homes.

"I'm embarrassed and sick that this type of situation has occurred," Mote said. "This is why this body is criticized so severely for not living up to its responsibilities. It was the intent of this commission that this center be built exactly as shown on the site plan."

At the conclusion of the session, Chairman Mote asked the planning staff to see that the shopping center was cleaned up and that an adequate buffer be provided between it and the homes.

The Planning Commission is an advisory body to City Council and the denial of the application does not automatically mean denial by council. The same use permit and change of zoning application will come before council, sometime in the future, but the City Clerk's office said that it could be cleared up and that in two months before Council would hear the application.

Bud Garner was surprised and pleased when he won the city's Sportsman of the Year trophy.

Bud Garner is Beach's Sportsman of the Year

Bud Garner was named Virginia Beach Sportsman of the Year by the Virginia Beach Sports Club Tuesday night. The announcement was made at the Annual Jamboree, which was held at the Cavalier Hotel.

Garner has been involved with youth activities ever since he moved to Tidewater in 1960. Just recently he was named to the Board of Directors of the Citizens Committee of the Juvenile Court.

His success as a coach has been phenomenal. Last fall, he coached his 125 pound Thalia team to the City championship. He and his oldest son, Steve, coached the 1971 Farm League team in Lynhaven to the league championship.

His 1969 Major League baseball team won the championship.

Bud Garner has served in administrative positions in the recreational program as well as being an on-the-field coach. In 1967, he served as the area chairman of the Thalia, Birchwood, and Malibu Recreation Association. As area chairman, he was responsible for the operation of seventeen basketball and five football teams. He served as Vice-president of the Lynnhaven Farm-Bronco League in both 1970 and 1971.

Born and raised in Baltimore, Maryland, Garner attended Friends and Mc-Donough Military Academy. He served in the Air Force from 1961 through 1965.

Three of his five children have been on his teams. Steve, the oldest, played on his father's baseball and football teams. He is now a freshman at Madison College. Douglas graduated from his father's teams, and his experience won him a berth on the Princess Anne High School junior varsity football team last year.

The Sportsman of the Year award is one of the most coveted awards made by the Virginia Beach Sports Club. A recipient must be nominated for the honor and must be judged as having done more than anyone else for sports in the City.

Drug study decision due

Virginia Beach has an opportunity for a Comprehensive Drug Abuse Treatment Program study—its implementation is up to City Council.

Though the drug rehabilitation problem is complex, the concept of the study is simple.

Hire a professional on the drug rehabilitation problem to take an overall look at the problem and the possible solutions; that is the concept of Dr. Jean Dowling, director of the Virginia Beach Community Mental Health and Mental Retardation board, as presented to council Monday.

City Council is going to study the concept for a week and vote pro or con at the next Council meeting.

The concept would cost the city $25,000. Half of the $50,000 the council-appointed board, under Dr. Dowling, feels is necessary to curb the drug problem in Virginia Beach. The other $25,000 would be supplied by the State.

Originally the program was to be funded by a branch of the Federal Government, the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH). The NIMH approved the grant to the city sponsored program but snags have arisen and the money has been delayed according to Lawrence Wales.

City Manager Roger M. Scott is of the opinion that funds for the study will never arrive from the Federal Government.

The drug study, as planned by the Mental Health and Retardation Board, would be an attempt to simplify and extend the services offered to the drug user, according to the presentation Dr. Dowling gave Council. The board and Dr. Dowling feel it is necessary to find the most effective means of treating the problem and, if they are not being used, what it would take to make the changes for the better.

The Board wants to put all the organizations under one umbrella and take the best path for the city to treat the most drug users for each tax dollar spent.

The spending of the tax dollars is the job of City Council, of course, and their decision will be made at Monday's Council meeting.

Taxi fares up

If you're going to hail a taxi in Virginia Beach—take some extra money along.

City Council passed a price increase for the Virginia Beach taxis Monday. In a 10-0 vote (Councilman Floyd Waterfield was absent) council raised the cost of the first half-mile of taxi fare from $.50 to $.60. The rest of your trip will be divided into fifth instead of fourths, now at the same cost to the traveler.

Woman robbed

A 25-year-old woman was robbed at pistol point, under threat of harm to her children, last Friday night at the Princess Anne Plaza Shopping Center.

Police quote the woman with saying she was accosted just as she entered her car in the Plaza parking lot, moments after leaving a doctor's office about 8 p.m.

The assailant reportedly forced her car door open, pointed a pistol at her and demanded the hand over her money.

The gunman allegedly warned her not to scream if she valued her children.

The bandit took $23 from her and fled on foot.

Auditions open for talent show

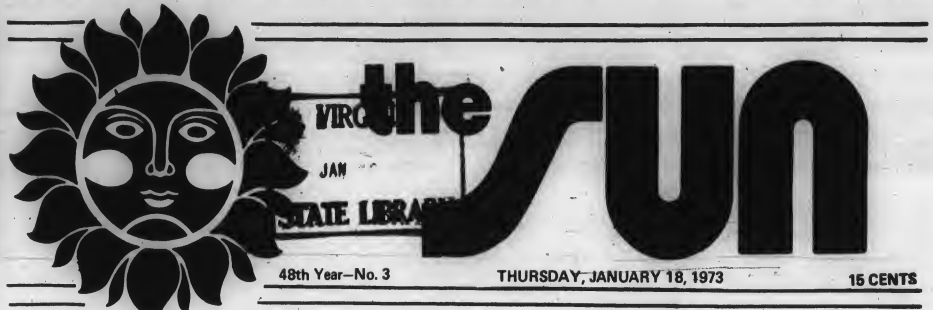

Auditions will be held January 30 and 31 for the Kellam High School Band.

Parents Association talent show, to be held Feb. 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium.

Auditions are open to the public and rock groups are welcome. A fee of $2 per person will be charged to audition. Prizes of $50, $25 and $10 will be awarded for best performances at the talent show. Judges will be announced later.

For further information, phone 340-0611 or 340-7768.

Councilman Charles Gardner

Ordinance would cover nudity

By KIRK BARBER

If Councilman Charles Gardner has his way, topless go-go dancers will be covered with the passage of his proposed ordinance "prohibiting certain public nudity."

The proposed ordinance should reach the council floor before February 5, the deadline date set on deferred live entertainment use permits.

The Council's acceptance, which informed sources say will happen, would strictly prohibit topless go-go dancing in the city, unless a court order overrides the council's right to pass such an ordinance.

The ordinance copies which have been given to each member of council, is broken down into four basic parts: a definition of the unlawful acts; exceptions to the ordinance; effective date of the ordinance (if passed); and a definition of public nudity.

Public nudity, according to the ordinance proposed by Gardner means "a state of undress so as to expose the human male or female genital, pubic area or buttocks with less than a fully opaque covering, or the showing of the female breast with less than a fully opaque covering of any portion below the top of the nipple."

The ordinance defines the unlawful act of nudity as being: "Every person who knowingly, voluntarily and intentionally appears in public or in a public place or in a place open to the public or open to public view in a state of nudity, or employs, encourages or procures another person to so appear, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. According to Justice of the Peace Kelly Rice a first offense for a misdemeanor in Virginia Beach is usually light and only a fine is imposed on the defendant.

Exceptions to the application of the proposed ordinance include the arts. Arts are vaguely defined as "shows or performances as a form of expression of opinion, communication speech, ideas, information, art or drama as differentiated from commercial or business advertising, promoting, selling or serving products or services or otherwise advancing the economic welfare of a commercial or business enterprise such as a hotel, motel, bar, nightclub, restaurant, tavern or dance hall." Define the exceptions to the "ordinance prohibiting certain public nudity."

The public nudity ordinance would take effect one day after passage by council. Councilman Gardner feels the people of Virginia Beach want this type ordinance, citing at least 400 written examples of people condoning his actions pertaining to public nudity. Gardner, when questioned about the effects on the tourist trade, stated that he felt there would be no adverse effects.

1973 may be best year ever, says city's tourism director

By RUBY JEAN PHILLIPS

Florida's Disney World paid its toll on Virginia Beach tourism in 1972, but the city still came out nearly 10 per cent ahead in business despite the multi-million dollar attraction—and despite destructive floods, pollution in Chesapeake Bay, a badly publicized beach erosion problem and a rainy Labor Day week-end.

Everything pointed toward a poor year, tourist wise, and certainly some of the in-keepers were lamenting loss of business, but Director of Tourism Robert Whitley had a smile on his face when the final figures were tallied.

"It was a good, good year," he commented. "In conventions it was one of our best years."

Whitley's division of the Department of Industrial Development brought in eight conventions in 1972. The 10,700 delegates attending these conventions spent nearly $2.2 million in Virginia Beach. The individual motels and special groups brought in even more conventions.

When 1972 closed out tourism had brought in some $62 million in business and that 1.8 million people had visited the beach; 1.2 million people had spent at least one night in a local accommodation.

"The $60,000 difference shows that our own people, and daytime visitors from other parts of Virginia, are frequenting the beach, eating in restaurants, purchasing in retail stores, contributing to the overall revenue picture."

This was quite an impressive figure for Virginia Beach. Even Williamsburg, the state's tourism queen, only had two additional visitors in June over 1971's figures, and only four more tourists in July. Whitley believes that this, too, was caused by Disney World. And the floods.

A large part of our business depends on other areas in Virginia, like Richmond, Roanoke, etc., and those states hit particularly hard by the floods: Pennsylvania, oh, all of those who suffered Storm Agnes with us," Whitley said.

As for Disney World, well, Whitley admits it "hit us hard." But it won't be the same story next year because all those people who fought the Florida traffic to see Disney World "won't go back there next year."

"They've seen it," Whitley explains. "Why should they go back? No, they'll return to their own family resort in 1973."

Maybe "family resort" is the key to what Whitley is talking about. The Beach for years has been built up as a family resort. In recent years this has been less emphasized. But in 1973 the city's advertising will once again stress the "family resort" angle. "We're going back to that idea," Whitley said, "because that really is what we are...a family resort."

Last year saw the largest increase in the number of new accommodations units the resort has ever seen. Between November 1971 and October 1972, the resort gained 1,000 units. "Some were started, some were completed," Whitley explained, "but all figured into the 1972 total, including the new Cavalier and the Sheridan."

The 1971-72 construction definitely breaks a record. The year before there were only 526 new units; and only 611 new units the year before that.

There's no doubt that there are more rooms or camp sites or cottages to accommodate visitors; and this throws even more of a strain on the annual figures...it took more visitors to make the city look like it was breaking even; a great many more to come up with a 9.8 per cent increase over last year.

The increase in tourist accommodations explains why the city's totals look so good. "Even though individuals in the business were down in 1972, we must look at the overall picture," Whitley said. "More tourist accommodations. And enough new business to not only make up for the extra rooms, but enough to tally up a 9.8 per cent increase. Now, that's a good season."

The past year was successful. But what about 1973? Well, it all depends on the weather.

DITCHES ARE NIGHTMARES—Lynnhaven Road, North and South, is a motorists' nightmare. It is especially dreaded by school bus drivers. The road is narrow and winding and there are no shoulders to protect a vehicle from the deep ditches on either side.

The driver of this bus was forced into the ditch at the entrance to King's Grant when another vehicle swerved to miss students walking along the road. Fortunately, the bus was empty and the driver escaped without injury.

Same birthday brings message from President

By HELEN CRIST
It was a coincidence, that's what it was, or maybe Mrs. Lucy Aurelio and President Nixon were simply zooming along on the same wave length.
At any rate, when both celebrated their birthdays Jan. 9, both topped off the natal dinner with identical desserts: yellow cake, split and spread with pineapple filling, the white frosting elaborately decorated with red, white and blue flowers.
"So I ask you, how can you get any closer to a person than that?" said Mrs. Aurelio, a peppy 80-year-old grandmother of 23 and great grandmother of 16. She's here from Rhode Island to spend several months with her daughter and son-in-law, Virginia and Lawrence McGovern, East Plantation Road, Point-o-Woods.
Moreover, Mrs. Aurelio received a personal message from the President. It read: "As we share a mutual birthday, I welcome this opportunity to send you my warmest good wishes. I hope the years ahead will bring you every measure of health and happiness."

The message was instigated by Mrs. Mary Baraco, a friend, who wrote to the President and told him of the mutual birthdays.
"And don't forget the nice letter I had from the congressman," Mrs. Aurelio said.
Congressman G. William Whitehurst wrote to her. "Mrs. Whitehurst and I would certainly like to add our sincere congratulations and best wishes to those of your many friends and relatives on this very special day, and we wish for you all the good things of life."
As we visited her last week, pastel elongated balloons still floated from streamers in the dining room and birthday flowers and presents covered the table.
"From Christmas Eve on it's just like one big party here," she said, adding that the McGoverns and she genuinely liked people and enjoyed having them drop in often.

Known as "Gram" to the six McGovern children and the neighborhood youngsters, there wasn't much doubt that she was a favorite of the young people as we noticed them peering through the window of the storm-door. Repeatedly the McGovern children came inside, stomping the snow from their boots, warming themselves, changing to dry clothes, then rushing out to shovel snow and start snowballing again.
We shared the warm hospitality of the household, had some of the birthday cake and coffee. Pulling on our boots to leave, we observed that this was really some snowfall for our resort city.
"Oh we have this all the time in the winter in Rhode Island," Gram said, "and I'm glad to see it here."
In fact, we remembered, when we called for an interview, and the snow had just begun, we were told, "I'd get Gram to the phone but she's out in the snow playing with the kids."
"I had a ball," she said. "Everything I do is exciting." Norrocking chairs for Gram.

Mrs. Aurelio and 7-year-old David McGovern admire her birthday flowers.

Gunman sought

Police continue their search for a lone gunman who robbed Avalon Cleaners of an undetermined amount of money last Friday evening.
According to investigators the man, who disguised himself by pulling a white stocking over his head, pointed a pistol at the lone clerk and demanded she hand over the cash receipts of the Robbins Corner firm.
The gunman fled on foot following the 6:30 p.m. robbery.

THE BIBLE SAYS
Question:
WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY ABOUT PRIESTS?

The word "priest" first appears in Gen. 14:18 where it's used in reference to Melchizedek, "king of Salem...and...priest of the most high God." This was a one of a kind priesthood, no lineage was established for it. Later God established the Levitical priesthood. For a casual look at this priesthood see Hebrews chapters 7 thru 9. You will notice the Levites were only a shadow, prefiguring Christ, the great High Priest to come. When Jesus established his priesthood, the Levitical sound its fulfillment and was abolished.

Under the New Testament all Christians are priests. The order of priesthood for Christians isn't after Melchizedek or Levi, but rather is after a "royal" order. Peter in writing his general epistle to all Christians told them they are "a chosen generation, a ROYAL PRIESTHOOD, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light." (1 Pet. 2:9) Better he'd told them that they, as living stones, are built up a spiritual house, an HOLY PRIESTHOOD, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. (1 Pet. 2:5)

Look at how John addresses Christians in Rev. 1:6 He says that Jesus Christ, "hath made us kings and priests."

Christians have access to God through their HIGH PRIEST, Jesus, is that high priest. (1 Tim. 2:5, 8, Heb. 3:1) All Christians are members of the ROYAL PRIESTHOOD (1 Pet. 2:9). No special class of Christians, designated "priests" to the exclusion of other Christians is necessary, or indeed authorized in Christ's will and testament. Therefore, to establish such a priesthood, men must look to something other than God's word.

From our legislators

REMARKS OF SENATOR CANADA
CONCERNING
OPENING WEEK SESSION IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Governor Lynwood Holton addressed the opening session of the General Assembly this week and outlined the legislative package that would be presented to the General Assembly. "Quality" education was given top priority by Governor Holton in his address to members of the 1973 General Assembly. He urged that we spend nearly one-third of the $100 million available for appropriation to bring the State's public school system up to the "quality" standards set forth in the Constitution. The Governor said that by appropriating the $30.4 million needed, "the Commonwealth will be providing the financial support necessary for high quality education for all young Virginians."

MENTAL HEALTH

Governor Holton also asked for appropriations to upgrade mental health facilities so that Virginia can become a national model for innovative mental health programs. This is a worthy goal, I think, for as the Governor said, "we all share in the desire to end the isolation of mental patients in depersonalized institutions." Therefore, $4.4 million is being requested to meet the Life Safety Code requirements for our mental institutions and $8.3 million for the construction of the Southwestern Virginia Training School.

We have an obligation to see that the employees of the Commonwealth are adequately and justly compensated for their services. It is obvious that good government services are dependent upon the quality of men and women providing them. The State Government must be competitive with the private sector in municipal governments. Therefore, the Governor has proposed that salary increases for State employees be part of his legislative package.

SENIOR CITIZENS

Another hard-pressed segment of our society is composed of senior citizens. Our senior citizens on fixed income will be happy to know that the Governor has asked for property tax relief for them.

The Governor indicated that one of the top priorities would be the improvement of our correctional programs. He recommended that mental health community-based programs be proposed as a new supporting effort for released prisoners, and a more extensive community-based penal program is being planned for later action. The specifics of the plan call for the closing of the State Penitentiary in 1978, two years earlier than originally anticipated, as savings of $6 million over the original estimates and the use of upgraded field units in lieu of the medium security installations which were previously contemplated. He asked for a new maximum security institution to be located in Mecklenburg County.

I introduced a bill which would provide in capital crimes that a jury or judge would have the option to give a defendant life imprisonment without parole. This bill is designed to take care of the individual who commits a crime so gross that he should not again be allowed to return to society. There are some criminals who have committed a crime so gross, such as mass murder, that to release the criminal back to society would eliminate the deterring effect that punishment has on individuals who might otherwise commit a crime. This is particularly true because in the State of Virginia, life imprisonment carries eligibility for parole in a maximum of 15 years. I think there are some individuals who should not be allowed to return to society, and I think the judge or jury should have the option to inflict this punishment.

TRANSPORTATION

Transportation is an ever-increasing problem, particularly in our urban areas which are so congested. The Governor recommended that the State Highway Department, the Virginia Port Authority, the Virginia Airport Authority, and the Division of Aeronautics of the State Corporation Commission be consolidated into one unified Department of Transportation. This Department would serve as an umbrella organization to develop a state-wide transportation network utilizing all conceivable methods of moving people and goods within and without the Commonwealth.

Of considerable interest to us in Virginia Beach is the topic of environmental protection. In his address, the Governor stated that Virginia must "go beyond responding to crises and begin mapping our environmental goals for the future." He, therefore, asked the legislators to authorize the consolidation of certain agencies now dealing with various environmental problems into an environmental division. I introduced a bill which would place a deposit on all non-returnable containers. This bill is designed to help with the litter problem, and also to save the consumer money as it is cheaper to sell returnable containers rather than non-returnable containers.

REVENUE SOURCES

The Governor related, to the members of the General Assembly that we have $109 million in the budget for the short session. The funds come from three (3) main sources, and they are as follows: First, we will receive a total of $85 million from federal revenue sharing funds, the purpose of which the Governor emphasized, "is to enhance the strength of State and local Governments." Secondly, we have $19 million from state surplus. Thirdly, we have $5 million resulting from a change in federal aid for the construction of water quality facilities which result in the reduction of necessary state funds for such projects.

Three other main topics which the General Assembly will consider are: Pari-Mutuel Betting; Equal Rights Amendment for Women; No-Fault Insurance. I hope that each of you will let me know your views on these matters. My office will be open each Saturday at 4336 Virginia Beach Boulevard, Virginia Beach, for those of you who are interested in discussing the various issues that affect our locality and state. Also, you may write to me in care of the State Capitol, Richmond, Virginia, to express your views on the issue that face the Commonwealth.

MCCLANAN'S BALLOT BILL

Delegate Glenn McClanan introduced a bill Tuesday that would amend the State Code to require the publication of ballots. The section this bill would add states:

(a) Not less than seven days before any election, the electoral board of any county or city shall cause to be published in a newspaper of general circulation in such county or city a copy of the ballot or face of the voting machine to be used in such election. Where the ballots or faces differ for various precincts within the county or city, the board shall cause to be published a copy of each different ballot or face with a designation of the precincts in which it will be used. The cost of publication shall be paid by the county or city wherein the ballots or faces are published.

Pari-mutuel decision

The pari-mutuel betting issue has lost some of its fire since emphasis has swung to whether or not communities should have the option of voting on betting from whether or not legalized gambling is the financial saviour it is cracked up to be.

The issue, in losing some of its emotional backlash, is now in its proper perspective. The people should, indeed, have the right to vote for or against gambling in their community. The decision is too important to too many to be made by a few.

City Council chose Monday not to endorse a resolution to the General Assembly calling for local option on pari-mutuel betting. The logic behind this action escapes us. Why deprive the people of their vote on an issue of such magnitude? Approving legalized gambling is one matter. Approving local option on legalized gambling is quite another.

Council's cold shoulder toward local option is baffling.

Money well spent

Councilman Clarence Holland is due a sincere pat on the back for urging City Council to drop its $3,200 loan agreement with the Virginia Beach Civic Chorus and make it a no-strings-attached grant. The chorus's two standing-room-only concerts before Christmas is proof enough of this group's cultural contribution to the city.

The $3,200 grant is a nonconsequential amount. Especially in light of the city's bonanza from the federal revenue sharing funds, a portion of which must go toward recreation.

The people have spoken out on distribution of these monies and nearly all of the requests have been for recreational facilities. Council would do well to listen to the people they represent.

It is not at all unreasonable that a portion of the recreational amount, as required by the Federal Government, be spent for things the people believe to be important... a municipal pool, a tennis complex, a bicycle trail. And, of course, the civic chorus grant.

The amount needed to cover these requests, one group spokesman totals about $200,000. That is certainly a reasonable price to pay for four very worthwhile and needed endeavors... a bargain in recreational and cultural development.

LOOKING BACK—This industrious agriculture scene should revive some fond memories among the "county folk". And hopefully they will share some of these memories with other Sun readers because there was no information in the files on when or where this scene was photographed. The Sun would welcome from its readers any stories or pictures of Virginia Beach in years gone by.

We at the Norfolk Theatre Center wish to take this opportunity to extend our sincere appreciation to your organization for all of your help in supporting and promoting the arts in general and our theatre in particular during the past year.

currents and cross-currents prevalent in Princess Anne County and Virginia Beach during the past 40 years, it is to be expected that all of your facts and interpretations thereof are not in accord with some thinking. Space will not permit cataloguing here.

Issue is taken, however, to the statement, "The anti's, the minority, had a strong voice in editor J. Wilcox Dunn."

If only the Virginia Beach Sun and the Free Press and its editor use the term of opprobrium, "anti," in referring to us it is of little consequence.

But for others our record follows: Strong support FOR Princess Anne Constitutional office candidates:

1951 on the People's Ticket; 1955 on the Ticket for Princess Anne; 1959, the Independents.

Strong support FOR Virginia Beach Councilman candidates:

1952, John H. Bell and Richard Brydges.

Together as independents: 1954 on ticket for Greater Virginia Beach; 1956 on ticket for Greater Virginia Beach; 1958 on Businessmen's Ticket; 1960 none.

Attention is called to the banners under which the foregoing candidates marched.

In 1951-52, we helped Bell weather the fight FOR the adoption of the County Executive form of government. The Kellam combine made an all-out effort AGAINST it. Had the county form been adopted, much of the public evil and civil strife here during the past 20 years could have been avoided.

The Free Press did not support the Princess Anne County-City of Virginia Beach merger in 1962 which became effective as of January, 1963.

FOR the best interests of the majority of taxpayers of those two political subdivisions, our foresight there said "no" and our hindsight presently still says "no."

The Free Press was then and even now in abeyance as to this community's public affairs being administered FOR all its stockholders - the citizens - and not ruthlessly run as a private corporation for a hand-picked and privileged few.

Were the Free Press and its editor "anti" representative government? Were we the enemy of democracy?

(Or has the Kellam combine been the embodiment of the doctrine of Machine Against Man - Kellamacy against Democracy?)

The verdict is left to the fair-minded and knowledgeable people of this community.

Motorists should applaud police

To the Editor:

Motorists who complain about tickets issued in the crackdown at Hilltop should instead applaud the efforts being made by the Virginia Beach police to reduce the number of accidents, injuries and deaths which made 1972 one of the worst years in our history.

Concentration on high accident areas is the right approach to the problem.

Hilltop, which has experienced a growth of buildings far out of proportion to the ability of its streets to accommodate the increased traffic density, needs an expansion of auto facilities, such as the widening of First Colonial road and the elimination of feeder roads on both sides of Laskin Road, east and west - for a distance of 500 feet. The confusion created by the feeder roads and the signs necessitated by the violations, but the main reason for the tickets is the reckless operation of autos by drivers who haven't adjusted their driving habits to changed conditions in the Hilltop area, as well as other highly congested areas.

Both the police and the Virginia Beach Sun are performing a valuable service to traffic safety by advertising and emphasizing the arrests of reckless drivers, who in many cases, should not have had drivers' permits in the first place.

Thank you.

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

OF DRUGS AND RIGHTS

by Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON - The Army, alarmed over the sudden rise in drug addiction among troops in Europe, has adopted stringent measures to catch drug users and pushers.

But the new measures, in turn, have alarmed civil rights lawyers who fear many innocent soldiers may be caught in the antidrug dragnet.

We have uncovered one document, for instance, which was issued last month by Gen. Anthony Daskevich in Stuttgart, Germany. He recommended that commanders develop informers and reward them for information. The general also suggested volunteer undercover patrols to be established to follow up on the informers' tips.

"Cars entering the post will be checked and searched at random....Volunteers will search buildings...stem to stern," wrote Gen. Daskevich. The general urged his unit commanders to conduct frequent shakedown inspections and to bust pushers and users to the lowest rank as soon as evidence is available.

To handle known drug users, the general recommended the removal of the suspect's pass privileges, his retirement of ranking military officers. In other instances, new jobs have been created solely to fit the needs of retiring officers.

But among the worst abusers of the law are some 70 flag officers now working in the civilian government. Some of them collect more than $50,000 a year from their combined military retirement and civilian pay.

The juiciest double-dipping deal we have come across involves retired four-star Air Force Gen. Jacob Smart, who is now an assistant administrator at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. He collects around $58,000 a year, including more than $22,000 in retirement benefits.

Other double-dippers include Lt. General Alfred Starbird, now a civilian at the Pentagon, Lt. Gen. Ben Davis, now at Transportation and Brig. Gen. Frank Elliot at Agriculture.

One general is so overpaid, he voluntarily has cut his own salary by $14,000 a year. He is Gen. Jackson Graham, now chief of the Washington area Metro Authority, who accepts less than $38,000 of his authorized $52,000 salary. With $17,000 a year in retirement benefits, Graham would become the most lucrative double-dipper in the country if he accepted his full salary.

Graham tells us that a distinction he can do without.

Behind the Scenes IS HANOI HOPEFUL? - North Vietnam's master negotiator, Le Duc Tho, has been surprisingly moderate in his private conversations in Paris. He has echoed Henry Kissinger's October statements that a cease-fire agreement is attainable and that only a few remaining problems need to be ironed out. This is opposite to the attitude he was expected to take. A secret intelligence analysis had suggested that he would be grim and uncompromising as a reflection of Hanoi's anger over the bombing. Nevertheless, the intelligence reports from Paris say Le Duc Tho has been the model of reasonableness in his private conversations with diplomats.

THE WRONG THING - It now appears that the famous underworld informer Joe Valachi never meant to say "Cosa Nostra," which means "our thing," in describing the underworld crime syndicate. We recently saw the old FBI records of Valachi's initial interrogations. What Valachi repeated throughout the questioning was the phrase "Causa Nostra," which means "our cause." The agent who questioned Valachi confirmed to us that the term "Cosa Nostra," now a popular English idiom, was the result of a typographical error.

STARS AGAINST NIXON - Liberal movie stars Warren Beatty, Jack Nicholson and Julie Christie are so outraged over President Nixon's failure to end the Vietnam War that they are considering measures to embarrass the President publicly. Jack Nicholson has told us he will troop up to Capitol Hill next month in hopes of convincing Congress to impeach the President. Nicholson insists he will follow through with the lobbying effort if a Vietnam settlement is not reached by February 20.

Annual Sports Club awards given at Jamboree banquet

The largest crowd ever attended the 21st Annual Virginia Beach Sports Club Jamboree in the Cavalier Hotel Tuesday night. Bob Devaney, head football coach of the Nebraska Cornhuskers, was head speaker, and former Baltimore Colt Alex Hawkins served as master of ceremonies.

As the evening unfolded, the Sports Club presented their awards to 1972's outstanding athletes, scholastic and collegiate, and to outstanding sportsmen in the City.

Brooks Williams was named Virginia Beach's Outstanding High School Football Player. Brooks has played three years of varsity football for Cox High School, playing both offensive and defensive positions. In 1972, he caught 30 passes, averaging 14.3 yards per catch, intercepted six passes, recovered three fumbles, kicked a field goal that won the game, converted on 15 of 16 extra-point attempts, averaged 55 yards per kick on kickoffs, and was credited with 85 unassisted tackles.

As a junior, Brooks won the City and the Eastern District tennis championships in his first year. As a member of the Falcon basketball team, he is one of the leading scorers and the leading rebounder on the team. Last season, he averaged 13.8 points and 13 rebounds per game. His rebounding prowess has given him the rebounding record at Cox.

Leo Anthony, head of Doug Brown is new president in Great Neck

Doug Brown has been elected president of the Great Neck Recreation Commission for 1973. The recently installed Brown heads a slate of new officers that will guide the Great Neck area youth through a complete sports program this year.

Elwood Alexander was elected vice-president, Mary Jane Kemick secretary, Ann Knepper treasurer, and Merritt Adams chairman. Added to the Board of Directors were Judy Zimmerly, Wayne Wood, Robert Snow, and Richard Shaffer.

CAC will hold Dil Toms Night

The Chesapeake Athletic Club will hold its Ninth Annual Dil Toms Hot Stove Dinner on Monday night, February 5th. The dinner is for club members to honor the memory of Dil Toms and to signal the beginning of the 1973 baseball season.

Harold Heischberger, chairman of the event, has invited Congressman Bill Whitehurst, Vinegar Bend Mizell, John Antonelli (new Times manager), Ray White, Bud Metheny, Bubba Staylor, Claude McCullough, Paul Becker, Dave Rosenfield, Dick Davis, Billy Scripture, Harry Postove, and Jack Veprille. Other baseball celebrities and public figures are expected to be present.

Game wardens needed in state

January 31st is the last day to apply for one of the dozen game warden positions available in the state. According to the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, applicants must complete an application (G.O. Form P-12) at the local Virginia Employment Commission office before that date in order to be considered for admission to the examination.

To be considered, applicants must be a male between the ages of 21 and 34, have no disabilities, be a United States citizen and a resident of Virginia at least five years, weigh between 150 and 220 pounds, be between 5'8" and 6'4" in stocking feet, and have 20-20 vision, a high school diploma, and a Virginia driver's license.

basketball and golf coach at Princess Anne High School, was named the Outstanding High School Coach in Virginia Beach. His Cavaliers are always a contender for the Eastern District title, and during his four years at Princess Anne, his teams have compiled a 62-16 record.

He also coached the 1972 golf team to the State championship. The coaching award to Anthony was the fifth such award given. Previous winners have been Frank Webster, Stuart Holland, Bob Hicks, and Billy Gatermuth.

Mike O'Reilly won the Dr. J. Curtis Hall Jr. Memorial Trophy Award, given annually to the high school student who excels both in sports and in the classroom. A senior at First Colonial High School, Mike ranks in the top ten per cent of his class. He was also a starter on both the defensive and offensive football units for the past two years. Besides lettering in football, Mike also lettered in baseball.

In addition to his athletic achievements, Mike is a member of the Monogram and Key Clubs and was First Colonial's representative to the Boys' State last year. He is also actively involved in church youth groups.

Mike Mansfield, an all-star linebacker on the 1972 University of North Carolina football team, was awarded the Outstanding Athlete from Tidewater Award. Mike was named to the All-ACC Team and was named the top defensive player in the televised Duke-Carolina clash.

His athletic career started at Norview High School. He was one of the area's leading quarterbacks, and he won the Virginia State Heavyweight Wrestling Championship.

Don Strock won the Outstanding Virginia College Football Player award for the second consecutive year. The Virginia Tech quarterback broke every-existing signal-calling record at Tech during his career. He won the national passing title with 207 completions per game. He made the Associated Press All-American Football Second Team and Honorable Mention on most of the others.

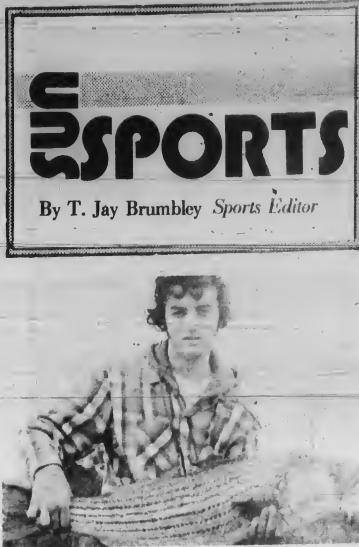

Bud Garner was named Virginia Beach Sportsman of the Year. Garner has been associated with youth recreational activities both as a coach and a manager for the past seven years. He coached the Major League baseball champions in 1969, the Farm-Bronco League champions in 1971, and the 125-pound City Recreational League football champions in 1972.

Dick Branch was named Virginia Beach Sports Club Member of the Year. A long-time club member, Dick has served on practically every committee in the organization. This year, he served as program chairman of the weekly Sports Club luncheon-meetings.

In addition to his Sports Club duties, Dick is considered one of the top Tidewater and ACC basketball officials. He serves on the Board of Directors of the Tidewater Chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, and in this capacity he has brought in many outstanding athletes to speak with local youth. Dick is also a member of the Chesapeake Athletic Club and the Virginia Beach Shrine Patrol.

The Sports Club's 1973 Jamboree was the largest in the history of the club, according to outgoing president Bob Whitley. All 400 tickets were sold in the awards banquet, and everyone in attendance seemed to enjoy the joking of Master of Ceremonies Alex Hawkins and guest speaker Bob Devaney.

Brooks Williams signs with UNC

Brooks Williams, one of Cox High School's most outstanding athletes in the history of the schools, recently signed a grant-in-aid to attend the University of North Carolina. UNC Coach Charlie Carr was on hand for the signing in the Williams' home. Williams said that he picked UNC for two main reasons. "Although I had offers from approximately twenty-five colleges, I chose Carolina because it had the two things I considered most important—a good academic program and a winning football history," Williams stated.

"Hondo," as he is called by his teammates, narrowed his choice to three colleges prior to his signing. "It was between Carolina, Virginia, and East Carolina," Williams said. "All of them have outstanding programs, and was a pretty tough choice. But Carolina made it to the Bowl game this year, and they have a consistently good team."

"I do not know exactly what position I will be playing for the Tar Heels," Williams said thoughtfully, "but I hope it will be either offensive or defensive end." Brooks Williams was the third Virginia Beach player to sign with UNC in the past few weeks. One of his teammates, tackle Bill Span, will be in a Baby Tar Heel uniform next fall, as will center Scott Davison of First Colonial.

OUTDOORS

OUTBOARD MOTORS - BIGGER AND CHEAPER

Outboard motors are getting even bigger. The 1973 Johnson and Evinrude top-of-the-line outboards are 135 horsepower, with a limited production racing version of the big Johnson available with a 150 horsepower rating.

Chrysler, which had a 150 horse outboard last year, is standing pat with the big engine, but they saw a need for and introduced midrange 25 and 30 horsepower motors. Mercury, apparently determined not to be left behind in the horsepower race, modified and rerated last year's 140 horsepower engine to 150 this year.

Believe it or not, outboard motor prices are actually lower this season, a welcome present to all those who decided to wait one more year to buy that new engine. Last year's 125 horse Evinrude hit the pocketbook for $1810. This year, the motor is rated at 135 horses, and the price is cheaper at $1797—that is 10 more horses for $13 less. Chrysler has reduced the 105 horsepower outboard from $1600 to $1440, a savings of $160. The Johnson Sea Horse 100 went for $1610 last year. This year, the price is $1597. Although the Johnson people dropped the price $13, they increased the horsepower by 15.

It looks as though the Japanese are beginning to dip their fingers into the outboard motor pot. Already, the Japanese have sliced heavily into the automobile, camera and electronic industries. Now they are feeling their way in the boating industry.

So far, the Japanese motors have been pretty limited to the West Coast, but as soon as distribution patterns have been worked out and market testing is completed, these imported motors will be available all over the country. It looks as though Honda and Yamaha have a slight lead. Honda has a 7½ horsepower motor in the country now, though pretty much limited to dealer testing for the time being. A 10 horse Yamaha is also being tested now.

CATCHING THE BIG FISH

International Game Fish Association rules state that anglers may not receive help in landing a big fish until the wire leader is at the boat. Once the wire leader comes within the grasp of the mate, anglers may allow the mate to assist in the final landing stages. If someone touches any portion of your equipment before this point, the angler may not claim a record with the IGFA.

RIPPING FOR BASS

Ripping is a method of moving lures faster than usual. The purpose is to fool the bass into striking the lure without giving him time to look it over. Without the ripping method, many times a bass has time to think about and look over stationary or slow-moving lures before striking, thus giving him time to detect a trap and keep him from biting.

A good ripping bass man casts his lure a good distance and allows it to sink to the bottom. As the lure goes slack, the rod tip is lowered upward, and the lure quickly reeling in the line. This movement of the rod causes the lure to leap from off the bottom and to rip through the water at a very fast rate. If a bass does not strike, let the lure settle back to the bottom and repeat the maneuver. By successfully mastering the art of ripping, anglers will start catching more and bigger bass.

CITATION FISHING

Anglers fishing in the 15th Annual Virginia Salt Water Fishing Tournament earned 426 citations for outstanding catches. Citations for black drum, gray trout, speckled trout, and spot reached all-time highs and accounted for half of the citations issued in the twenty-two species contest.

Black drum entries were the most plentiful. There were 910 citations issued this year, a significant sign for drum fishermen despite the new 55-pound citation weight minimum. Last year, the minimum was 50 pounds, and 832 citations were issued. Ten weighed in at 90 pounds or better, with the largest black drum being taken off Cape Charles and weighing in at 109 pounds, just eighteen ounces short of the state record.

Like the black drum, the citation minimum for gray trout was increased from four to six pounds. In spite of the increase, gray trout took second place in total citations with 725, a hundred and twenty-five more than the previous high of 600. The long-standing state record of 11 pounds and twelve ounces, set in 1941, was broken twice. Both of the record-breakers were caught at the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, and the largest upped the state record to 12 pounds and 11 ounces.

Five of the species categories were won by Beach anglers. M.B. Robertson landed an 87 pound, one ounce tuna; Ethel E. Duval caught a 29 pound king mackerel; Valerie I. Davis hauled in a 42 pound, 8 ounce striped bass; J.A. Knowles won the bluefish category with his 22 pound, 10 ounce catch; and Ed Johnson landed a six pound, five ounce sea bass.

LURE SPITTING WORKS

Spitting on your lure? Sure, why not? Tests by marine biologists have proved that hand acid, or serine, is repulsive to fish endowed with the sense of smell. This means that hand acid, which may have gotten on your lure when you removed it from your tackle box and tied it on your line, may make you a stinker as far as the fish is concerned.

Women's Bowling Tourney deadline nears

The Tidewater Women's Bowling Association is hosting the Virginia State Women's Bowling Association Tournament this year. The tourney opens the weekend of April 7th and continues each weekend through May 20th.

The reservation and entry fee deadline is January 27th. The final cutoff date for those who have no reservations is February 10th, and no more entries will be accepted after that time.

The team events will be held at the Brunswick Plaza Bowl, while doubles and singles events will be held at Indian River Bowl. Both are in Virginia Beach.

Further information, if needed, can be obtained by contacting the secretary of the Tidewater Association or tournament publicity chairman Mildred Hitt. Mrs. Hitt's number is 497-4966.

Mrs. Robert Franklin Sutherland

Alta Kay DeHart weds Robert F. Sutherland

London Bridge Baptist Church was the setting for the wedding of Miss Alta Kay DeHart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lee Kellart of Virginia Beach, and Robert Franklin Sutherland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ramsey Sutherland of Litchfield, Conn.

The double-ring ceremony took place at 3 p.m. January 13 with the Rev. Mark Stone officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a camelot wedding gown of candlelight satin. The neckline, pearled and scalloped and re-embroidered with alencon lace imported from France, formed the traditional oval neckline, sweeping to a lace-encrusted train. The mantilla was an original Spanish design, trimmed with alencon lace. She carried a bouquet of peppermint carnations, statice and variegated pittosporum.

Mrs. Perry Williams of Virginia Beach was matron of honor. She wore an emerald green velvet dress with an oval neckline and, empire waist. The headpiece was white fur. She carried a white fur muff decorated with poinsettia.

The bridesmaids were Miss Maureen Bailey of Virginia Beach, Mrs. Robert Smith of Chesapeake, Mrs. J.W. Pace of Burlington, N.C., and Mrs. Susan Ferguson of Virginia Beach.

The bridesmaids' dresses were identical to the maid of honor's. They carried white fur muffs decorated with holly.

Donald R. Sutherland served as best man. Ushers were David P. Sutherland of Boston, J.W. Pace of Burlington, N.C., Randy Thompson of Portsmouth, Louis Blom of Staten Island, N.Y., Perry Williams of Virginia Beach and Robert Q. Jones of Danville, Va.

Following a reception at the Cavalier Hotel, the couple left on a wedding trip to Williamsburg. They will reside in Burlington, N.C.

The gown of white peau de sole was overlaid with chantilly lace. The empire waistline was outlined with seed pearls and the gown was trimmed with tiny self covered buttons and bishop sleeves. Rev. F.H. Strieby

New minister appointed

Virginia Beach United Methodist Church announces the appointment of Rev. Francis H. Strieby to the new position of Minister of Visitation.

Rev. Strieby will conduct visitations to shut-in and prospective members. He is a native of West Virginia and has served as minister there and at many churches in Virginia, including the Tidewater area.

Rev. Strieby holds both undergraduate and theological degrees from Ashbury College and Ashbury Seminary in Wilmore, Kentucky. At the Virginia Beach United Methodist Church, he will be joining Rev. Bernard S. Via, Jr. and Rev. Donald H. Seely in meeting the needs of the congregation and the community.

Rev. Weinbach

John P. Weinbach, Independent Candidate for City Sheriff of Virginia Beach, has selected the steering committee for his campaign for City Sheriff. They include Dr. Martin C. Poch, C. Michael Phillips, William B. Lindsay, and Mrs. Earnest Carila.

In addition to selecting his steering committee, the Rev. Mr. Weinbach indicated he will continue to address church, civic, and other interested groups on the subject "A New Role for Jails". Commenting on the reactions of members of the community to a Lutheran clergyman seeking the office of City Sheriff, Weinbach responded, "Initially, some people are perplexed. They tend to view the sheriff as the chief law enforcement officer of a county. When they realize that a City Sheriff's main job is related to the running of our jail, they can understand how my education and experiences in dealing with people who have problems will be a real asset for that position."

The 34 year old clergyman was graduated from Concordia Senior College, Fort Wayne, Indiana in 1960, with a B.A. degree. In 1964, he earned the Master of Divinity degree at Concordia Theological Seminary, Saint Louis, Missouri. He subsequently organized a Lutheran Congregation in Lansing, Michigan. For the past five years, he has served as pastor of Prince of Peace Lutheran Church, in King's Grant area.

In addition to his congregational duties, Weinbach has served on the board of his community league, on the steering committee of J.A.I.L., and as program chairman for the newly organized Foster Parents Association of Virginia Beach. He recently completed a year of service as chaplain and counselor to the Norfolk City Jail.

Scott names new staff, salaries not divulged

By SONJA HILLGREW
San Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Retired military men, academicians, journalists and a Chamber of Commerce executive have been chosen to fill the top slots on the staff of Sen. William L. Scott.

In releasing the make-up of the staff, a Scott aide would not divulge salaries of the top seven staff members. A similar policy is followed by other members of the Virginia congressional delegation.

"You can check it out through the Senate," the aide said, referring to a semi-annual report to be published next July.

Scott has named Donald J. Musch, 40, to be his administrative assistant. For the last three years, Musch has overseen administration of Chambers of Commerce in 31 countries.

Musch, who received his law degree at the University of

Thomson named vice president

E. Montgomey Thomson, 28, has accepted the position of vice president of Fairfield National Bank in Highland Springs, Va. He was formerly the assistant vice president and branch manager of People's Bank of Virginia Beach.

Thomson attended Louisburg College in Louisburg, N.C., and Old Dominion University of Norfolk. He is married to the former Carol White of Virginia Beach and they have two children.

North Carolina, was formerly a management consultant for a Chicago firm and an FBI special agent.

Jack C. Davis, Scott's administrative assistant during his last 20 months in the House of Representatives, is one of three legislative-research assistants on the Senate staff.

Davis, 63, a retired naval captain, was director of naval research before he went to work for Scott. He received a law degree from Indiana University.

Dr. Donald J. Senese, 30, has left a job as associate professor of history at Radford College, Radford, to become a legislative-research assistant on the staff.

Senese has worked in statewide Republican campaigns, including Scott's, and has been active in Young Republicans.

He received a doctorate in history from the University of South Carolina.

Stanley A. Cook, 34, is a third legislative-research assistant hired by Scott. Cook is a Ph.D. candidate in political science and a former instructor at the University of Tennessee.

One of two special assistants for media is Richard A. "Tony" Naegle, 28. A 1971 journalism graduate of George Washington University in Washington, D.C., Naegle was press secretary for retiring Sen. Len B. Jordan, R-Idaho.

James E. Roberts, 28, also was named a special assistant for media. He handled press relations during Scott's senatorial campaign. He formerly handled public relations for the American Petroleum Institute and press relations for two former congressmen.

Roberts received a master's degree from the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

Ralph A. Bass, 50, was named special assistant in charge of Scott's district office in Richmond. A recently-retired Air Force colonel, Bass last worked for the Air Force Systems Command. His tours of duty have included Korea, Panama, Hawaii and South Vietnam.

Scott's staff of 17 also includes secretaries and caseworkers, most of whom worked on Scott's House staff.

Although Scott's aide would not release salaries for the new staff members, the records of the Clerk of the House show that Davis was paid $22,875 as administrative assistant in fiscal 1972. Another top assistant who is not joining the Senate staff was paid $22,708.

Summer vacation may be delayed

Virginia Beach school children who enjoyed an unexpected four-day vacation last week will have to make up those days, probably at the end of the school year.

Elementary school students who expect the school term to end June 7 and secondary students who would be out of school June 8 may find their summer vacations delayed four days, according to a spokesman in the office of School Superintendent E.E. Brickett.

"A 'wait and see' attitude has been assumed by the school administration. A decision on exactly when the four days will be made up should come from Brickett's office at the end of the month.

The decision also depends on how many additional school days may be lost due to bad weather. Last week's snow caused all Virginia Beach public schools to close Monday through Thursday.

The schools incurred no additional costs during those four days, according to John Holgate, assistant for public information for the city's school system.

All teachers are on 180-day contracts and all students must attend school for 180 days. The federal and state governments supply funds to the schools based on that 180-day period. If the four days are made up, the schools will not lose any funds.

"I'm sure we will definitely make up those four days somewhere," Holgate said.

"Why would we throw that money away? They only have to go to school four more days to get the money."

Holgate also said that if the four days are not added to the end of the school term, they may be made up elsewhere.

Spring vacations at Eastern could be cut down or in-service days (when teachers are at school) may be eliminated.

Holgate said that the schools would not try to make up the days by requiring students to attend school on official holidays.

Turk assumes command

Captain Herman L. Turk relieved Commander Richard A. Zick as Commander Medium Attack Wing One in a brief ceremony aboard Oceana Naval Air Station.

Captain Turk had previously served as Air Wing Training Officer, Commander Naval Air Force, U.S. Atlantic Fleet Staff. He has also served tours in the Oceana community as Commanding Officer, Attack Squadron 35 and Commander Attack Carrier Air Wing One, Captain Turk and his wife and three children currently reside in Virginia Beach.

Commander Zick will remain Commanding Officer of Attack Squadron 42, a position he previously held concurrently with that of Commander Medium Attack Wing One, Commander Zick served as Air Operations Officer aboard the USS INDEPENDENCE before reporting to his present command in August of last year.

Captain Turk's assumption of command makes him the first full-time Medium Attack Wing Commander. Medium Attack Wing One was established on October 1, 1971 and has previously been commanded by the Commanding Officer of Attack Squadron 42. The upgrading of the Medium Attack Wing Commander to the rank of Captain brings the Wing into conformity with other functional Wings in the Atlantic Fleet. The Wing was created by Commander Naval Air Force, U.S. Atlantic Fleet to exercise management control over the seven Atlantic Fleet Navy Air Intruder squadrons.

By LES LEHIGH

"We're going to have our problems, but we're all looking forward to it." Peter Legler made this comment as he, and his assistants, assumed duties this week as Virginia Beach's first public defender.

Legler, who formerly served in the City Attorney's office, opened his office in the Princess Anne Courthouse complex Monday. Before the day was over he already had two clients.

all we'll be handling.

"One thing we don't want to do," Legler added, "is turn away someone who needs an attorney and will be forced to plead guilty if he can't afford one, yet we don't want to compete with the local bar association and represent those who in fact can afford their own attorney."

Although the program is just getting underway, Legler is quick to admit he is facing various problems. "He illustrated this by saying, 'The police do a very complete job and they have a lot to bring against any defense. Unfortunately we're going to get some defendants who have already confessed to an act, and it will make our job more difficult. While we're being placed on the other side of the fence we hopefully will get enough cooperation from the police to prepare an adequate defense.'"

The project will continue for two years as a pilot program, at which time the decision will be made on whether to continue, expand or discontinue the program.

While Legler admits the program will be fairly expensive initially, due to the costs of establishing a staff and outfitting office space, he is certain it will be less expensive than the previous program.

The Virginia Council on Criminal Justice (CCJ) has just approved a grant of $37,500 to cover the first six months cost of the program in Virginia Beach.

"One of the big advantages of the program," Legler points out, "is having a group of the same attorneys handling court appointed cases. We're going to become experts in criminal cases. We all have some experience now, but we'll develop expertise in criminal cases because that's what we'll be handling."

Legler will be assisted by three attorneys formerly in private practice: Bernard G. Barrow, Frederick Lewis, and Donald E. Lee, Jr. William Campbell will assist as criminal investigator, and Barbara Hill serves as "Girl Friday," handling various office duties.

In summarizing his feelings about the future Legler said, "I think it's going to be a very rewarding experience as far as personal satisfaction, working with people who are not in a position to help themselves."

Candy the Clown to teach course

Don Meeker, known professionally as Candy the Clown, will teach a 10-week course in clowning at Old Dominion University, starting January 27.

The non-credit course in ODU's Rainbow Courses program meets every Saturday, from 9 a.m. to noon, and costs $45.

The course will include lessons in makeup, dramatics, costume, how to be a Santa Claus, and all aspects of professional clowning.

Interested persons may register by calling the ODU Rainbow Courses program at 469-8000, extension 272, or by attending the first class in the ODU Educational Building, room 237.

Travel program started

An extensive travel promotion program for Virginia Beach has been announced by the travel and tourism committee of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, according to Mrs. George Leary, who heads the promotion committee.

Four major travel events have been included in the Chamber program. These include the Cleveland Home and Flower Show, March 3-11; the Philadelphia Spring Flower Shows March 11-18; the Virginia Travel Vacation Show, Tyson's Corner, Va., April 30-May 5; and the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, Aug. 15-Sept. 3.

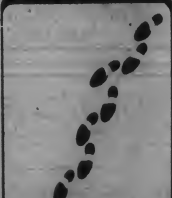

In addition to the four travel shows the program also includes promotional efforts in New York City and the New England states in early April.

"We may participate in travel shows in Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio," Mrs. Leary stated. "We also plan visits by AAA counselors to Virginia Beach throughout the year."

Mrs. Leary added:

The travel and tourism stepped up program of folder distribution with many interstate highways included this year. The Chamber of Commerce distributed more than one million brochures last year.

VIRGINIA BEACH. Where The Living Is Lovely

Historic Lighthouse

VIRGINIA BEACH. At the point where the Chesapeake Bay reaches out for the blue Atlantic, an eight-sided tower of weatherbeaten sandstone rises above a 30-foot sand dune and beckons the visitor to step up for a view of history.

The Cape Henry Lighthouse was built by directive from the First Congress of the United States of America.

Authorized in 1790, and erected in 1791, it is only four years younger than the U.S. Constitution.

The visitor to Virginia Beach can drive into the Fort Story Army Base, park his car at the foot of the dune, walk up the steps to the base of the lighthouse, then climb the metal staircase to the very top of the 72-foot tower.

He will emerge from the spiraling staircase into the glass bubble that once housed the oil lamps that guided vessels safely past Cape Henry and into the Chesapeake Bay. Below, on all sides, will stretch a panorama of bay and ocean, beach and wilderness, history and fun.

The eye looks down to the Cape Henry Cross, marking the spot where the original Jamestown settlers erected a wooden cross when they first set foot in "The New World."

Sweeping eastward, the view takes in the Fort Story installation part of the Army Transposition Training Command; the rounded corner of Cape Henry, where the bay and the ocean meet, and in the distance, the hotels lining the warm, sandy beaches of Virginia Beach.

Within easy range of the visitor's eyes, events transpired which changed the course of history.

Into these very waters Captain John Smith's ships sailed to plant the English language and culture permanently in the New World.

Follow the course of Captain Smith westward and you will see a break in the shoreline - Lynnhaven Inlet - through which pirate ships once sailed to find shelter and cover in the inland bays beyond.

Just beyond this, the sun sparkles on a jewel-like strand of metal-the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel - which carries traffic over and under 17 miles of bay.

Across almost this precise line, the French fleet under Comte de Grasse lined up in battle formation in 1781, bottling up the mouth of Chesapeake Bay and sealing off any possible aid for the embattled British army under Lord Cornwallis. This enabled the allied army under George Washington to defeat the British at Yorktown and win the independence of the 13 American colonies.

The line of sandy bayside beaches stretches still farther westward to Little Creek, the headquarters site for the Atlantic Fleet Amphibious Force, and beyond that to the world's largest naval base at Norfolk on the shores of Hampton Roads. It was in these waters that the epic battle took place between the Merrimack and the Monitor, the ironclads of the American Civil War.

Looking inshore from the lighthouse, the eye is greeted with the refreshing green of Seashore State Park, where pinetopped sand dunes overlook the black waters of a cypress swamp. The park offers beach swimming, camping, horseback riding and nature trails and is the site of a small interpretive nature museum.

The lighthouse itself is a historical site of no small consequence.

As the Virginia colony grew and prospered, seaborne commerce flooded past the portals of the bay and on into the port of Norfolk or to the plantations that lined the James River and other tributaries of the bay.

To guide them past the cape, a signal light was established at Cape Henry. This consisted of a bonfire of pine knots lighted atop Blackbeard's Hill to the rear of the old lighthouse.

In time, however pirates began to land, kill or capture the beaconkeepers, put out the fire and build another one at a spot designed to lure ships onto the sandy shoals where their wreckage could be plundered.

Both the Virginia and Maryland Colonial legislatures took steps to erect a permanent lighthouse at Cape Henry and there is some reason to believe that a structure of some sort was built there prior to the Revolution.

In 1789, the Virginia Legislative General Assembly conveyed to the United States government two acres of land at Cape Henry for the erection of the lighthouse. Under an act of Congress approved March 26, 1790, the old gray tower was erected in 1791. The sandstone later was strengthened by a brick lining.

In 1861, the light was removed and a lightship was moored between Cape Henry and Cape Charles. The old lighthouse eventually was replaced by a newer structure, which still stands nearby.

Estes Realty

Featured Realtor By Diane Meads

Ray Estes, President and General Manager of Estes Realty Corporation, opened their office on September 1st, 1971, with a staff of three. Since that time not only has the staff grown, but even office space has greatly expanded and, of course, sales and service have increased. There are now a total of ten licensed agents, two of which will be GRI (Graduates Realtor's Institute) by April. And fifteen additional staff members are planned by July of this year.

This steady growth only proves to emphasize the success of Mr. Estes' philosophy...that "Each salesman is 'Your Real Estate Man' and will give personalized service to each individual, whether it be buying, selling, renting, or building the 'ideal home'."

Education and versatility are greatly stressed at Estes Realty. The staff includes 6 retired military men, 2 military wives, a 21-year-old college girl, a custom builder, and they are constantly learning through Real Estate Courses, Seminars, and Distributive Education Classes. As to the growth and future of Virginia Beach, Mr. Estes feels by 1985 Virginia Beach will be a most important part of the Eastern Seaboard Megalopolis. With planned growth to the southeast of the city, and a solution to the area water problems, Virginia Beach's future as one of the largest and most progressive cities will be secure.

Ray Estes chose Virginia Beach for his home upon retiring from the Navy in Jan. 1970 after 26 years of service. He had a most successful sales record for 4 years with Henry-Hanson-Tucker Realty of Virginia Beach. He is a member of Thalia Lynn Baptist Church, Lake Smith Terrace Civic League, a member of the Education Committee of the Virginia Association Realtors, a non-resident member of the Norfolk Board of Realtors, Chairman of the Education Committee of the Virginia Beach Board of Realtors, (for 1972-73), and a member of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The firm affiliations include the Virginia Beach Board of Realtors, Realtors, M.L.S. of Tidewater, non-resident membership in the Norfolk Board of Realtors, and the National Federation of Independent Businesses. Top Salesman for 1972 was D.A. "Jim" Meyer. Estes Realty specializes in residential sales and rentals. And their successful attitude is most expressed in two of Ray Estes' favorite sayings... "Success is a journey, not a destination."

Funds big boost for Va. Tech

By HELEN CRIST

They were all there, the 11 School Board members at Tuesday's meeting. John Pentress, Circuit Court Clerk, administered the oath to new member, Dr. John A. Mapp, and to reappointed members Ralph Frost and Robert DeFord, Jr., chairman. Sworn in previously was Edward Caton, newly appointed.

The Board unanimously voted Henry O. Pezzella, a real estate investor its vice chairman.

Missing outside in the hall was the usual cocktail. Seems that while a former meeting of was in session behind closed doors, someone removed a coat not his own, so it was felt prudent to avoid temptation as a result.

School Supt. E.E. Brickell gave a rundown on school enrollment.

"We've had a tremendous wave of illness lately, and the attendance is down, so we really don't know how it will affect our federal funds."

He said that work is progressing toward implementing the Standard of Quality guidelines for schools set down by the General Assembly last year. Helping the superintendent in this respect is Joseph Wiggins, administrative aide.

"We would like to issue a progress report on this invite the City Council to an open meeting." It was tentatively set for Feb. 8 at 7:30 p.m. Brickell said that all parents of children involved in the 45-15 pilot program set for June 18, 1973, have been sent an information packet, listing the streets assigned to individual attendance cycles and an announcement of a pre-registration program for the coming school year.

Schools on the year-round program are Holland Elementary, Plaza Elementary, Windsor Oaks Elementary and Windsor Woods Elementary.

Dr. Mapp noted a newspaper account in which concern over possible late school opening, because of lost days, was discussed.

Brickell replied that "we're not really in such bad shape. We still have seven more days we can lose and open on time."

It was after reading and accepting a financial report that waves were felt at the meeting. School Board member Edward Caton, seeking information as a new member asked, "Suppose we wanted to question an item in this report, what would be the procedure?"

His question was answered to his satisfaction by Brickell and H.S. Abernathy, Assistant Supt., Business Affairs.

Brickell reported that City Council Monday voted to allow the School Board to receive and spend additional funds for state projects at Vocational-Technical Educational Center.

A total of $200,182.16 breaks down: Trade and Industry, $110,000, state share; $43,000, local share; Business Education, $28,988.81, state share; $11,273.43, local share; Home Economics, $4,378.18, state share; $1,702.63, local share; Horticulture, $604.16, state share; $234.95, local share.

"This means we'll be able to open up our printing and power mechanics shops," Brickell said.

In other business R.R. Marquis, Inc. was high bidder of $2,194.00 on Independence Junior High School. Wilson Kemp was named as a replacement on the Special Education Advisory Committee.

There were several appointments approved: Charles A. Willis, assistant in personnel; Carol P. Smith, replaces Willis as principal, Plaza Elementary; Charlotte A. Roe, assistant principal, Pembroke Meadows Elementary; Burrell Kariem, assistant principal, Windsor Woods Elementary; Alvah M. Wilder, Jr., assistant principal, Joint O'View Elementary.

Whitehurst general chairman

Kickoff dinner launches Big Brothers Beach chapter

By HELEN CRIST

"There are 2,000,000 boys between 7-16 years of age in a home situation where the father is absent, and the mother heads the household. With one out of three marriages ending in divorce, believe it or not there are youngsters who have lived in a home situation where they've never seen a father."

The speaker was George Katz, director of program development Big Brothers of America. He spoke last week to some 65 civic leaders and volunteer workers at a kickoff dinner to launch a Virginia Beach chapter. Algy Cohen was dinner host at the Cavalier Beach Club.

Big Brothers is a national organization to help boys handicapped by behavior and personality problems, through the concept of a "One-man One-boy" relationship.

That the need for such an organization exists here, was determined after an intensive two-year study was conducted by a local steering committee.

Congressman G. William Whitehurst is general chairman; Rear Adm. Martin P. Hottel, (ret.) is deputy general chairman.

Katz said that when a household loses one parent, it's usually the father. This produces, most often in a boy, a kind of insecurity, a lack of confidence. "The man is still the model for the boy."

It's here, he said, that the Big Brother concept pays off.

"Ninety per cent of kids grow up without getting into trouble with the law. But it's that ten per cent that create tremendous problems."

"In Philadelphia, one-third of the budget is spent on law enforcement - dealing with crime."

It's when a young boy is at the crossroads, that a Big Brother steps in and leads him away from the temptation of drugs, or crime, for instance, toward a productive life. He may, too, introduce him to an entirely new type of life.

"The welfare situation may be the only one that a young boy knows," Katz said. "Maybe he and his family have lived in it for generations. Let's see if we can't break that cycle."

Psychiatry was thought, at one time, to be the only solution, he said.

"But it's becoming increasingly evident that a boy may only need someone to listen to him, someone to care."

The program is highly effective in various Virginia cities. Representing the Hampton Chapter at the fund-raising dinner was Walter (Bud) Porter.

"If the little town of Hampton across the pond can do it, I know that Virginia Beach can."

Porter said they told City Council what they were going to do and when council discovered their enthusiasm and determination, it backed them 100 per cent.

As for the rewards of being a Big Brother, Porter said: "Let me tell you, it really gets to you. When you take that young fellow home at the end of the day, and he looks up at you, shakes hands with you, then reaches up and gives you a kiss on the cheek, you have to turn away quickly so he doesn't see the water in your eyes, and you don't see it in his."

Congressman Whitehurst said he was made aware of the program through State Senator A. Joseph Canada, Jr. "People tell me there's a serious drug problem in this city, and I can't think of a better way to fight it than through an organization like the Big Brothers."

Adm. Hottel said that the theme for the program is "dedication". He said that he himself was fortunate to have a Big Brother when he was a youngster, and it made a vast difference in his life.

It's necessary to raise $60,000 to make Big Brothers of Virginia Beach self sufficient for three years. When it's established on a going basis, it then is eligible to become a Community Fund agency.

What can the public do to help? Volunteer to serve as a Big Brother, work as a committee member or assist in its growth through a financial contribution.

Members of the steering committee are: Howard E. Gill, Jr., Edward K. Phillips, Rev. John H. Jordan, Jr., Algy Cohen, Maurice R. Jackson, State Senator A. Joseph Canada, Jr., Alfred M. Randolph, Joel F. Carlson, Jack H. Harris and Joseph N. Koury.

Congressman G. William Whitehurst discusses the new Big Brothers Beach Chapter, at the organizational dinner, with the Rev. John H. Jordan, Jr.

Local topless action delays Bill in House

Moves on the part of City Councilman Charles W. Gardner to establish a City ordinance prohibiting various degrees of nudity in public places has resulted in delaying any action on State legislation concerning topless go-go entertainment.

Delegates B.R. "Bey" Middleton and Owen B. Pickett, at the request of City Council, introduced legislation in the current General Assembly session which could give localities the right to permit, or prohibit, topless go-go entertainment through consideration of applications for dance hall use permits.

Middleton and Pickett's House Bill would amend the definition of a dance hall, which as currently outlined in the State Code is any place open to the general public where dancing is permitted, to include public places "...where entertainment of a lewd, obscene or lustful nature is presented including specifically such as is commonly called strip-teasing, topless entertainers, and the like, or which has employees who are not clad both above and below the waist."

In discussing the proposed legislation Middleton said, "The public reaction which I've gotten has been very favorable." He added however,

Beach is represented

The City of Virginia Beach is well represented in the Virginia General Assembly by one Senator and three members of the House of Delegates.

They are playing an important part in the acts of the General Assembly as indicated by the major committees on which they serve.

Senator Joseph Canada is serving on the Courts of Justice, Local Government, and Rehabilitation and Social Services committees.

Delegate Glen B. McClanahan is on the General Laws, Agriculture, and Claims committees.

Delegates B. R. Middleton is on the Education, Roads and Internal Navigation, Appropriations, Conservation and Natural Resources, and Chesapeake and its Tributaries committees.

Delegate Owen B. Pickett is on the Finance, Health Welfare and Institutions committees.

"I'm going to withhold any action on this now pending further advice from City Council. I have seen Gardner's proposed ordinance, which to me looks like it would be a better vehicle to do the job they (Council) want."

The proposed ordinance was presented, Councilmen during last week's meeting without any action taken. The ordinance did not receive any discussion, however, during Monday's Council meeting. Instead Gardner said he was striving to obtain legislation prohibiting the sale of obscene pictures and literature to juveniles. Pointing to Wednesday's deadline for submission of proposed legislation in the Assembly, Gardner said he realized he did not have time to obtain a resolution from Council—but requested each Councilman personally speak with resort city Delegates to gain support of the proposed obscene law.

Water contract close

The silence surrounding water contract negotiations between Virginia Beach and Norfolk could be broken within the week.

The possibility results from discussions this past week between Virginia Beach City Manager Roger M. Scott and Norfolk's G. Robert House, Jr., concerning a new contract proposal offered by the resort city about five weeks ago.

While admitting there had been no change in the status of negotiations on a contract settlement, Scott was optimistic Tuesday. He said, "I talked with him (House) Monday. He said they had come to no decision yet, but we should hear from this week or the first of next week."

Navy Cross to Beach man

Former Marine Sgt. Walter F. Bailey, 25, of Virginia Beach was presented a Navy Cross for heroic actions in Vietnam Tuesday by Lt. Gen. George C. Axtell, commanding general, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic Headquarters.

The presentation was made during special ceremonies at Camp Elmora which were attended by Bailey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Pruden, his sister and three brothers.

Bailey was cited for combat actions as a member of Company E, 2nd Battalion, 5th Marines. The Navy Cross is the nation's second highest combat award.

Cox and Princess Anne win pair as mat season enters its final week

The Cox and Princess Anne mat teams won both of their dual meets last week. The dual meet wrestling season is entering its final week of tune-ups for the Eastern District, Eastern Regional, and State Wrestling Tournaments. The District Tournament opens on Friday, February 9th, at First Colonial High School. The regional and State tournaments follow on the next two weekends.

COX 33, NORVIEW 24
COX 16, GRANBY 15

Wins this week over Norview and Granby made 11-4 wins in a row for the streaking state champions from Cox. Highlighting the two meets were the seven Falcon wrestlers that kept their unbeaten records intact.

Stretching their records to 7-0 this season were Glen Felthousen (112), Chris Conk-wright (119), Mike Battalio (126), Scott Harrell (132), Mike Newbern (138, 145), and James Gaudreau (185). Timmy Davidson (98) is unbeaten, though a tie with Norview's Holmes gives Davidson a 6-0-1 mark.

Chris Yerkes began the week unbeaten, but losses to Norview's Howie and Granby's Martinez gives him a 4-2 mark. Randy Robinson made his wrestling debut at Cox Wednesday night as a heavyweight and lost despite his great strength and a week of intensive coaching.

PRINCESS ANNE 28, KEMPVILLE 15

Princess Anne made it eight wins in a row this year without a dual-match defeat by douring Beach rivals Kellam and Kempville. Ken Nowlin (98) and Tim Rogers (112) are the only two Cavalier matmen to make it this far undefeated. Nowlin kept his unbeaten record intact, though he has one draw, with wins over Kellam's Fisher and Kempville's Jackson. Nowlin's record is now 6-0-1. The loss was the first for Dana Jackson, and his record now stands at 6-1.

Rogers made it eight in a row without a setback by defeating Kellam's Trachout and Kempville's Tata. The loss was the first for Bob Tata, who now sports a 5-1 record.

Burt Spry (126) lost his first match of the year to Kellam's Payne. A win over Kempville's Martin gave Spry a 7-1 record for the year.

Jim Benjumea (138) won his third and fourth match without a loss with victories over Kellam's Atkins and Kempville's Storey. It was Mark Storey's first loss to make him a 5-1 for the season.

Bill Farmer (138) made it six wins in a row for a 7-1 record by defeating Kellam's Haynes and Kempville's Grandstaff. Danny Allen (155) split for the week, defeating Kellam's Bruso and losing to Kempville's Jordan. It was Allen's first loss, and he now has a 6-1 record.

Ed Smith (167) improved his record to 7-1 with wins over Kempville's Campbell and a forfeit win over Kellam's Richard Early (185) is now 4-2-1 by virtue of a win over Kempville's Harris and a draw with Kellam's Tim Terry. Terry was 6-0 coming into the match.

Kempville's Mark Rimarski (unlimited) upped his record to 6-1 by defeating David Jones. Rimarski's only loss of the year was at the hands of Isom Young of Kellam.

NORVIEW 37, KELLAM 14

Two Kellam wrestlers are still undefeated. Jay Payne (126) has won eight straight, and Tim Terry (185) has won six matches and drew one. Payne defeated Princess Anne's Spry and Norview's Blackwell last week to push his record to 8-0.

Terry battled Princess Anne's Early to a draw to give him a 6-0-1 mark.

Carl Venner (105) split for the week, losing his second match of the year to Norview's Howie and defeating Princess Anne's Passage. Venner now has a 5-2 record.

Bill Terry (119) got back on the winning track with two wins last week to improve his record to 3-5. He defeated Norview's Williams and Princess Anne's Howell.

Ray Atkins (132) split his matches last week, beating Norview's McCarthy and losing to Princess Anne's Benjumea. Atkins now has a 5-3 record.

Gene Bunn (145) won his fourth straight match to give him a 7-1 mark for the season. He defeated Norview's Tugwell and Princess Anne's Cutchins.

MAURY 29, BAYSIDE 23

Four Bayside wrestlers continued unbeaten in their weight class, although all have been beaten in classes greater than their normal wrestling bracket. Bobby Dossett (105) is undefeated at this weight, but he is 5-2 overall.

Terry Haddox (119) and John Safarino (138) are both 6-1 overall. Both are undefeated in their class with four straight wins. Clarence Billups (155) won his sixth straight at this weight to give him a 6-1 overall dual-meet record.

Running-of-the-green

St. Patrick's Day this year will be somewhat different in Virginia Beach from those in years past. There will still be the wearing of the green and frantic calls to local pubs in search of green beer. St. Patty's Day 1973 will see the first of what should be destined to become an annual Shamrock Day event — the Rotary Shamrock Marathon.

Sponsored by the Virginia Beach Rotary Club in cooperation with the Tidewater Striders, the Shamrock Marathon will get underway at 10 a.m. on March 17th at the Norwegian Lady statue at 25th Street and Oceanfront. The Marathon course is 26 miles and 385 yards long, twenty miles of which is on hard surface roads and the balance on Seashore State Park nature trails.

Four other Shamrock Day races are scheduled. The one mile "Run for your Life" will begin at 10:30 a.m., a two mile race will begin at 10:45 a.m., and a six mile race will get started at 11:15 a.m. Each of these races start and end at the Norwegian Lady and is open to everyone who wishes to enter.

A 12 o'clock noon "Run for your Life" race is open to Rotarians only. It is also for one mile. The "Run for your Life" events are not races in the usual sense, but are events designed to encourage physical fitness for everyone. All finishers in the two events will receive attractive certificates.

Marathon runners and two mile and six mile racers will be judged in various age groups. Trophies will be awarded to the top three finishers in each age group — 22 and below, 23 through 29, 30 through 39, and 40 and over. Special prizes will be given the oldest participant who finishes his event, and reliable sources indicate that the special prizes for the "oldtimers" are not gallon jugs of Geritol.

The Marathon and other races are fully sanctioned by the Amateur Athletic Union. All participants must check in at the Dome, which will be racing headquarters, by 9 a.m. on race day. Race numbers will be issued all participants, as will a special racing tee shirt — in snappy St. Patty's green, of course.

Those wishing to pre-enter may do so by picking up registration and information forms at the Virginia Beach SUN Sports Desk, the SUN Building, 138 Rosemont Road, or at the Fireside Book Store, 3113 Pacific Avenue.

"In my humble opinion," said C.T.S. "Terry" Keep, Marathon publicity chairman, "the event will become a source of great pleasure and merriment to the citizens of Tidewater."

I agree with Terry. The events will have the serious runners, of course, those who are on high school teams and those who are members of regular racing groups. Most of these win-or-die racers will be in the younger age categories.

But the source of great pleasure and merriment will be in the older age brackets. Hardened track shoes will be dug out of old boxes in the attic and worn for the first time in many years by some of the runners. Watching these runners, buff, puff, and wheeze across the finish line should be good for a lot of laughs. But to those that place high, the pleasure will be great. Just finishing will be pleasure enough for many.

The merriment? That will follow the race when those pubs with the green froth have been found. I'll see you on Shamrock Day. If I can find those shoes.

Scott Davison named the MVP at First Colonial

First Colonial High School honored its football team last Wednesday night at the winter sports banquet. The evening was highlighted with the naming of the Most Outstanding Football Player for 1973 — Scott Davison.

Davison was the Patriots' offensive center for three years and played on the defensive line as well. He was regarded as one of the top college prospects in Virginia and was recognized annually on every football honor squad in the state. Davison made the first team SUN All-City Football Team, All-Metro, and All-State teams in both his junior and senior years. He recently accepted a full scholarship to play for the University of North Carolina Tar Heels.

Rick Lavrischeff, who has accepted a full scholarship next year at the University of South Carolina, received the Most Outstanding Offensive Back award. The Outstanding Defensive Back award went to Chris Papilias.

Tommy Stovall was named the Most Outstanding Offensive Lineman. Mike O'Reilly received the Most Outstanding Defensive Lineman award. He will be in a VPI uniform next fall. Mike was recently named the Virginia Beach Sports Club's Most Outstanding Scholar-Athlete.

Patriot head coach Frank Webster also announced that Al Humes recently received a scholarship at Norfolk State College. Al played both offensive and defensive guard.

Aragona-Pembroke Sign-ups Wed.

The Aragona-Pembroke Little League will hold registration on Wednesday, January 31st, at Bayside High School from 7 to 10 p.m. Boys between eight and fifteen years of age are eligible, and birth certificates are required for proof of age.

Clyde McCullough, a former Yankee catcher and manager of the Tidewater Tides, will be guest speaker at the registration meeting.

PRINCESS ANNE 72, KEMPVILLE 60

Kempville looked like the best team on the court in the first quarter Friday night, running up a 22-12 advantage. Kempville out-hustled, out-shot, and out-defended the favored visiting Cavaliers in the first quarter. Princess Anne put its act together in the second quarter to tie the game at 35-35 by intermission.

Princess Anne then outscored Kempville 19-12 in the third quarter and 18-13 in the last to win the game by an eight-point margin, 72-60. Britt Glisson and Jimmy Roberts paced Kempville scorers. Glisson had 22 points for the game, and Roberts was just one point behind with 21.

Princess Anne also had two players finishing in double figures. Mike Ange led all scorers in the game with 29 tallies, and George Furdin finished with 17.

HYNSIDE 65, COX 41

In probably the most exciting game of the night, Bayside snatched what had looked like a Cox victory from the Falcons' grasp in the final seconds. A Vernon Hyman jumper from a "dozen feet out won the game for Bayside, 65-44, in the end, but aggressive defensive play by the Marliners pulled the game close enough for Hyman's shot to win.

Cox jumped to a 12-0 lead before Bayside could score its first point. At one point, Cox led 19-4, and the first period ended with the Falcons in front 21-12. Bayside aggressiveness in the second quarter led to a 25-15 Marliners scoring edge and a 37-36 halftime lead.

The Marliners outscored Cox 12-8 in the third period to pad their lead to a five point advantage after three periods of play. A determined Falcon team pushed ahead in the final quarter to lead Bayside by as many as six points, but Bayside's defensive play forced Cox turnovers in the closing two minutes to close the gap. Hyman's shot in the closing seconds gave Bayside the win.

Bayside placed two players in the double-figure scoring column. Jim Goffigan was the game's top point-man with 26 tallies. Elton Gross earned runner-up scoring honors for Bayside with 14 points.

Four Cox starters wound up in double figures. Randy Robinson led Falcon scorers with 17 points. Brooks Williams finished the game with 16 tallies, and Dave Swingle and Billy Ittner had 12 points each.

WASHINGTON 88, FIRST COLONIAL 41

It is almost hard to believe with all the fire-power on the First Colonial squad that they could be held to just 41 points. Booker T. Washington held the Patriots to just 41 tallies Friday night while dumping in 88 themselves to win a game that was never in contention.

The Bookers jumped to a 25-8 first quarter advantage. The Patriots turned in a fine second quarter effort, barely being outscored by Washington 20-19. Washington came back to the floor after intermission and really poured it on, outscoring the Patriots 18-2 in the third period and 25-12 in the fourth. Steve Butts was the only Patriot to hit double figures. Butts had 18 points for the night. Normally high-scoring Speedy Gainer was held to just four points.

NORVIEW 67, KEMPVILLE 55

In a game that was close until the final quarter, Norview outpointed the Kempville Chiefs last Wednesday night 67-55 in an Eastern District clash. The two teams battled to a 19-19 deadlock after the first period of play, but the Pilots of Norview pulled ahead 37-31 at the half.

A determined Kempville effort closed the gap to just one point at the end of three periods of play. Entering the final quarter with a 44-45 lead, the Pilots turned on the steam and outscored Kempville 21-10 to win the game.

NORVIEW 72, KELLAM 49

On Friday night, Norview moved down its second Beach school in a week when they defeated Kellam 72-49. Norview outscored the Knights in every period.

The Pilots took a 17-10 at the end of the first quarter and stretched it to 36-24 at the half. The Pilots only managed a slim 13-11 third quarter advantage but put the game out of reach in the final period by outscoring Kellam 23-14.

MAURY 92, BAYSIDE 75

Maury jumped to a 22-14 first quarter lead and never trailed through the rest of the game. Commodore Willie Young set a new school record with his 42 point effort against a usually defensively minded Bayside team.

Three Marliners hit double figures, led by Elton Gross's 25 tallies. Vernon Hyman dumped in 20 points, and Jim Goffigan added 14.

OSCAR SMITH 75, KELLAM 71

Kellam made a valiant come-from-behind effort in the final quarter, outscoring the Smithies 29-18, to send the game into overtime. Oscar Smith scored eight points to Kellam's four in overtime to win the game 75-71.

Oscar Smith led throughout the game, but the never-say-die Knights almost won it with their last period effort. Sonny Blackmon and Doug Benham led Kellam scorers with 15 tallies each. Jim Perkins added 12 points and Steve Strausbaugh 11 to round out double-figure scorers for the Knights.

PRINCESS ANNE 60, GREAT BRIDGE 41

Princess Anne set the tone of the game in the first quarter, outscoring the Wildcats 12-6. The Cavaliers outpointed Great Bridge in every quarter to win a relatively easy match 60-41.

Mike Ange led all scorers for the game with 25 points. John Paden won runner-up scoring honors with 10 tallies.

Rowlers do wear many faces. Happy after a strike. Disgusted after failing to pick-up a spare. Puzzlement over missing what looked like a sure thing. Seriousness when checking the scores. Eagerness when learning new techniques. Young howlers practice after school in order to be ready for Saturday morning competition. The Saturday Morning Bantams, Juniors, and Seniors range in age from eight through twenty-one. The leagues are fully sanctioned by the American Junior Bowling Congress, and howlers earn patches for outstanding games. The SUN Sports Department visited Brunswick Plaza Lanes last Thursday afternoon and Saturday morning to catch these young bowling enthusiasts in learning and in competitive situations. The faces say it all. Bowling is fun.

City Council did not shut off local pari-mutuel option

To the Editor:

By its refusal to approve a resolution favoring local option pari-mutuel wagering on horse racing, the Virginia Beach City Council stands accused of shutting off the right of people to decide this issue for themselves. This could not be further from the truth.

The only way the people can be denied the opportunity to vote on this issue is for the General Assembly to fail to pass the necessary legislation. In defeating the resolution last Monday, the majority of the Council felt that the issue of pari-mutuel wagering was one between the General Assembly and the people and to take a position on the matter at that time was neither necessary nor appropriate, especially since the specific provisions of the legislation were still unknown. In addition, there was no clear mandate from the people to take any position at all.

A brief review of events leading up to Council's action last Monday is in order and hopefully will reduce the confusion that exists in the minds of many.

1. The proposal for revising the Virginia Constitution presented to the voters on November 3, 1970 read as follows: "Shall the Constitution be amended by repealing Section 10 (which prohibits lotteries), leaving it to the General Assembly to decide whether to authorize or prohibit lotteries?" Nine of the present members of the Virginia Beach City Council were serving at that time and worked actively for the approval of this proposal.

2. Subsequent to voter approval of the constitutional revision, the General Assembly authorized the appointment of the Pari-Mutuel Betting Study Commission. This commission held public hearings across the state including one at the Lake Wright Motel. This hearing attracted a fair number of people and I was among those in attendance. The statements made at that hearing certainly did not lead Council to a definite conclusion as to how a majority of the public felt on this matter.

3. Last year, Delegate McManan suggested to the Virginia Beach City Council that it attempt to obtain public opinion on pari-mutuel wagering by holding an advisory referendum coincident with the November General Election. The Attorney General advised that we had no such authority so this opportunity to sample the public mood was lost.

4. Prior to the opening of the current session of the General Assembly, a public hearing was held in City Hall by our local delegation to the assembly for the purpose of receiving recommendations for legislative changes. At that hearing Councilman Rhodes spoke in favor of the proposed legislation legalizing pari-mutuel wagering. Senator Canada responded by asking Mr. Rhodes if City Council would go on record favoring this legislation. Mr. Rhodes then stated that he would sponsor such a resolution at the next meeting of Council. This resolution was presented to Council the following meeting and deferred for one week. During that period of approximately two weeks the proposed resolution was adequately covered by news articles and by publication of the Council agenda. In spite of this publicity only one person appeared to express his views on the issue last Monday.

It is obvious from the foregoing that the Virginia Beach City Council has not denied anyone the right to either speak or vote on this issue. The important point is that no wagering bill stands a chance of being reported out of committee unless it contains a local option provision.

I am sure that every member of Council will stand firm on protecting the citizens right to vote on this issue whenever the General Assembly decides to give us the opportunity.

To those who wish to express their views I would suggest writing your Senator and Delegates or appear personally at the public hearings in Richmond. This is truly a matter to be decided by the people. It is important to know the subject well and equally important to express your views.

Yours truly,
Reid Ervin
Vice Mayor

SENATOR CANADA REPORTS

The Supplemental Appropriations Information Report was distributed this week and under the proposed Supplemental Appropriations Bill I am happy to say that Virginia Beach, by putting up $590,000 will gain over $3 million for public schools. This is an estimate based on information available to the Task Force on financing the standards of quality for Virginia public schools. We were not assured this measure will go through but it certainly would help our city.

We had a public hearing this week on Senate Bill 367, a wire-tapping bill. This bill would allow the use of wire-tapping in a limited and specific number of situations involving extortion, bribery and drug offenses. Chief Claude Stair, Lt. Louis Hirst of the Narcotics Squad of Norfolk and others testified that this type of legislation is vitally needed as a tool against organized crime. I supported this measure and feel it will probably pass. The utilization of electronic surveillance throughout the United States is well known and in many instances it is the ultimate weapon which has resulted in the conviction of individuals involved in drug traffic and other major crimes. The bill we passed is more restrictive than the federal statute and has adequate safeguards to protect the rights of citizens in our Commonwealth from invasion of privacy.

NO-FAULT FAVORED

There was a public hearing on No-fault insurance this week and it seems from the reaction of the General Assembly we will have a no-fault bill this year.

One of the major topics which the General Assembly discussed this week was the Voting Rights Act. I co-sponsored a joint resolution which directs the Attorney General to initiate steps to help remove Virginia from the restrictive provisions of the Federal Voting Rights Act of 1965. Virginia has felt the weight of federal court intervention in such matters as election, city council elections, and legislative reapportionment by being included in the Federal Voting Rights Act. It is hoped that by this legislation Virginia will be excluded from the restrictive provisions covered under the 1965 act.

CITIZENS SHOULD VOTE

The Pari-mutuel Betting Bill was offered this week in the General Assembly and I hope very much that the citizens of Virginia Beach will express to me and other members of the Legislature what their views are on this bill. I think this is a matter of such great magnitude that the citizens of Virginia Beach should have a right to vote for or against this legislation.

We passed a bill this week in the Senate which allows loans to students to attend private colleges. This bill makes sense to me because many of our private colleges are having tremendous financial difficulties and are running a deficit. At the same time state supported institutions are over-crowded and there are many more students that apply than can be accepted. We subsidize every student every year and the state of Virginia is a major contributor to the cost of education as economically feasible as possible. By allowing loans to students in private institutions, we can keep those institutions full and perhaps cut down on the volume of students that will be applying to our state-supported institutions. I think this bill makes sense and I hope, I am confident, that it will pass the General Assembly this year. A similar bill which was passed last year passed by the Supreme Court declared that it was unconstitutional. This year we have attempted to remove the unconstitutional language so that it can stand a court test. The bill would allow a student to repay the loan as follows:

- (1) Work as a school teacher or in state or local government for the same number of years as the loan was granted.
- (2) Work for a charitable organization for the same number of years.
- (3) Live in Virginia and be gainfully employed for the equivalent of one and one-half years for each loan year.
- (4) Serve in an active military unit for one year for each year of the loan.

BETTER PENAL SYSTEM

The Virginia State Crime Commission presented Governor Holton's report describing the state's correctional system as being deficient in virtually every area of the correctional system: educational, rehabilitation, counseling, morale, physical facilities, medical services, and quality and quantity of correctional officers. The Commission felt that the $2.1 million request by the Division of Correction for upgrading training, correctional manpower and establishing new positions should be approved by this session of the General Assembly. The Commission also went along with Governor Holton's suggestion to phase out the Richmond prison and his request of $6.4 million for building a new 400-man maximum security prison in Mecklenburg County. One other thing the Commission recommended was that all correctional officers employed by the state, counties, cities and towns should be required to meet minimum standards.

Please let me hear your views on any matters which are facing the General Assembly. My address is State Capitol, Richmond, Virginia.

BIG MORAL ISSUE

Delegate Owen Pickett reports "In just about every session the General Assembly seems to have at least one big moral issue. Several years ago it was liquor, by the drink. Last year it was the abortion law. This year it is gambling bingo, pari-mutuel betting and even the Sunday Blue Laws are moral issues.

"The outcome of it all is very uncertain. Especially pari-mutuel betting which is in for the first time. Bingo was rejected last time but it looks favorable this year.

"The Blue Laws will probably be strengthened. If I read the sentiment correctly among the legislators, no one seems to want to permit Sunday Sales."

ISSUES TO VOTERS

Among bills introduced last week by Delegate Glenn B. McClanan was a proposed law which will permit issues to be submitted to the people by way of advisory referendum questions which could be placed on the ballot of any regular November election. Council could pass a resolution calling for an issue to be submitted at the next election or at least 10 percent of the people voting in the last presidential election would have the automatic right to petition to have an issue put on the ballot. This would provide officials with the thinking of the general public without the outcome being binding on them.

Another change in the law introduced by Delegate McClanan involved public utilities. Under his proposal, at the customer's request the company would have to leave a notice at the customer's premises showing when their meter was read and what the reading was. The customer would then be able to compare this notice with what the meter says and with what is shown on his next bill received several weeks later. At the request of Del. McClanan, this is already being initiated jointly by a limited number of utilities with VEPAC; the proposed law would apply to all utilities. The bill also provides the right to Active information from the company on how to read a utility meter.

Call City Hall

Virginia Beach has finally taken the initial step in co-ordinating the people with the city government.

By the end of next month, citizens will have access to a "Hot-line" number.

Reading down almost five columns of departments listed in the phone book under City of Virginia Beach and guessing at any one of 215 phone numbers will be eliminated.

Hopefully, the new system of answering questions and voicing complaints will bring the citizens closer to the often-times impersonal and detached workings of their city. And hopefully, city offices will be freed from the interruption of routine calls and "wrong number" calls.

The responsibility of success will now lie with the people and the city officials. Citizens must take advantage of the direct communication and officials must respond to the public input.

Woman and gift

When generations to come marvel at the natural wonder of the Great Dismal Swamp, they will know it was all made possible by the generosity of Union Camp Corporation.

What they probably won't know is that there was a Virginia Beach woman behind it all. And if a letter from an official of the Nature Conservancy, the private conservation group to which Union Camp donated its 50,000 acres, had not reached the hands of Beach residents, probably no one would have known that Mrs. Barbara Racine was the "White Knight" of Dismal Swamp.

The national official, now affiliated with the Smithsonian Institute, made known the fact that Mrs. Racine had initiated the idea and worked behind the scenes to maneuver it to completion. He said it was she, "more than any other one person", who saved this important part of America's natural heritage.

Virginia Beach is proud to have citizens like Mrs. Racine...people of dedication, who look beyond their own backyards to see the future needs of the state and the country and then set about to fill or preserve those needs.

The praise of this one person does not, however, diminish the praise and gratitude due the far-sighted officials of Union Camp. They made the final decision to donate over $12.5 million in property for eventual use as a wildlife refuge.

Much has been learned from the Dismal Swamp donation. One person can move mountains when desire is strong enough. Industry can contribute more to a community than employment and revenue.

The people of Virginia are grateful for this gift of natural beauty and historical significance.

A definite 'yes'

The question of the past two weeks didn't bring a landslide response, but it was strong enough to show a public concern over the privately owned utility companies.

There is no about, how the people feel, the vote was 7 to 1 in favor of the city utilizing part of the Federal Funds to take over these companies and provide community sewerage services.

The comments were sweet and to the point. Nearly every "yes" vote had a notation such as "definitely" or "beyond debate". And a special thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hembree, who said they are senior citizens who moved here over three years ago from the Boston area, on their kind words about the Sun. It's nice to know we're appreciated.

City Council recently voted not to send a resolution to the General Assembly asking that pari-mutuel betting, should the bill be approved, be by local option. Council said the legislators were elected to handle such matters. Senator Canada said he felt the city should show local support.

The issue is local option, not pari-mutuel betting, the idea being to let the people decide such important issues. How do the readers feel?

LETTERS to the EDITOR

Situation is intolerable

To the Editor:

The continuing saga on what to do with the monies received from Federal Revenue sharing is becoming an intolerable situation.

Our beloved City Manager, Roger M. Scott insists the money will go for roads and his water dilemma (which if there ever is a regional water system for Virginia Beach, it will probably cost us twice what we pay for water now) and of course the City Council who continue to ignore the requests of the people who have spoken out on the use or distribution of the recreation interests want a municipal pool, tennis courts and bicycle trails and unreasonable requests they're not.

There is considerable interest of all of us in Virginia and in particular Virginia Beach of rising taxes, property, water etc. and you name it, it's costing the people. Our local government is not satisfied in taking what change is left in our pockets. They insist on taking our pocket too.

Wake up City Council, City Manager, and General Assembly, the people are speaking out. You would do well to listen and act for the people you represent (the voter).

Sincerely,
J. Smith

Sewage needs city control

To the Editor:

We are in favor of City operated sewage lines.

The City has no control over operations of a private sewage company. It can not require that the company maintain lines or treat sewage properly.

The company "servicing" our area refused to clean out tree roots in their lines. ONLY after a plumber dug down to the line and showed them did the Utility snake out the line. We paid the plumber. This happened several times until we went to court and won the case. After that we still had difficulty persuading the Utility to clean out their lines. An officer of the company stated they were in the business of laying lines not maintaining them.

The State Corporation Commission did answer our letter, but it is unclear how much pressure or control it has other than setting fees.

This same company has asked us to pay an additional deposit fee after we have been paying our bill promptly for 94 years. The quarterly payment is paid in advance for the next quarter before we have received service. Why should they retain the deposit this long?

These are the main reasons we would like to see the City take over the private sewage companies.

Sincerely,
Schuyler and Nancy Elsbree

Wrestling applauded

To the Editor:

The City of Virginia Beach has been presented with a golden opportunity of providing both its citizens and visitors with a one-of-its-kind recreational facility that should thrill bicyclists, naturalists, and taxpayers alike in the new Seashore Bike Trail.

This trail will never be limited or duplicated anywhere in the world physically or economically since the State Park section of the trail is a national natural area. The unique forest, its vegetation and wildlife will now be enjoyed by a large number of its owners, Virginia citizens, but ever before possible. Naturalists should be pleased that no permanent living or new rights-of-way will be cleared since the bicyclists will be peddling over an existing park trail while enjoying the beautiful scenery indigenous to the area.

The taxpayer should be especially pleased with the bike trail due to its exceptional low cost. No land needs to be purchased since the city already owns the old railroad right-of-way parallel to Shore Drive and the State obviously owns the State Park. Thus, the only public funds necessary will be for the preparation of the old railroad bed. This would result in a 10 to 12 mile bike trail. This is to be a small fraction of what similar length bike trails now cost. Plus, this inexpensive first trail could be the beginning of a city-wide bike trail network.

Support bike trail!

To the Editor:

It is important that all concerned citizens voice their support of the proposed bike trail through Seashore State Park, urging City Council to use a portion of the funds acquired from the Federal Revenue Sharing for this much needed recreation.

This is something that has been sorely needed for a long time, especially as the threat of air pollution is becoming increasingly evident. There is something we can do about it!

It is because of its appeal to all ages that makes it such a universally enjoyed recreation. But at present it is a risk of life and limb to attempt to cycle down any of our main streets. The majority of drivers weren't ready for this relatively recent surge in cycling and are very ignorant of the cyclists' equal rights on the road as in turn the cyclists are ignorant of theirs.

Blue laws, equal rights hearings are scheduled

To the Editor:

Two public hearings have been scheduled before committees of the Virginia General Assembly which I believe will be of interest to many Virginia Beach Citizens.

(1) A joint public hearing between the General Law Committees of both the House of Delegates and the State Senate has been scheduled on all the proposed amendments to the law dealing with the operation of businesses on Sunday, (often referred to as the Blue Law) for Tuesday, January 30, 1973 at 3 P.M. at the State Capitol. One of the bills to be heard at that time will be the amendment that I introduced that would make it unlawful for an employee to be discharged because of his or her refusal to work on Sunday, if the person was employed with the implied understanding that no Sunday work would be required.

(2) A public hearing on the issue of whether or not the Virginia General Assembly should ratify the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the United States Constitution has been scheduled for Thursday, February 1, 1973 at 10 A.M. at the State Capitol. The hearing will be before the House of Delegates Committee on Privileges and Elections. The amendment would provide that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex".

I would like to invite those persons interested to attend.

Sincerely yours,
Glenn B. McClanan, Member Virginia House of Delegates from Virginia Beach

Don't jeopardize bike trail

The City Council of Virginia Beach is rarely presented with such a health recreational project for this small amount of money. Certainly, they will see the many benefits the bike trail will provide and will do whatever is necessary to insure the adequate funding of the project. In closing, let me add that it's indeed refreshing to see State Park Officials cooperating with Municipal Officials on this most worthwhile project. Hopefully, neither group will permit any flimsy details to jeopardize the early opening of this unusual trail to bicycling naturalists.

Realtor Of the year

The Virginia Beach Board of Realtors presented its highest award, Realtor of the Year, to its outgoing president, James W. Wood, Jr., at the annual installation of officers banquet Friday evening, Jan. 19th.

The Awards and Achievements Committee said Wood was selected primarily for his efforts in bringing about more cooperation between the Virginia Beach and Norfolk boards during his year as president. This cooperative spirit brought about the July merger of the two boards' multiple listing services into the largest multiple listing service in Tidewater in number of members.

Wood was the youngest board president in the Virginia Beach Board of Realtors history, and is now the youngest recipient of the Realtor of the Year award. He is a Virginia Beach native and graduate of the former Virginia Beach High School, now a junior high. He attended the Norfolk Division of the College of William and Mary, now Old Dominion University. A former Marine, Wood joined the real estate business in 1963. After working for four years for Wainwright Realty Co., he founded his own firm, J.W. Wood Co., 612 21st St., in 1966. The firm deals primarily in residential sales.

Charles Flynn

'calls himself an artist-educator'

By DONNA HENDRICK

"The arts have a humanizing quality about them. There is something about the arts that elevates one's spirit."

That is the philosophy and belief of Charles R. Flynn Jr., who, as co-ordinator of art for the city schools, is largely responsible for nurturing a love of art in children.

Flynn firmly believes that art education has a definite place in the public school curriculum. The three R's are necessary, of course, but Flynn contends that the teaching of art is just as important.

Flynn calls himself an artist-educator. He is part of the administration which runs the Virginia Beach city schools, but he is also an artist in his own right.

"I don't really say I'm just an artist," Flynn explained recently. "I work with people to help them understand art better."

"I paint and draw so I can engage in creative art. I don't paint just to exhibit. I really believe that all teachers of the arts should be either an artist-educator or an artist-critic."

"An artist-educator is engaged in some creative endeavor and also teaches something about the arts."

"An artist-critic is someone who knows a lot about what has happened in the arts. He is close to what the aesthetic act is like. He can teach art history and he studies art history and criticism."

Flynn the artist works primarily in watercolors, acrylics and oils. He draws and paints and has exhibited in galleries all around the Tidewater area and throughout Virginia.

He has a one-man show coming up in March at the Imperial Gallery. It will be on exhibit for a month.

His paintings and drawings are also prize winners. One of his most recent awards was a second in drawing at the Boardwalk Art Show this past summer.

Flynn's duties as head of the schools' art department include ordering materials and books for art teachers. He tries to use all materials himself and often stays late in his office in the Media Center (near the Courthouse) to experiment with different art materials.

Flynn was born in Norfolk County in 1931. He is married and has two sons. His wife Elizabeth is an instructional leader at Larchmont Elementary School.

After receiving his B.S. degree in art education from Virginia State College and an M.S. degree from New York University, Flynn worked as a letterer for a sign company, studio assistant at Norfolk Museum of Fine Arts and sciences, editorial cartoonist for the Norfolk Journal Guide and taught in both Norfolk and Chesapeake schools.

He left his job as assistant supervisor of art education for the State Department of Education to accept his current position with the city schools. He has been art director in Virginia Beach for two years.

He is also very involved in the local art scene and currently serves (or has served) on various boards and committees dealing with art.

As co-ordinator of art, Flynn works as a supervisor with some 40 art teachers in elementary and secondary schools.

"Many art teachers readily admit they're not prepared to teach the technical aspects of art, so we also provide workshops for our teachers," Flynn said.

"Most elementary teachers had at least six hours of art in college, but this is hardly adequate to make them art teachers."

Consequently, Flynn and his office concentrate on keeping their teachers abreast of current developments in art with in-service sessions, by providing as many materials as possible and by keeping an extensive art library available at the Media Center.

Flynn has also started what he calls a "Live" art collection for the schools. "Every year we purchase two or three original art works for the schools, which can be requisitioned to stay in a school for a period of time," he said.

The collection travels from school to school, giving the children an opportunity to view original art works. The collection is a permanent one belonging to the art department.

Flynn has also assisted the decent program sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center, which also takes original art works to schools, but is currently only for sixth graders. He expressed hope that the program will soon be expanded to include more grade levels.

Flynn is a member of the board of directors of the Arts Center and also helps the Center in finding areas for the Artmobile to exhibit its collections from the Virginia Museum.

Another program which he is working on is an artist-in-residence concept which will bring an established, recognized artist to the schools for one week. The artist will bring a collection of his or her works to show the children and discuss various aspects of the artist's life and work.

"We want somebody for this program who would be good with children, who is a recognized artist in his own right, who has a reputation of some stature and a good collection he can bring with him," Flynn explained.

"But that's going to be hard to find on what we can afford to pay him," he laughed.

Another project in the works is Youth Art Month, coming up in March. Last year, Mayor Rhodes signed a proclamation declaring Youth Art Month in Virginia Beach and the city's school children participated in a special show at Pembroke Mall.

One of the most important aspects of teaching art to children, according to Flynn, is encouraging, not stifling, their creativity.

"There can be a very great problem with a child losing his creativity," Flynn said, "because a child does not perceive things the way an adult does."

"When a child draws a tree, many people think that tree should look like an adult's view of a tree. The creativity loss comes when an adult tries to make the child see the tree the way the adult does."

"The way a child perceives his world is so different from the way an adult does. After all, art is only an illusion. You can only make an illusion of a tree; you can't really make a tree."

"And this is what we try to emphasize to our teachers," Flynn continued. "To remember that a child often loses his wonderful creativity and imagination because of adult interference."

"This is the kind of philosophy we hope to espouse in our art program," he said. "A child is not really sure of the way he sees things. This is what a good art teacher does—he helps him see his world through his own vision and also helps him extend that vision."

Virginia Wesleyan

Friendship Village playground

By DONNA HENDRICK

If the best way to learn is by doing, then the students in Winnett Hagens' Politics of Experience class at Virginia Wesleyan College are learning a tremendous amount about community relations.

The Politics of Experience is a flexible open-ended course designed by the students. This semester, Hagens' students decided to build a playground at Friendship Village in Virginia Beach.

The 40 or so students in the class are now busily engaged in "copping" supplies for the playground. It will be a unique concept spread throughout the village with six essential play areas: A merry-go-round, a jungle gym, a dome housing a room machine, a bridge, a pirate ship sand box and a fort treehouse.

The six unique playground structures will be handmade by the students out of supplies they must beg, borrow or scavenge.

The structures have been completed in scale models by the students. The next step is gathering enough supplies (lumber, old tires, cement, etc.) to actually begin construction, which will all be done by the students themselves.

"We haven't gotten a dime yet except out of our own pockets. It's better karma that way," Hagens said with a smile. "We started the designs last fall and we're now trying to get into some alternate playground designs. The kind they have around the country are nowhere. We're trying to be imaginative."

What the students lack in funds and supplies, they are definitely making up in imagination. When it is finished in May, the playground should be one of the most unique in the country.

The jungle gym will be made essentially of old telephone poles. It will contain ramps, climbing bars, a swing and slide and a storage area.

The merry-go-round will consist of tires and covered chains, and will resemble a May pole when finished.

The room machine dome will consist of a dome made of ferro cement over chicken wire covering a maze of rooms which can be constructed by the children out of movable partitions. The top of the dome will be 20 feet across and the inside will offer changeable hiding and playing areas.

The bridge consists of six sections and will be 48 feet long. There will be something for the children to do at each end.

The pirate ship sand box resembles a ship and will be filled with sand. It will contain crawl spaces and storage areas.

The fort treehouse is in the midst of being redesigned. The original design was deemed a safety hazard because of its height.

At a recent class meeting, Hagens and his students discussed plans while seated cross-legged on the floor. Even Hagens' dog attended the very informal meeting, which covered the further assembling of supplies.

A wrecking crew of students was getting ready to visit Ghent where some homes were being demolished in the Model Cities program. The students hoped to retrieve usable lumber and other materials from the homes.

The students have received valuable materials and aid from Lone Star Industries, which donated cement and sand, and the Naval Amphibious Base, which provided technical know-how and materials.

The class has also received tires from Kramer Tire Company, Paul's Sunoco, McCormick's American and the Navy.

The Norfolk Housing and Redevelopment Authority provided three houses which were to be torn down and the students are still on the lookout for other demolition areas which might provide usable materials.

So far, the students have received about $3,000 worth of materials through donations and other sources. They still need many items, however, which may be donated by calling the Virginia Wesleyan switchboard, 464-6291, and leaving a message for Hagens. Students are also soliciting funds to buy materials. Any monetary contributions should be made to the college. They are tax deductible.

Among the items needed to complete the playground are tires, standard lengths of lumber (new or used), nails and bolts, sand, polyethylene sheeting, chicken wire, 3/4 inch chain, a router, Skill saws, a portable cement mixer, ferro cement, and a half-ton pickup truck.

The students can also use all types of small tools and many other small construction materials.

The playground is being built with the support of the director of Friendship Village, the Federal Housing Authority and Virginia Wesleyan College. Students in the course will be given college credit for building the playground.

"This is a high-energy project and seems to be connecting the energies of a lot of people in a very fine way," Hagens said. "All of us are pretty excited about it."

Erosion fund increases sought

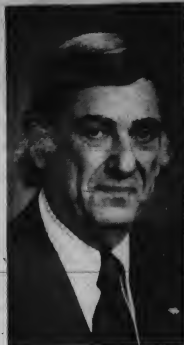

The General Assembly has been requested to increase the State's annual appropriation to the Virginia Beach Erosion Commission to $125,000. The current appropriation is $50,000. The Commission received $125,000 from the State last year, due primarily to the efforts of State Senator A. Joseph Canada, during emergency moves to correct severe erosion of the beach. Canada spearheaded an additional emergency appropriation on $75,000, to supplement the annual $50,000, for beach replenishment.

The request presented to the Assembly said, "At the present time the Commission sees no alternative to the continuation of a program of beach maintenance by continuous nourishment with sand brought from sources outside the beach zone." The Commission also pointed out, "If the beach is to be maintained it is clear that the cost of doing it will increase."

This cost increase was based, according to the Commission, on two major factors: First, "Continuing increases in cost of labor, material, equipment and supplies." Secondly, "Increasing difficulty in procuring sources of supply of sand for beach nourishment. Fundamentally this results from the using up of the supplies which are or were available in reasonable proximity to the beach and the need to go further afield in the future, this entailing increased acquisition costs and transportation costs." Citing the above cost increase factors the Commission estimated beach maintenance costs for the fiscal years 1973 through 1979 would increase annually from $407,000 to $584,000. The costs are estimated to reach a peak of $594,000 in fiscal 1977, however while the total quantity of material would show a decrease in the succeeding years annual costs would again develop an upward trend due to increasing unit costs for material.

Sylvan Gordon

Creek permit deactivated

City officials say their controversial application to dredge approximately one "million cubic yards of material from Pleasure House Creek has been withdrawn.

The City has requested the Marine Resources Commission and the State Water Control Board place the application on the inactive list. One official said, "Technically this means the application, in its present form, has been withdrawn." Officials said the move was based on the Army Corps of Engineers advising the City it "...cannot issue a permit for the proposed work as now defined." In requesting the move officials said, "Since we will not be able to perform the work as planned, a revised application will be submitted at a later date."

Last month the Corps told the City it did not have authority to grant the permit. However a Corps spokesman told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the permit had been denied. The Corps said its action was based on the Department of Interior objecting to issuance of the permit on grounds that it would not be in the best public interest.

The application resulted in a public upheaval of objections. In seeking a "use permit from the Army Corps of Engineers the City indicated plans to create a large channel between Lynnhaven Inlet and the Ocean Park area, and that the dredged material would be deposited on land owned by developer E. Wayne McLeskey. The land reportedly was planned as a site for construction of multi-family living units.

Gordon added to Cardinal staff

Cardinal Contract Furnishings, Inc. of Virginia Beach has announced the addition of Sylvan Gordon to its staff, as assistant to the president.

Cardinal Contract Furnishings, Inc. is recognized throughout the Tidewater area as a major source for contract furnishings and interior design, with installations which involve every facet of contract design, including wallcovering, carpeting, draperies, furniture, lighting and accessories.

Gordon recently resigned from Chemical Research Products Co., of which he was a founder and long-time president.

Houston opens new law office

Sam Houston has opened an office for the general practice of law on Birdneck Road, Houston was recently licensed to practice law in the Commonwealth by the Supreme Court of Virginia and is now a member of the Virginia State Bar.

Houston is an Elder of the First Presbyterian Church of Virginia Beach, a 32 degree Mason, a member of the Virginia Beach Shrine Club, the Virginia Beach Sports Club, a member of the Virginia Beach Rotary Club, a representative of the Birdneck Point Community League. Since 1967, he has been Chairman of the Planning, Zoning and Development Committee of the Council of Civic Organizations of Virginia Beach. In this latter capacity, he has represented the C.C.O. before the City

Administration of Virginia Beach, its planning Commission and City Council on many occasions.

Houston was awarded a citation by the Council of Civic Organizations for "Outstanding and Dedicated Community Services" in 1971 and is the President of the C.C.O. for 1973.

Sand source concern

The Virginia Beach Erosion Commission has renewed its concern over acquisition of additional sand sources for continued replenishment of resort strip beaches.

The concern centers on the Eureka Brick Co. site, where an estimated 300,000 cubic yards of suitable material is located, and the necessity of dredging a canal through marshland to reach the material.

The Army Corps of Engineers has informed the City it is preparing an environmental impact statement on the project, and is requesting information as to whether the City intends to acquire property adjacent to the ten acre Eureka site as an additional source of material.

In discussing the matter with the Commission Ass't. City Engineer Art Berger offered the opinion that the impact statement is intended to satisfy all Federal and State interests that the project has merits, and of the necessity to enter marshlands. He added, "We want to be assured we are cleared with all agencies before we move a dredge in to create an access to the Eureka site." Berger also indicated the City is reluctant to pursue acquisition of additional land unless assurance is given of an access to the site.

Consulting Engineer Joseph McDonald pointed out tests last month indicated approximately 44,000 cubic yards of material had accumulated in the Rudee Inlet sandtrap. He said if proper steps were not taken to remove the material the sandtrap "...will be clogged with a few months and we will then be faced with the same situation as in the past." McDonald was referring to last year when after numerous programs a commercial dredge was employed to clear the sandtrap in conjunction with beach replenishment, and reopening a passage way for boats.

The Commission announced plans to replace the eight inch dredge operating in the sandtrap with a 12 inch dredge, and operate it around the clock to speed clearance of the sandtrap.

McDonald said a recent inspection of the beach shows it is in better overall condition than a month ago, but that additional nourishment steps should be continued on the northern end of the beach.

Jaycee nominations open

Larry Waters, First Citizen Committee Chairman of the Virginia Beach Jaycees, announced that his group is now accepting nominations for the First Citizen award for 1972.

Drug sentence

Conviction of possession of hashish, marijuana, and PCP (a hog tranquilizer) has resulted in Valerie Ann Bauer receiving a five-year suspended sentence, and two one-year periods of probation.

Miss Bauer, 18, of Raintree Road pled guilty to charges in a hearing before Circuit Court Judge Robert S. Wahab, Jr. Police said the assortment of drugs was found in an Atlantic Avenue-motel room Miss Bauer was occupying during a drug investigation last September.

The selection of the First Citizen will be based on a nominee's efforts to improve Virginia Beach, male or female, with no age limit. Although primary consideration is given to the year 1972, services rendered in previous years will be considered important.

All individuals and organizations are urged to submit the nominations of their choice accompanied by supporting documents, if possible. The deadline for nominations is February 5. All nominations should be sent to Larry Waters, First Citizens' Committee, 5418 Hatteras Road, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23462.

THE BIBLE SAYS

Question:

WHAT ABOUT "FAITH HEALERS?"

Faith healers should be called FAKE healers. They may select certain psychosomatic "cures" in some cases, but they are not "men of God," nor can they miraculously heal the sick, as the apostles of Christ did in the N.T. In the Bible, real healings (miracles) were divinely performed—but those genuine miracles were NOT performed for personal gain or sold as a cheap commodity.

Those who claim to work miracles of healing today ignore the stated purpose of Bible miracles. The Bible says miracles were performed to confirm the spoken word. Before the N.T. was committed to permanent written form the apostles performed miracles to confirm the oral revelation (Heb. 2:3; A. 14:16, 20; Acts 14:3). Since the confirmation and completion of the N.T. in the first century, genuine miracles of healing have ceased.

FAKE healers today attempt to cover up their frequent failures by pleading that the disappointed subject had insufficient faith to be healed. This "dogma" will not work for the Bible miracles did not always require faith on the part of the subject. A wicked man named Elymas had no faith; but he was still blinded. Let the "workers of miracles" today miraculously blind their opponents, as Paul did here. Sincerely absent in their increasingly rare confrontations with opponents of their deceit.

A contrast between the real miraculous healing in the N.T. and the FAKERY of modern "healers" is enlightening. In the N.T. (1) ALL MANNER of disease was healed (not merely unseen, internal ailments); (2) NO failures occurred, (except where the miracle workers didn't have enough faith); (3) healing WAS NOT necessarily conditional on the faith of the one to be healed; (4) healing was instantaneous, not gradual; (5) healing was complete, not partial; (6) healing was permanent, not temporary; (7) miracles were unobscured, and above suspicion; (8) there was no advance propaganda campaign; (9) NO CONTRIBUTION was ever taken in connection with Biblical healings. Modern FAKE HEALERS strike out on every count!

Early childhood courses to be offered at ODU

As a result of widespread public interest in early childhood education, the School of Education at Old Dominion University will offer two new graduate courses in that field during the spring semester, which begins on February 6.

Both courses will be of interest to teachers, supervisors, and administrators who work with children in nursery schools, kindergartens, and the primary grades.

One course, Education 565, will deal with the dynamics of play in early childhood education and will be concerned with both theoretical and practical aspects of the role of play in the intellectual, motor, emotional, social, and aesthetic development of young children. The class will meet each Monday afternoon from 4-6:45.

The other course, Education 566, will deal with trends and issues in early childhood education and will be concerned with an analysis of current theory, research, and practices relative to the education of children in preschool through primary age group. The course entails an investigation of alternative views of curricula, materials, and grouping procedures. The class will meet each Monday evening from 7-9:45.

Both courses will be taught by Drs. Sandra and John Gaddell, who joined the ODU faculty in early childhood education in September after having taught graduate courses at Wright State University, Dayton, Ohio, during the past four years.

Plans going ahead

City moves toward Hot-line

By HELEN CRIST
A Hot-Line for Virginia Beach? Yes indeed, it's in the making, and to be in business, hopefully around the last of February.

Sam Clay, director of the city's public libraries and information, is excited about the prospect.

He spoke last week of it to the Development Council.

"It's called an Information and Service Hot-Line," (Clay said. "We see the program focusing on two areas:

responding to complaints from citizens; providing basic municipal information."

The service is designed specifically to serve the citizens who don't want to make 17 phone calls to get response to a complaint, Clay said.

"Instead of someone calling in a complaint and being told: 'I think you go here, or I think you do this', we'll be able to say: 'This is what you do.' And if we don't have the answer, we'll check with the proper department and get it."

The Line will not dispense information in certain areas: legal, medical, individual personnel matters, technical matters such as zoning, engineering and court dockets, he said.

The service has been in the planning stage for a long time. Funds are already established in the current fiscal budget. Since Clay took over the public information spot, it has received top priority.

Such a progressive program is not common in the cities.

"The very first one to use it to any extent was St. Petersburg, comparable in population to the Beach.

"After all, where do you call for information after 5 p.m.?" He said that the police department is happy that some of the burden will be taken from them.

Excited about his role in the booming resort city, Clay is especially enthusiastic about the Hot-Line.

"I just feel that it's going to go. I believe it's up to a city to be as responsive as it possibly can to individuals - to me that's what a city is all about. That's why I like the Hot-Line."

Wesleyan plans four-year growth

The members of the Board of Trustees at Virginia Wesleyan College have approved a four-year "planned growth" projection calling for a 20 percent enrollment increase, significant developments in faculty and curriculum and the addition of an estimated $3,000,000 in physical facilities.

The projected goals were adopted at a special winter meeting of the Board at the College recently.

The "planned growth" projection calls for an increase in enrollment of approximately 40 students per year over a three-year period beginning in September 1974. The current fulltime enrollment is 606 and has been at that point since September 1970, when the trustees called for a leveling of period. Under the projected increase, the fulltime enrollment would level off again in September 1976 at approximately 750.

Two major building projects are included in the "planned growth" projection. Listed as priority needs for several years, these include the completion of a second academic village and the first phase of a physical education-student activities center. No construction timetables have been set at this date.

Seven new fulltime faculty positions are being projected in the four-year plan. They include additions in sociology, education, art, economics, the humanities, the natural sciences and the social sciences. The last three are divisional faculty projections at this time but will be specifically defined during the next year.

Virginia Wesleyan now has a fulltime teaching faculty of 32. Some of the projected fulltime faculty positions are now being filled by one or more part time teaching personnel.

Virginia Wesleyan is currently involved in a comprehensive 18 month self study. Much time is being spent during the self-study on curriculum development and planning. The projection calls for a balanced liberal arts curriculum with increasing depth and breadth in the faculty and curriculum.

President Lambuth M. Clarke called the "planned growth" projection approval "a very significant step" for Virginia Wesleyan. He said: "We are pleased that the members of the Board of Trustees have voted to move forward in another important expansion program. The 'planned growth' projections will provide much needed physical facilities as well as an expanded faculty and curriculum. This step will also allow us to serve a larger number of students while still maintaining our small college atmosphere. The extraordinary progress of Virginia Wesleyan during its brief seven-year history confirms the need for a small, church-related, basically residential, liberal arts college in Tidewater."

Beach broker to teach course in real estate

Coustling has worked very closely with all the local real estate boards in real estate education.

'The Taming of the Shrew'

An alive and sparkling comedy

"The Taming of the Shrew" staged by Stan Fedyszyn at the Norfolk Theater Center is breezy, funny and as original as the one first presented in 1594.

It has been cut, adapted and staged so that it is just as fresh, unpredictable and hilarious as when the Lord Chamberlain's men first did it.

The play borrowed and cross-fertilized by Shakespeare from plots of Aristophanes and Gassiope and affected by the commedia dell'arte popular at that period becomes potent comedy for a public too long nourished on the rhetoric and starved-for-life Shakespeare. Fedyszyn gives it a shot in the arm and presents it superbly.

The spirit of the comedy with acrobatics and comic buffoon embodies the traditions of the Elizabethan theater. It is less than traditional as a purely literary classic but the excitement and audience response it engenders more than justifies liberties taken with the play.

Fedyszyn utilizes every gimmick from bobby horse, wrapped-paper sandwich, dark glasses and cartwheels to punchy the fun and humor.

The robust rough and tumble, spectacular entrances and exits and visual tomfoolery would have delighted the Elizabethans. Shakespeare wrote for the boxoffice and the masses as well as the scholars. Fedyszyn emphasizes the story so that all ages can enjoy it.

The main plot concerns rich Petruchio come from Verona to Padua to find a wife. He wooes the young, beautiful, shrewish Katherine, taming her much as an animal is tamed. The play within the play of Sly the tinker is cut. The sub-plot of the courtship of Bianca with her intrigue and romance by Lucentio emerges as another theme.

The proings and psychology of the characters and the delineations and shadings by the actors will satisfy the intelligence while the outrageous delight of a knockabout feast will satisfy the less sensitive.

The cast is supple enough to give a lyrical effect to the prose; there is no distinguished poetry in the play.

Peter Dixon is innovative in his set of Italian villa, church and bachelor villa with a startling change of windows. Sue Griffin blends colors and materials into stunning Elizabethan costumes. The sparse scenery and lavish gowns are in keeping with the traditions of that period.

Fedyszyn confirms the ferment and novelty of Shakespeare in this play and the company preserve the rhythms. There is no boredom, only an alive and sparkling comedy orchestrated to the prose of the master.

The ensemble playing of the cast is superb but shrew-like. This critic applauds the sparkle and overall ability of the ladies: Penny Alston as Katharina, Sherry Davis as Bianca, the whimsy of Judith Fisher, and Pam Manning, Stephanie Rowe, with Linda Condit as a beautiful widow.

Peter Dixon underplays the braggadocio of Petruchio, giving an intelligent and telling performance. Quint Lunge as Lucentio is dashing and charming and Tom Morgan as Baptista (looking like a Drosophila portrait of Shakespeare) is flawless. Greg Bernet as Tranio is outstanding as a comic.

The rest of the cast, Frank Klages as Gerardo, H. Hich Hite as Horatio, Tom Mox as Bionello, Bill Hawkins as Vincentio, Montague Gammon as Pedani and Mike McLane as Grumio add a fillip of distinction.

Shakespeare was meant to be enjoyed and the vivacity of this production illuminates the spoken music of the prose. It is a fine production. It will play weekends for the next three weekends. — Alice DuBois

Whitehurst reintroduces animal protection bills

By SONJA HILLGREN
Sun Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Rep. G. William Whitehurst, R-Norfolk, has reintroduced several animal protection bills, making him the sponsor of more animal bills than any other member of Congress.

Calling for public support of his bills, Whitehurst said: "All of this legislation is urgently needed. Animals cannot speak for themselves to express their misery or describe cruelties inflicted upon them."

Whitehurst is pushing hardest for a measure authorizing federal aid to help zoos and aquariums meet national standards on construction and staff training, Mrs. Whitehurst said.

Mrs. Whitehurst, who works full time without pay in her husband's Washington office, is his chief aide on animal protection matters. In fact, it was she, who calls herself "an animal nut," who urged her husband to assume a major role in the field.

Like most of the bills reintroduced last week, the top priority zoo and aquarium bill is a leftover that didn't make it out of committee during the last Congress.

Mrs. Whitehurst said she believes the House Administration Committee will report the bill favorably in the 93rd Congress. "We'll be starting earlier this time," she said.

Part of the reason the bill didn't get anywhere last year, she said, was "a group - who shall remain nameless - misinterpreted it as allowing scientific research with animals and vivisection. Nowhere is it hinted at in the bill."

Whitehurst has tried to counteract the group's letter-writing campaign against the measure by circulating copies of the bill so persons can read for themselves that the group's objections are unwarranted, Mrs. Whitehurst said.

"The zoos in this country are in favor of the bill," she said. Whitehurst's second priority in animal legislation is to get House Agricultural Committee action on a measure to increase protection of animals transported by air or bus, Mrs. Whitehurst said.

New on Whitehurst's list of animal welfare bills is a resolution calling for an agreement with Canada for an immediate moratorium on the killing of the eastern timber wolf.

Other Whitehurst bills call for studies on timber wolves, dolphins and porpoises; protection of endangered species; a moratorium on polar bear killings and a study to eliminate government use of animals for research projects.

Another bill imposes criminal penalties for interference in enforcement of the Horse Protection Act, which Whitehurst sponsored during his first term. The act outlaws soring, or disfiguring hoofs, of Tennessee Walking horses to induce a special gait that properly comes with training.

Whitehurst's other major animal legislation, the Animal Welfare Act of 1970, established federal regulations for care of animals in research, in pet

TCC enrollment increases again

Tidewater Community College at Virginia Beach is growing so rapidly that the school has reversed the traditional drop in enrollment for the winter quarter.

TCC officially registered 1,955 students for the winter quarter. The fall quarter enrollment was 1,800.

Despite the fact that the school is housed in temporary makeshift quarters at Camp Pendleton, the enrollment continues to grow in leaps and bounds.

By the time the campus is moved to its permanent site in Green Run (within two years), the enrollment may have already outgrown the new campus facilities. The Green Run site has an orderly growth projection for new buildings and a planned expansion program to accommodate the projected 5,000 students which will be enrolled by 1980.

"Our rate of growth is indicative of the need," said D. William Bridges, director of continuing education at TCC. "We started with 857 students in 1971 and we've just kept growing ever since."

Bridges also said that the college was recently named a Servicemen's Opportunity College by the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges.

Representatives of 22 different military installations in the Tidewater area met this week with college officials to set up the educational program for servicemen and women.

Essentially, the Servicemen's Opportunity College recognizes the servicemen's mobility and provides special services and programs to meet the special needs of the military student. The college plans to set up a very liberal entrance requirement plan and eliminate much of the red tape involved in transferring college credits.

Military representatives are now engaged in forming an advisory committee to help the college carry out its new military student policies.

Elks Foundation set scholarships

The Elks National Foundation will again this year award over $100,000 dollars in scholarships to needy college students and high school seniors. If you are a good student, you can apply for these awards by contacting your high school or college advisor for details.

Your local Elks Lodge can be contacted for details if you wish to become a candidate for one of these "Most Valuable Student" Scholarship Awards.

In March of 1972, two Norfolk High School Students each received $700 awards from the Virginia State Elks Association.

Closing date for these applications is January 29.
